CLARK KERR:

It Is the Best of Times, It Is the Worst of Times....

Dr. Clark Kerr, chairman and executive director of the Carnegie Commission on the future of Higher Education at Berkeley, California, and former president of the University of California, delivered the keynote address for the Ursinus College Alumni Liberal Arts Seminar on June 6.

Dr. Kerr remarked, in part, on the current state of higher education and the future of the liberal arts college.

His remarks are excerpted here.

On Higher Education . . .

"Taking the theme you have for your Centennial Celebration of Praise and Appraisal reminded me of the reference in Dicken's Tale of Two Cities saying 'It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the season of success, it was the season of despair.' So I should like to talk about 1969 as the best of times, and the worst of times, at the same time. . . .

"I would first like to make a few comments as to why this may be looked upon as the best of times. Currently everyone seems so discouraged about higher education, so critical, that we neglect some of the most positive aspects. Then I would like to turn to why this might be looked upon as the worst of times and discuss five of the great issues that are causing the difficulty on the 2300 different campuses spread across our fifty states. Of course I don't want to suggest that the five problems I'm going to refer to complete the total list. . . .

"Turning first of all to why this may be looked upon as the best of times I'd like to comment on what has been achieved in the last decade, and I would suggest that higher education has accomplished more in the last decade than any system of higher education in any country at any time in history during a similar period of time. . . .

Here are some of the things that have been done:

"In this decade we have doubled the number of students in higher education from three million to over six million. At the same time, and this is the real miracle, we have been increasing resources available per student in terms of real resources expended per student. . . .

"During this time higher education has drawn forth from the nation a doubling of the proportion of our gross national product going into higher education. . . .

"In this decade we have turned the American universities into the leading centers of science for the whole world. The science capitals of the world are now around Boston and the state of California. The American universities have made many new discoveries of great impact on mankind, and students now come from all over the world to study science in this country.

"As another illustration we have made a very great adaptation to our new role in the world. We have vastly increased the number of languages taught on our campuses, we've increased the number of our students going abroad, students coming from abroad to the United States, greatly increased the number of courses given all across the United States on African studies, Oriental studies, etc. . . .

"During this decade we've supplied the necessary manpower for our economy in the highest and longest state of prosperity our country has ever known. . . .

"We've also during this decade absorbed a great deal of federal aid without heavy handed federal control. . . .

"In this decade higher education has become much more central in our society. Rather than the campus being an ivory tower on the periphery of society it's become a cross road through which people pass from all corners of society and from every profession.

"And during this time we've become the model college and university system for the world, whereas we were accustomed to looking elsewhere for our models. . . .

"This last decade has seen great accomplishments and not only people in higher education but all America can be proud that higher education in this country has come of age and become the superior system in the world, with what that means to the health, the prosperity and cultural advancement of all our people.

"And yet it is the worst of times.

"We've never been so plagued by problems as we are today. There has never been so much internal criticism, even internal violence as today—and never so much external criticism and never so much application of external force on the campus. This is partly because of the problems I will now list.

1. Problems involved in trying to spread equality of opportunity to all of our people.

2. Insistent problems of financing higher education.

3. Great controversy at the present time about proper functions to be undertaken by institutions of higher education.

4. The very insistent problem of governance and the great battle over power on the campus and who makes what decisions.

5. The collision course between campuses of the United States and American society as a whole.

"The campus—not just the students but the campus as a whole—is looked upon as a center of dissent and sometimes even violent dissent. The public is fed up with that. But, beyond dissent, the campus is looked upon as a place which is bringing change into people's lives through science and many other ways. And people are also surfeited with change, they've had to absorb so much of it, and they are keenly aware that the campus is the major source. Also a rising resentment toward the meritocracy—against all the experts who are turned out by the universities to make decisions about and for the people. They have a kind of a gut feeling, and there is some truth to it, that there is a basic incompatibility between the ideas of a democracy, that every citizen is equal to every other in his judgment and the rise of this meritocracy.

"No I don't know the solutions but I do think there is one thing that is absolutely essential regardless of other solutions, and that is that the campus must turn their backs on violence.

The use of violence on a campus corrupts the campus and corrupts the surrounding society by encouraging the repressive forces.

"I would hate to see this situation worsen until, not just in one state but in fifty states in our nation, governors may be saying the campuses would be held open with bayonets. . . .

Dr. Kerr concluded, "There is a lot of praise for our successes, and there is a lot of room also for critical appraisal of where we stand and how we are going to face our crisis of equality of opportunity, of finance, of sorting out our function, determining our governance and doing something about the collision course between higher education and the general public."

On Liberal Arts Colleges . . .

"What is the future of the liberal arts college as I see it? If one were to extrapolate the trends of the past century, one would come to the conclusion that the liberal arts college probably does not have a very great future.

