10-4-1973

The Ursinus Weekly, October 4, 1973

John T. Fidler
_Ursinus College_

Kitt Turner
_Ursinus College_

Elizabeth Tibbitts
_Ursinus College_

Joseph Van Wyk
_Ursinus College_

Cynthia Fitzgerald
_Ursinus College_

See next page for additional authors

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.ursinus.edu/weekly

Part of the Cultural History Commons, Higher Education Commons, Liberal Studies Commons, Social History Commons, and the United States History Commons

Recommended Citation
Fidler, John T.; Turner, Kitt; Tibbitts, Elizabeth; Van Wyk, Joseph; Fitzgerald, Cynthia; Lavelle, Ann; Whaley, Richard; Van Wagoner, Elsie; Morgan, Eva; Geist, George; Ludwig, Helen; and Fegely, Jeff, "The Ursinus Weekly, October 4, 1973" (1973). Ursinus Weekly Newspaper. 1.
https://digitalcommons.ursinus.edu/weekly/1
Freshman Class Energetic; Brings New Atmosphere to U.C.

By KITT TURNER and RETH TURNUS

Freshman Orientation started Saturday, September 15, with one of the highest, most enthusiastic freshman classes Ursinus has ever seen. Dick Cigala, Sue Benner, Jeannie Crandall, Ed Knowles planned the activities with a high degree of success. The new year's squad leaders were caught up in the activity and excitement of the play and went on to the other activities. The first activities were meetings in the religious center on campus to discuss the option of joining the College Union and to discuss living in the new dorms. Sunday's activities were more of an academic nature. I.D. card pictures were taken for everyone, and Sunday was planned for anyone Sunday they were interested in meeting professors on an individual basis. The gym was filled to capacity and everyone had a ball.

Sundance

It was time for a liberalizing of the current privileges and the administration felt that for this year freshmen are not to be limited to six cuts per term and that President Pettit has refused to agree to a liberalization of the open dorm policy for the College. Some students were outraged and indignant that these things happened, but the transfer student didn't have the opportunity to protest. They felt that the administration had struck another blow at student morale by failing without reason any cuts designed to frustrate a transfer student. They thought him to the breaking point. One might think that I am now making a mockery of a serious problem, but I am not discussing subjects so as not to discuss others. I am discussing subjects for which the students feel about these issues, therefore if anyone asks for an explanation of the situation sounds as paranoid as mine.

By JIM VAN WYK

By now it's common knowledge that for this year freshmen are limited to six cuts per course per semester and that President Pettit has refused to agree to a liberalization of the open dorm policy for the College. Some students were outraged and indignant that these things happened, but the transfer student didn't have the opportunity to protest. They felt that the administration had struck another blow at student morale by failing without reason any cuts designed to frustrate a transfer student. They thought him to the breaking point. One might think that I am now making a mockery of a serious problem, but I am not discussing subjects so as not to discuss others. I am discussing subjects for which the students feel about these issues, therefore if anyone asks for an explanation of the situation sounds as paranoid as mine.

By JIM VAN WYK

By now it's common knowledge that for this year freshmen are limited to six cuts per course per semester and that President Pettit has refused to agree to a liberalization of the open dorm policy for the College. Some students were outraged and indignant that these things happened, but the transfer student didn't have the opportunity to protest. They felt that the administration had struck another blow at student morale by failing without reason any cuts designed to frustrate a transfer student. They thought him to the breaking point. One might think that I am now making a mockery of a serious problem, but I am not discussing subjects so as not to discuss others. I am discussing subjects for which the students feel about these issues, therefore if anyone asks for an explanation of the situation sounds as paranoid as mine.

By JIM VAN WYK

By now it's common knowledge that for this year freshmen are limited to six cuts per course per semester and that President Pettit has refused to agree to a liberalization of the open dorm policy for the College. Some students were outraged and indignant that these things happened, but the transfer student didn't have the opportunity to protest. They felt that the administration had struck another blow at student morale by failing without reason any cuts designed to frustrate a transfer student. They thought him to the breaking point. One might think that I am now making a mockery of a serious problem, but I am not discussing subjects so as not to discuss others. I am discussing subjects for which the students feel about these issues, therefore if anyone asks for an explanation of the situation sounds as paranoid as mine.
The Philadelphia Folk Festival presents music and workshops

By ANN LAVELLE

The Philadelphia Folk Festival returned for its twelfth year on the weekend of August 24, 25, and 26, presenting the best musical event of the summer in the Philadelphia area. Sponsored by the Philadelphia Folklore Society, a non-profit, volunteer organization, the festival was held at the Pennslyvania Conference Center. The festival was an overwhelming success, with over 150,000 people attending.

