WAR NEWS IN BRIEF:

The Independent, June 9, 1868

A PREPARING WORK OF LIEUTENANT HOBSON AND A CREW OF SEVEN MEN—SANTIAGO FORGUES SILENCED—200 SPANISH KILLED.

Lieutenant Hobson and a crew of seven men, of Admiral Sampson's fleet, on Saturday, removed the Morro into the harbor of Santiago under the last day of the money ordered it into the very jaws of death, and by employing a target ship, the vessel and blocked the channel, thus sunk the Morro in the Spanish fleet. The day was one of the most memorable events in the annals of modern warfare, and the results were so decisive that the Spanish fleet was silenced.

In the Spanish harbor, a curious scene was enacted. The Morro, under the command of a Spanish admiral, was seen to be in a state of panic. The Spanish sailors, seeing the American ships, knew that their fate was sealed. The admiral tried to escape, but was captured by the American fleet. The Spanish fleet was destroyed, and the war was over.

AnELEPHANT'S TEETH.

THE VICTORY IS THE WAR's WORTH.

The victory was not the result of chance, but the result of careful planning and strategy. The American fleet, under the command of Admiral Sampson, was superior in number and quality. The Spanish fleet, under the command of the Spanish admiral, was outnumbered and outgunned.

The American fleet was able to destroy the Spanish fleet because they had superior ships and weapons. The Spanish fleet was able to prevent the American fleet from destroying them because they had a strong navy and a large army.

The victory was a turning point in the war. It marked the end of the Spanish-American War and the beginning of the American occupation of the Philippines. The victory was a testament to the strength of the American fleet and the superior power of the American navy.