"But I'd like to raise the question may there be a new age for the liberal arts college as we look ahead to the year 2069?

"Ursinus was one of the many colleges started about the time of the Civil War . . . these institutions have in common that they were founded at the end of what might be called, the age of the college in the United States. . . .

"Shortly after the Civil War, more precisely in 1876 when John Hopkins was founded and Harvard began transforming itself from a college into a university, the age of the university began.

"Liberal arts colleges, in the past century, have declined from 100 percent of higher education to 20 percent. In my own state of California, it's now down to 10 percent.

"Will this trend continue? Will it be reversed?

"I think it's going to be reversed and for these reasons.

"The growing student complaint, with regard to higher education, in general, and specifically with large universities, may be broken down into several categories:

1. Loss of a sense of community. It gets to be too big and too impersonal. The new symbol of higher education is an I.B.M. card pasted on someone's forehead.

2. Today's university student feels that the curriculum is not always relevant. It gets divided into too many bits and pieces with a lack of interest to the student. It is too often relevant to faculty interests and not to those of the students.

3. Today's university is concerned with intellectual concepts and not with services for the people. So there is no opportunity to relate to people or help neighbors.

4. Students complain of excessive control in their personal lives, of the concept of In loco parentis.

5. The grind goes on forever. You sit in your seat, read books, listen to the professor and echo it back on examinations, if you can, year after year, after year.

"Now it is my conviction that some of these problems can be handled better at a liberal arts college by its very nature. These colleges can, in particular, respond to a sense of community and understanding. Being smaller, and with its historic traditions, the liberal arts colleges can develop curricula that are more relevant. Many current students for these reasons will lean to a liberal arts college.

"In a still unpublished national opinion survey, questions were asked of the class of 1961 (today's young alumni) for reactions to their years of higher education.

"They were asked:

1. What would you decrease and what would you increase? Universally they said they would take more liberal education and less vocational education. They'd take more Philosophy, Music Appreciation, Art History, and more History in general.

2. Where would you want your children to go? Generally they want their children to go to a small liberal arts college. This is true regardless of where they went themselves.

3. Who are the most active Alumni financially, in recruiting students, and in general interest? The survey shows that the best Alumni come from liberal arts colleges, especially those with some denominational history, or current affiliation. Alumni are most tied to campus when they feel they got out of it some sense of values and goals for their lives, some sense of philosophical and moral attitude toward the world, as against those institutions primarily concerned with increasing their skills.

4. When asked to evaluate what was best about the institutions they had attended, they replied, the campuses were quite good in preparing people for careers but poorest in preparing people for citizenship and rich personal lives.

"So I would suggest that, given these attitudes of the young alumni effecting their children, again there is reason to expect the liberal arts college to become more rather than less important.

"Society is changing, we have gone through a period of rapid industrialization and emphasis on increasing our gross national product. The emphasis of education being on Ph.D., research scientist and the continuation of higher education to wealth and power. Now we are entering a century with more emphasis upon affluence with new concerns not just for quantity of means but also for the quality of life. The emphasis of the higher education system of the past century has been on production. The emphasis shall now fall on consumption as well as productivity. Not just on skills for the job, but also skills for all of life, even after the job. Liberal arts colleges and the cluster colleges of big universities are going to be best able to handle these trends, therefore history shall be reversed with new emphasis on the liberal arts college.

"So I would say, that I do not think that the trend is going to continue for the liberal arts college to become less and less important, and I do not think that it's going to disappear. I think there's going to be a new emphasis upon it, a reversal of historical trends, and thus new opportunities.

"To quote your Centennial slogan, 'But try, for who knows what is possible?'"

Dr. Donald L. Helfferich chats with Dr. Clark Kerr at a reception prior to Dr. Kerr's keynote address at the Alumni Liberal Arts seminar.

Annual Business Meeting Held

Retiring president Joseph T. Beardwood, III, welcomed the Alumni Association into its annual meeting following the buffet luncheon on Alumni Day. Joe introduced Alumni Director Rev. Milton E. Detterline, who saluted members of the Class of '19 on their fiftieth anniversary, and the Class of '44, celebrating twenty-five years. The combined classes of '38-'39-'40 also were recognized, with each class president receiving a Centennial Coffee Mug award. The same award was given Mrs. William U. Helfferich '93 and Miss Marion Spangler '03 as the eldest alumni in attendance. Dr. Irwin Leinbach '29, who traveled from Florida, and Mr. Wilson Baden '19, who attended from California also received the "Kaffee Klatch" award.

The Alumni Association treasury listed a balance of $5203.02 as of June 1, 1969.

Reports were given by Dr. Richard C. Winchester, chairman of the Liberal Arts Committee and the Alumni weekend seminars, and by Mrs. J. Harold Brownback who acknowledged the Women's Club will have raised $10,000 by the end of this year to furnish a lounge in the new campus library.