The festival included a wide variety of musicians from all over the world, including some of the biggest names in folk music, such as Simon & Garfunkel and the Grateful Dead. The festival also featured a variety of workshops, including guitar lessons, songwriting classes, and storytelling sessions.

One of the highlights of the festival was the workshop led by John Roberts and Tony Barone. The workshop focused on the history of the folk movement, from the 1920s to the 1970s. The workshop was attended by over 500 people, and it was a great success.

The festival also featured a variety of food vendors, with everything from hot dogs to kettle corn. The festival was a great way to spend a day outdoors, with plenty of music and entertainment to keep everyone entertained.

Overall, the Philadelphia Folk Festival was a great success, and it is sure to be a highlight of the summer season for music lovers everywhere. The festival is definitely worth a visit, and we look forward to attending again next year.

Bruce Martin, banjo player, calls audience to the concert at the 12th Philadelphia Folk Festival. Photo by Mike Werner

---

Philadelphia Folk Festival presents music and workshops

The Philadelphia Folk Festival returns for its twelfth year on the weekend of August 24, 25, and 26, presenting the best musical event of the summer in the Philadelphia area. Sponsored by the Philadelphia Folklore Society, a non-profit, volunteer organization, the festival was held at the Pennslyvania Conference Center. The festival was an overwhelming success, with over 150,000 people attending.

The festival included a wide variety of musicians from all over the world, including some of the biggest names in folk music, such as Simon & Garfunkel and the Grateful Dead. The festival also featured a variety of workshops, including guitar lessons, songwriting classes, and storytelling sessions.

One of the highlights of the festival was the workshop led by John Roberts and Tony Barone. The workshop focused on the history of the folk movement, from the 1920s to the 1970s. The workshop was attended by over 500 people, and it was a great success.

The festival also featured a variety of food vendors, with everything from hot dogs to kettle corn. The festival was a great way to spend a day outdoors, with plenty of music and entertainment to keep everyone entertained.

Overall, the Philadelphia Folk Festival was a great success, and it is sure to be a highlight of the summer season for music lovers everywhere. The festival is definitely worth a visit, and we look forward to attending again next year.

Bruce Martin, banjo player, calls audience to the concert at the 12th Philadelphia Folk Festival. Photo by Mike Werner

---

Philadelphia Folk Festival presents music and workshops

The Philadelphia Folk Festival returns for its twelfth year on the weekend of August 24, 25, and 26, presenting the best musical event of the summer in the Philadelphia area. Sponsored by the Philadelphia Folklore Society, a non-profit, volunteer organization, the festival was held at the Pennslyvania Conference Center. The festival was an overwhelming success, with over 150,000 people attending.

The festival included a wide variety of musicians from all over the world, including some of the biggest names in folk music, such as Simon & Garfunkel and the Grateful Dead. The festival also featured a variety of workshops, including guitar lessons, songwriting classes, and storytelling sessions.

One of the highlights of the festival was the workshop led by John Roberts and Tony Barone. The workshop focused on the history of the folk movement, from the 1920s to the 1970s. The workshop was attended by over 500 people, and it was a great success.

The festival also featured a variety of food vendors, with everything from hot dogs to kettle corn. The festival was a great way to spend a day outdoors, with plenty of music and entertainment to keep everyone entertained.

Overall, the Philadelphia Folk Festival was a great success, and it is sure to be a highlight of the summer season for music lovers everywhere. The festival is definitely worth a visit, and we look forward to attending again next year.

Bruce Martin, banjo player, calls audience to the concert at the 12th Philadelphia Folk Festival. Photo by Mike Werner

---

Philadelphia Folk Festival presents music and workshops

The Philadelphia Folk Festival returns for its twelfth year on the weekend of August 24, 25, and 26, presenting the best musical event of the summer in the Philadelphia area. Sponsored by the Philadelphia Folklore Society, a non-profit, volunteer organization, the festival was held at the Pennslyvania Conference Center. The festival was an overwhelming success, with over 150,000 people attending.

The festival included a wide variety of musicians from all over the world, including some of the biggest names in folk music, such as Simon & Garfunkel and the Grateful Dead. The festival also featured a variety of workshops, including guitar lessons, songwriting classes, and storytelling sessions.

One of the highlights of the festival was the workshop led by John Roberts and Tony Barone. The workshop focused on the history of the folk movement, from the 1920s to the 1970s. The workshop was attended by over 500 people, and it was a great success.

The festival also featured a variety of food vendors, with everything from hot dogs to kettle corn. The festival was a great way to spend a day outdoors, with plenty of music and entertainment to keep everyone entertained.

Overall, the Philadelphia Folk Festival was a great success, and it is sure to be a highlight of the summer season for music lovers everywhere. The festival is definitely worth a visit, and we look forward to attending again next year.