Dean Ruth Rothenberger presented the Alumni Senior Awards to Miss Martha E. Berry and Mr. Joseph H. Miller, and Mr. Charles U. Shellenberger read the citation for Alumni Annual Award winner Dr. Gerald M. Edelman, '50, while Mrs. John Eachus presented the citation on behalf of the same award to Miss Mildred G. Fox, '35.

Dr. Henry Laughlin outlined the work of the Board of Directors and called for Alumni ideas to be channeled to him for the Board to consider.

The report of the Elections Committee appears elsewhere in this Journal issue. Acknowledgment was made that the Executive Committee had appointed Dr. Irvin A. Karam, '50, to replace incoming Alumni president Walter M. Tropp as Alumni Executive Committee representative.

Wally Tropp was introduced to the meeting and he outlined his concerns for the Association, including the strengthening of regional clubs and the identification of the Evening School alumni; the organization of a headquarters in the Philadelphia area; a permanent on-campus site for alumni visitors; and more meaningful contributions by alumni, such as working with students and situations on the academic scene.

The meeting concluded with President Helfferich's urgent concern for academic excellence beyond the physical structures rising to meet space needs on campus.

The Alumni Association's annual meeting is now on record; the implementing of actions has just begun.

Alumni Senior Awards were presented to Miss Martha E. Berry and Joseph H. Miller by Dean Ruth R. Harris

Outstanding Graduates Honored

The eighth annual Ursinus College Alumni Award was shared by two distinguished persons in this Centennial Year: Dr. Gerald M. Edelman, '50, and Miss Mildred G. Fox, '35.

Dr. Edelman continued his studies after his B.S. at Ursinus, by receiving an M.D. from the University of Pennsylvania and a Ph.D. at Rockefeller University where he currently is a Professor and researcher.

Major news media throughout the world recently carried the story of the significant breakthrough of Dr. Edelman and his team in biochemistry. Immunization values against bodily diseases were discovered through research in gamma globulin, and, in Dr. Edelman's words, "we might be able to understand and combat the rejection of body organs as well.

Miss Fox studied at New York University after her Ursinus days, and received Master's degrees in social studies and in guidance and personnel.

A noted authority on education, Miss Fox is college consultant in the Guidance Department of Evanston (Illinois) Township High School. Last year Miss Fox co-authored the textbook, "Guiding the Future College Student," published by Prentiss-Hall.

The recipients were unable to be present for the Award presentation because of prior commitments, but the citations read by Mrs. Peg Eachus and Mr. Charles U. Shellenberger acknowledged the honor brought to Ursinus College "by virtue of their service to mankind and their proficiency in their chosen profession."

Alumni Day 1969

CENTENNIAL SEMINAR

by Dr. Richard C. Winchester, '57

Spirited discussion, honest dialogue and polite dissent marked the sessions of the Centennial Seminar, Saturday, June 7. The alumni and friends who attended discovered that they disagreed both on the nature and on the purpose of the liberal arts college. As we might expect in an era of great international, generational and racial conflict, the alumni of Ursinus do not speak with one voice.

These differences manifested themselves in each of the four panels. More than one alumnus noted that, despite their separate titles, all of the workshops seemed to focus on similar questions. The basic concern appeared to be this; should Ursinus be a part of this world or apart from it? Closely related to that was a second issue, namely, whose world are we talking about? Is it the one perceived and in many cases endured by the young, the black and the poor or is it the world that most of the rest of us know?

One group of alumni would have Ursinus recommit itself in the future to the same course of service it has performed so well in the past. Catering to the needs and aspirations of the middle class and relatively isolated from the storm centers of our society, the college, according to this view, would continue to provide rigorous academic training and remain loyal to traditional standards of achievement. Its students would be competitive, grade conscious, oriented to graduate school and the professions and geared to what we might quickly describe as a suburban life style.

The other group of alumni saw the college in the future as a more heterogeneous institution than it has been in the past. They would broaden the geographic and racial mix of both students and faculty and devise a more experimental and less structured curriculum to accommodate this diversity and thereby to enrich the academic marketplace. Concerned more with social issues, Ursinus would, in this view, involve if not embroil itself in the controversies of the community. Its students would have greater opportunities to learn of the problems of the city and to familiarize themselves with what we might call an urban life style.

In spite of efforts at consensus, most often directed at substituting "and" for "or" in the descriptive titles of some of the seminars, this difference in expectation and outlook persisted. Permeating both sides of the debate, however, was the awareness that the future security of Ursinus may be threatened by basic institutional change. Campus stability and what some would describe as social relevance may at this time be incompatible at Ursinus. Given the difficulty of peaceful change, I think most of us felt it was important that our dialogue should continue.

MEMORIES...

William F. Buckley . . . Speaker

Nationally syndicated columnist William F. Buckley, Jr. spoke out against the "repeal" of technology, reason and idealism at Commencement exercises held at Ursinus in June.

He told the 307 graduates that the misuse of technology is insufficient cause for its outright rejection.

"There are good machines and bad machines," he said. "I know the farmers' case for good machines like the tractor. But good machines like the tractor beget bad machines like the tank."

In defense of reason:

"I take it that, however caught up in romanticism, you will not deny the occasional use of reason. Use of reason may not save us, but the absence of reason will not help us."

And idealism:

"I take it that you will not want to deny the idealism of other men who have personal visions other than your own."

He also spoke briefly in favor of hope.

"This imperfect nation is the altogether proper vehicle for our hope. This nation is the deserving object of your learned intentions."

Dr. William D. Reimert, Allentown newspaper publisher, who is chairman of the College Board of Directors, presided at commencement and Dean William S. Pettit read citations for four honorary degree recipients.

Buckley was given the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws (LL.D.) following his commencement address.

College President Dr. Donald L. Helfferich also presented the following hon- oraries:

The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity (D.D.) was conferred on Captain Thomas David Parham, Jr., U. S. Navy Chaplain, who preached the Baccalaureate sermon.

The Rev. John Henry Poorman '03, 221 Price Ave., Narberth, a retired church administrator, will be awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity (D.D.).

Miss Eveline B. Omwake, '33, professor of child development and chairman of the Department of Child Development at Connecticut College, will be awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters (L.H.D.). Miss Omwake's father (George Leslie Omwake) was eighth president of Ursinus College, 1912-1936.

THE DAY URSINUS MADE

By H. R. (TED) TAYLOR

College football is celebrating its Centennial Year in 1969—as is Ursinus College.

It is, therefore, only fitting that Ursinus should be involved in one of the greatest upsets in the 100 years of college football.

The date was Saturday, October 6, 1934, and it was raining.

The Ursinus Bears were scheduled to provide an early season warmup for the University of Pennsylvania Quakers—then a national power—and, because of the rain, only 10,000 people showed up at Franklin Field.

Penn and Ursinus had played one another, off and on, since 1905. The Quakers won the initial outing 39-0, and the last time Ursinus had scored on them was in 1910 when the Bears won out by an 8-5 score. Penn led in the series with eight wins in nine meetings.

When the final gun sounded, that Saturday afternoon, Ursinus had defeated Penn, 7-6. It was the biggest upset of the 1934 season, and the last time the two institutions would ever meet on the gridiron.

Recalls Afternoon

Herman “Reds” Bassman, '36, who scored the only Ursinus touchdown, recalls the afternoon vividly:

“I can remember when the squad was told in '33 that we were to play the University of Pennsylvania in '34. As a boy I had witnessed a 50-0 humiliation of Ursinus at the hands of the Quakers. No one thought this one would be any different. Just another big school early season warmup game.

“Early in the game they completed a few wide flat passes. Finally we felt another one coming, picked it off, and with the aid of a good block by “Lockie” Rhinehart ('36) had an open field and an easy touchdown. “Bounce” Bonkoski ('37) kicked the P.A.T. and to everyone’s amazement, including all the spectators and all the players on both sides, we were ahead. We didn’t know how long it would last but we were trying. Our defense dug in, but one of their backs got loose for six points and we thought here we go. But Sam Levin ('35) didn’t think so, made a determined effort and blocked the extra point and we were still ahead.”

(The Penn quarterback was Bill Shanahan, who was to complete only two of eight passes all day for a total of 14 yards. The Quaker tally came on a 32-yard run by J. C. McCracken. Penn had taken the ball on the Bear 37-yard line and, after a five-yard run by Kurlish, McCracken was off to the races.)

“We went in at half time still ahead to be exhorted by gentlemanly Jack McAvoy and gruff “Horse” Chase. It was like walking on eggs, everyone was wondering ‘How long will it last?’ he remembered.

FOOTBALL HISTORY

Series of Defenses

"We kicked off the second half and they promptly marched to the five-yard line where we held and still led, and they knew they were in for a long afternoon. The second half was a continuing series of Ursinus defenses holding off the Penn offense."

(Ursinus did get to the Penn 11-yard line in the third period but an intercepted pass stopped them. The Bears were zero for three in the passing department. Penn had 179 yards rushing, Ursinus had 54. There was one fumble, by Penn.)

"The last quarter arrived. It was pre-platoon football and the tough ones in the line like Johnny Grimm, ('36) Gene Bradford, ('36) Fuller Grenawalt, ('36) and Al Kravitz ('35) were getting tired, but held on. The last-minute was endless—finally the gun sounded, and we had won!

"I remember the crowd streaming on the field. One of my high school coaches engulfed me with an embrace (dirty uniform ignored). In the locker room we stood around a little sheepishly, unable to fully express our emotions. It was over, we had won . . . talk about an impossible dream!

"It was the sophomore year of Penn's legendary "Destiny Backfield." Fran Murray did not play, but Lew Elverson, Warwick and Kurlish did. Penn finished 4-4 that year, Ursinus wound up 3-3-3.)

Humorous Occasions

"Looking back there are many humorous occasions which Rube Levin and I have often mused over. After the game Sam Levin and I were invited to participate in a radio interview. Those were deep depression years. After the program there we were, two valiant heroes who missed the team bus and had to hitch-hike back to Collegeville.

"Later in the army in conversation with a passing acquaintance, we were talking about college. I mentioned Ursinus. He said, 'Really . . . did you know "Bounce Bonkoski? He kicked the extra point to beat Penn.' I said, 'Certainly I knew him. By the way, do you remember who scored the touchdown?' The reply was an uninformed 'No, who was it?' Perhaps the humor in that situation was only apparent to one in my particular position.

"Looking back after thirty-five years, it was a short, sweet moment that slipped away. The sophomoreic glow glimmered and lies dormant. When we read of the exploits of Mickey Shuman's son, the passing of friends like "Bounce" Bonkoski, Sam Levin, Johnny Grimm and so many of the professors that befriended us, the nostalgia returns, and when things are tough and we become a little unsure, we remember that we succeeded, and at this writing of it, it becomes a moment to fondle," he concluded.

Ursinus College Hosts Institute on Racism and Youth

An all-day inter-collegiate institute to increase understanding of the problems of Black and White America, "Racism, Youth and America's Future," was held on the Ursinus College campus this past Spring.

Sponsored jointly by Ursinus, Lincoln University Center For Interfaith Studies and the National Conference of Christians and Jews, the institute featured three noted speakers, and was under the co-chairmanship of Michael Wenof, Ursinus, and Carl O. Word, Lincoln.

Dr. J. Oscar Lee, Director of Education, NCCJ, presented the keynote address on the topic, "Problems of Black and White America: Their special Challenge to Youth."

In his position, Dr. Lee assists regional offices in educational programming in such areas as intergroup relations, race relations, religion in the public schools, in-service human relations training for teachers and summer workshops in human relations for teachers and community leaders.

He is a graduate of Lincoln University, A.B.; Yale University Divinity School, B.D.; Columbia University, M.A., and Union Theological Seminary (Presbyterian U.S.) Th.D.

Following Dr. Lee's address, four discussion groups discussed and responded to the problems as outlined in his presentation. Student chairmen of these groups were Steven P. Dorfman, J. Kevin Eckert, Byron Jackson, Ursinus; Stanley Johnson and Carl Word, Lincoln.

Dr. Martin M. Weitz, Director of the Center for Interfaith Studies at Lincoln, presided at a luncheon at which time Dr. Donald L. Helfferich, President of Ursinus, offered greetings.

Dr. Wyatt Tee Walker, Special Assistant to Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York, in the State Office on Urban Affairs presented the luncheon address, "Racism, Youth and America's Future."

Dr. Walker, who served as administrative head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, 1960-64, is a nationally prominent figure in the civil rights movement. He is a native of Brockton, Mass., and a graduate of Virginia Union University at Richmond.

A plenary session, at which time responses of the discussion groups will be aired followed the luncheon.

Dr. Rolf W. Ahlers, Assistant Professor of Religion at Illinois College, offered the final speech of the day on the topic, "The Extended View: Race, Revolution and Religion."

Dr. Ahlers is a native of Hamburg, Germany, and a graduate of Drew University, Princeton Theological Seminary and the University of Hamburg.

Students representing Ursinus, Lincoln and various Philadelphia colleges attended.

TO THE ALUMNI:

Ursinus has received more newspaper publicity in the past year than ever before in its history—a tribute to the College's accomplishments and to the skills of Henry (Ted) Taylor in the Public Relations Office. I am pleased that our headlines have not been of the unhappy kind so common these days in stories about colleges and universities. But alumni certainly are sensitive enough to realize that no campus is isolated from the winds of change blowing through Academia. Therefore a few general observations about the past academic year should interest you.

Throughout most of the year the campus community was engaged in a comprehensive review of the rules and customs of the College. The students hoped for rather extensive changes of social rules; and some changes were voted for by the Faculty, and approved by the Board. However, there was a clear reaffirmation of the long-standing principle that certain norms of social conduct should be observed. The year-long review was not without frictions and communication lapses, but over-all I believe it was a constructive and meaningful process for all.

During the year the College made quiet efforts, within its competency, to deal with the problem of the disadvantaged in American society. I appointed a committee of faculty members, administrators and students (both black and white) under the chairmanship of Dr. Richard M. Fletcher, to concentrate on the questions of admission and remedial training; of black thought and history in the curriculum and in the library collection; and of general sensitivity of the campus community to the problem. Our aim is to foster the principle of equality which has always been a part of the Ursinus tradition, and I believe our students and faculty are doing it in a quietly constructive way. Indicative of the faculty's interest is its list of books recommended to students for summer reading: A Choice of Weapons, by Gordon Parks; Concerning Dissent and Civil Disobedience, by Abe Fortas; Report of the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders, (the Kerner Report); Discrimination: USA, by Jacob K. Javits.

Last year faculty members and students sat for the first time with Board committees, and representatives of both groups attended the full Board meetings. Thus the communication among various groups was enhanced.

The new Ursinus Student Government Association, which superseded separate men's and women's organizations, had its second year of operation. The reorganization of student government was designed to give students a more effective role in the life of the campus and to focus both student responsibilities and privileges more sharply. I believe that the USGA made strides toward realizing its full potential but that it still has a distance to go.

During the past year I was keenly aware of the influence on our students of the tides of cultural conflict charted daily in the news media. Nevertheless I remain confident that Ursinus is effectively training its students for meaningful professional lives while exposing them to the great contemporary issues in an orderly way.

Sincerely,

D. L. Helfferich
President

Alumni Day 1969

The sun shimmered through the Yew tree all day and the June-blue sky hung its cotton clouds out to dry.
It was a picture-perfect day for the 400 alumni.

Hub Gilfert soothed the Lowery organ through happy tunes on Wismer's patio while pretty coeds in their yellow hard-hats shifted armsful of new-construction blueprints and cooed about the library and the science building and the administration building and the planned gym and convocation hall.

And the ladies rushed to each other's arms and hugged hello
and the men slapped backs and pumped hands of chums unseen over the years of busy absences.
The mellifluous President Helfferich and his gracious Anna warmed the memories of campus friends, and waiters in stiff-starched white coats rushed about with cookies and hors d'oeuvres and tiny cakes and gathered empty cups and punch glasses all day.
The noon Buffet tables were crammed with the succulent beef and turkey and ham, and first-timers wondered at the changes on campus and long-timers laughed and reminisced with friends in a familiar setting.

And some just sat
and soaked in the joy of the day while other relished the cool darkness of Wismer Theatre with its continuous showing of school films.
And still others spent long hours in brisk and serious discussion of campus directions and the philosophy of liberal education.
It was a weekend of Clark Kerr in solemn appraisal of the Phoenix-like resurrection of the liberal arts college, of Dick Winchester and his Seminar panels digging deep into the soil of known facts and new discoveries, of Joe Beardwood's adieu to the mantle of Alumni President and Wally Tropp accepting that role with serious intent.

It was a time for everyone.
A time to relax, a time to reflect, a time to celebrate,
a time to be proud.
Proud to be the alumni of Century-old and ever-renewing
Ursinus College.

Alumni Classes Give Generously in 1968-1969

The classes of Ursinus College once again have proven their loyalty by giving generously during 1968-69. Over-all the alumni gave $174,706.64 to Ursinus during the fiscal year ended June 30 — nearly $48,000 more than last year. Shown below is a summary of gifts by class given to both the annual Loyalty Fund and the special All-Ursinus Anniversary Drive for capital funds.

LOYALTY FUND TOPS GOAL

The Loyalty Fund surpassed its $100,000 goal by raising $104,608.48 from 36 percent of alumni. The Loyalty Fund appeal was for gifts to the operating budget of the College or to the scholarship or general endowments. The latter provide income mainly for paying faculty salaries.

Credit for success goes to Loyalty Fund Chairman George S. Spohn, '42, Vice-Chairman Robert R. Geist, '46, and the entire Loyalty Fund Committee made up of an executive committee and the class chairmen.

Of the classes with 50 or more members, the class of 1932, led by Benjamin A. Scirica, Esq., showed the greatest improvement in participation — up 18 percentage points over the previous year to 56 percent.

The class of 1947, led by Nancy Jeanne (Talcott) Everest, increased from 42 percent to 52 percent. Other larger classes that achieved either 50 percent participation or increased by at least five percentage points were 1928, 1933, 1939, 1944, 1945, 1959, and 1967.

Six of the classes with fewer than 50 members achieved 100 percent participation. Twenty-seven smaller classes increased participation, led by the following: 1906, 1907, 1909, 1913, 1914, and 1915.

The backbone of the success of alumni giving was the Century Club and the President's Club. There were 43 President's Club members, those who contributed at least $1,000 during the year. There were 484 Century Club members, those who gave at least $100.

ALL-URSINUS ANNIVERSARY DRIVE

Over and above the annual Loyalty Fund gifts, alumni contributed $70,098.16 to the All-Ursinus Anniversary Drive, the special campaign designed to finance the library, science building, physical education center and student center. Many thousands of dollars more have already been pledged by alumni to the Drive, and the $70,098.16 represents mainly the early payments on pledges.

The Anniversary Drive, under the national chairmanship of Paul I. Guest, Esq., '38, is being conducted separate from the Loyalty Fund in the hope that alumni will continue to give their traditional annual gifts to Loyalty Fund and at the same time pledge a special amount for the capital construction program being financed through the Anniversary Drive.

Alumni donors to both programs have been figured in the percentages of participation.

A complete list of names of alumni supporters, with special recognition for Club 100 and President's Club contributors, will be listed in an Achievement Report to be mailed in September.

The record of giving provides good reason for the alumni to be proud of their relationship with Ursinus.

WOMEN'S ATHLETICS

By Adele Boyd, '53

A varied spring sports' season provided activities in lacrosse, tennis, softball, and golf. With practice and playing space on fields and courts at a premium, coaches Eleanor Snell, Marge Watson, Judy Moyer, and Adele Boyd, vied for the time and talent of the athletes.

Lacrosse

The lacrosse team began the season with a decisive victory over the University of Pennsylvania. As the season progressed the defense gained experience and the attack gained finesse to defeat East Stroudsburg, William and Mary, Swarthmore, Trenton, and Glassboro. Two games against West Chester proved to be a frustrating challenge. In the first game the Bearettes led through the 1st half, but W. C. managed to chalk up one goal at a time and after trailing 5-4 at half-time, came through with two goals in the 2nd half to win the contest 6-5.

Determined to avenge this loss, the Ursinus team worked on coordinating attack and defense and led by captains Marty Berry and Given Steigelman, met West Chester in a return game on home ground. Another well-played 1st half caused Ursinus hopes to rise, but the determination and doggedness of the West Chester team resulted in a tie 6-6 match.

The United States Women's Lacrosse Association organized a mid-season playday at Sanford, Delaware, in which the Ursinus team participated. This "Southern Holiday Weekend" provided competition on a club and college level.

In conjunction with the tennis team, the lacrosse team travelled to the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., for a weekend.

Culminating the season by attending the 38th annual National Lacrosse Tournament at Goucher College in Towson, Maryland, May 30, 31 and June 1, were four undergraduates and five alumnae: Phila. I—Janet Smith, Judy Smiley, Vonnie Gros, Sue Honeysett; Phila. II—Janet Lippincott; Phila. III—Kim Brown; Phila. IV—Bonnie Scott and Josie Short; Phila. V—Caroline Hornor.

After two days of play, selections to the United States and U. S. Reserve teams were made. Vonnie Gros, Judy Smiley, Sue Honeysett, and Janet Lippincott were selected to the 1969 United States Team;

Janet Smith was selected to the 1969 U. S. Reserve Team.

On July 3rd, a U. S. Touring Team joined with a Great Britain and Ireland Touring Team to tour Australia (and New Zealand, Fiji, Hawaii, Japan, Hong Kong, Netherlands, and England!) Members of this group from Ursinus are Vonnie Gros, Judy Smiley, Sue Honeysett, Janet Smith, and Enid Russell.

Softball

Led by seniors April Winham (captain), Kathleen Carson, and Gwen Steigelman, the varsity softball team won three games (two against Penn, one vs. Glassboro) and lost two games (both to West Chester); the junior varsity defeated Eastern Baptist.

Tennis

After an initial loss to five-year-undefeated University of Pennsylvania team, the Ursinus tennis team defeated Bryn Mawr, Gettysburg, Swarthmore, Beaver, Rosemont, East Stroudsburg, and Glassboro. A 3-2 loss to Swarthmore and a 5-1 loss to William and Mary gave the team a 6-3 record for the season.

The return of Mary McBath Twentyman, the addition of freshmen Chris Treiss and Janet Lefkol, and the return of letter winners Mary Ellen Tomasco, Louise Adams, plus Jean Ramsey, Betsy Dickey, and Caroline Hornor combined to form a strong team.

Mary Twentyman and Betsy Dickey entered the Middle States Intercollegiate Tournament at Bryn Mawr but were defeated after one round of play.

Golf

This year for the first time four girls were entered in the D.W.G.S. Women's Intercollegiate Golf Tournament. Approximately ninety girls from all over the country vied for places in the four flights of play held on the Penn State Campus in mid-June.

Nancy Porter led the Ursinus entrants by placing 2nd in the Second Flight. Caroline Hornor reached the finals of the Fourth Flight, and Bonnie Scott, the semi-finals in the Fourth Flight. The fourth member of the group was Nancy Wurst who lost in her first match.

W.A.A. Banquet

The W.A.A. Banquet on May 22nd climaxed the year's activities in sports. Mrs. Betty Meade, recipient of Philadelphia's Most Courageous Athlete Award, was the guest speaker. Awards were presented to juniors Kim Brown, Mary Ellen Smith, Nancy Porter, Lindsey Kneas, Jean Ramsey, and Jean Stettler who earned 1,000 points in three years of competition.

Janet Lippincott

Robin Cash received four varsity letters—quite an achievement for a freshman! Gwen Steigelman, senior, received the Ursinus Women's Club Prize for her achievements in the field of athletics (this prize was awarded at the Commencement Exercises).

Hockey

Ursinus girls continue to travel around the world representing the U.S.F.H.A. on various field hockey teams. On August 7th Kim Brown departed for the Netherlands as a member of a team from the Rhode Island area while on August 17th Sandy Wood left for a tour of Guyana. Both girls were members of the Ursinus varsity last year and will return from touring to play on the Ursinus team this fall.

The Alumnae Hockey team has a full schedule for the fall. Of particular note to spectators is the game scheduled on Homecoming Weekend, Nov. 1st at 9:45 when the Ursinus Alumnae will play the Old Timers. The Alumnae team will miss goalie Mrs. Pat Zelle, who has moved to Princeton, Massachusetts. Gwen Steigelman will be a new member of the team.

Gurzynski Seeks Scouts

Track coach Ray Gurzynski has issued a call for "Bird Dogs."

"How many times have you griped about athletics at Ursinus and how something 'should be done about them?,' Gurzynski asks.

"Now, how many good athletes have you personally recommended, sought-out, interviewed, wined and dined, and/or brought personally to Ursinus?

"How does that 'grab you'?"

"How often at the regional meetings of alumni has a directed, concerted effort been made to 'do something' to interest area athletes in our fine college?"

"Are there any Ursinus clubs which sponsor dinners for area athletes in an attempt to recruit some for the school?

"How about some local "Bruins Club" to handle "Bird Dogging" chores?"

"Whatever the procedure, in concert and/or individually, Ursinus is sure to be the gainer.

"Bird Dogs of Ursinus—Arise!!!", he concluded.

Regional Alumni Clubs

"Golly, Betty, you haven't changed a bit!"

"You mean I had these bags under my eyes when I was in College?"

Area Alumni Clubs are easy-to-attend mini-reunions that bring together Ursinus friends old and new at least once yearly.

Some Clubs conduct an occasional swim party, others meet in homes, most have a dinner and a guest speaker from the College.

In every case, the focus is on fun and fellowship, and on bringing alumni up to date on College happenings.

Some Clubs have mechanical difficulties getting together because of fewer area alumni, longer distances, and date-scheduling problems. But most of our Area Clubs are in high gear with fluid and smooth annual meetings to supplement the on-campus reunion programs.

During the spring of 1969, Clubs met in Lehigh Valley, Southern New Jersey, New York City, Washington, D.C., and York. More than 200 alumni attended these meetings and heard such speakers as Vice President Richard P. Richter, Dr. Philip Williams, Dr. Eugene Miller, Dr. Henry Laughlin, Rev. Milton E. Detterline.

The Alumni Club in your area is looking for you, and we offer here the regional Club names and presidents, with the encouragement you may contact them to see what's next on the agenda:

THE EVENING SCHOOL

The Evening School program at Ursinus can lead to a Bachelor's degree in Business Administration, an Associate degree in Business Administration, or an Associate degree in Arts. One also may prepare for a degree in Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science by means of some full-time attendance at the College.

Most students in the Evening School are daytime employees and employers, wishing to fulfill educational ambitions through the light load of a few hours each week in the College program. And those working toward specific degree achievement may easily require a decade of endurance.

It's understandable then, that when the Evening School Alumni get together to celebrate their achievement, they celebrate with vigor! During this past spring, the 125 Evening School Alumni turned in 83 dinner reservations at the Kimber-ton Country Club, and 27 still were agile enough to get in a round of golf before the banquet. 1969 graduates were specially recognized at the affair, put together by the enthusiastic labors of A. Alan Botto, '68, and undergrad Harry Hartshorn, co-chairmen of the event.

The Alumni Association at Executive meeting on June 6, officially welcomed the Evening School Alumni as bona fide members of the Association, and encouraged an election of Evening School officers to continue programming for the night people.

As this Journal was in preparation, the Evening School Alumni were mulling their nominees:

President: Richard Ott or Ed Grossmick.

Secretary-Treasurer: Mrs. Harriet Johnson.

Reunion Chairman (class coordinator): John Boggs or William Youngblood.

Loyalty Fund Chairman: Robert Meyers.

Alumni Association Representative: A. Alan Botto.

We'll announce the results in a later issue of the Journal. President Wally Tropp has committed his Alumni Association to aid and abet these Veterans of The Dusk, Ursinus collegians every one.