Bruce Martin, banjo player, calls audience to the concert at the 12th Philadelphia Folk Festival. Photo by Mike Werner

---

Philadelphia Folk Festival presents music and workshops

The Philadelphia Folk Festival returns for its twelfth year on the weekend of August 24, 25, and 26, presenting the best musical event of the summer in the Philadelphia area. Sponsored by the Philadelphia Folklore Society, a non-profit, volunteer organization, the festival was held at the Pennslyvania Conference Center. The festival was an overwhelming success, with over 150,000 people attending.

The festival included a wide variety of musicians from all over the world, including some of the biggest names in folk music, such as Simon & Garfunkel and the Grateful Dead. The festival also featured a variety of workshops, including guitar lessons, songwriting classes, and storytelling sessions.

One of the highlights of the festival was the workshop led by John Roberts and Tony Barone. The workshop focused on the history of the folk movement, from the 1920s to the 1970s. The workshop was attended by over 500 people, and it was a great success.

The festival also featured a variety of food vendors, with everything from hot dogs to kettle corn. The festival was a great way to spend a day outdoors, with plenty of music and entertainment to keep everyone entertained.

Overall, the Philadelphia Folk Festival was a great success, and it is sure to be a highlight of the summer season for music lovers everywhere. The festival is definitely worth a visit, and we look forward to attending again next year.

Bruce Martin, banjo player, calls audience to the concert at the 12th Philadelphia Folk Festival. Photo by Mike Werner

---

Philadelphia Folk Festival presents music and workshops

The Philadelphia Folk Festival returns for its twelfth year on the weekend of August 24, 25, and 26, presenting the best musical event of the summer in the Philadelphia area. Sponsored by the Philadelphia Folklore Society, a non-profit, volunteer organization, the festival was held at the Pennslyvania Conference Center. The festival was an overwhelming success, with over 150,000 people attending.

The festival included a wide variety of musicians from all over the world, including some of the biggest names in folk music, such as Simon & Garfunkel and the Grateful Dead. The festival also featured a variety of workshops, including guitar lessons, songwriting classes, and storytelling sessions.

One of the highlights of the festival was the workshop led by John Roberts and Tony Barone. The workshop focused on the history of the folk movement, from the 1920s to the 1970s. The workshop was attended by over 500 people, and it was a great success.

The festival also featured a variety of food vendors, with everything from hot dogs to kettle corn. The festival was a great way to spend a day outdoors, with plenty of music and entertainment to keep everyone entertained.

Overall, the Philadelphia Folk Festival was a great success, and it is sure to be a highlight of the summer season for music lovers everywhere. The festival is definitely worth a visit, and we look forward to attending again next year.
Presenting Mr. Gaglio

By RICHARD WHALEY

In the work against the powerful organized crime in this country, the two-way radio, television, magazine, hot-wire, super-deal-all writ watch is not the most powerful tool, but the pen, pad and watch are the best. These three tools are what send criminals to jail. This and many more tools and the important facts were talked about at a recent meeting of Charles A. Gaglio, the Acting Chief of the Organized Crime Branch of the government’s fight against crime was that its agencies did not work together fighting crime. The Treasury department itself was divided into the Departments of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms; Customs, which investigates smuggling of goods; Counterfeiting, which investigates stolen government bonds and money; the Secret Service, which is involved with the protection of the President and others; the Internal Revenue Service, which has an important fact s...
Hockey Bearettes on Their Way to Successful Season

By EVRA MORGAN

Already All-Star boys' Bearettes have begun planning for the upcoming year's busy schedule. This season brings several changes and many new faces. But for the girls, the time the girls have the use of the home hockey rink will be spent in style, clad in dazzling red and white.

This year's schedule marks the return of the third-fourth team squad be

"Open doors to the girls...." (Continued from Page 1, Col. 5)

For More Information Contact the State Employment Office

Pottstown — Mr. Florito 323-2920

Bear Drop Two

By JEFF FEGELY

On September 22, the Glassboro High School football team traveled to Lancaster to open the '73 season against the Diplomats of Franklin and Marshall. The Bears had had a tough start to the season. After five games, the Bears had earned only three points. But the Bears were determined to win in this game. The Bears had been through a lot this year, but they were confident that they could pull it off. They had been training hard, and they knew that they could win if they played their best. The Bears were up against a tough opponent, the Diplomats, who were also looking to earn their first victory of the season. The game was closely contested, but in the end, the Bears emerged victorious, earning their first win of the season.

The Bears were happy to have earned their first win of the season. They knew that they had earned it through hard work and dedication. They were looking forward to the rest of the season and hoped to continue their winning streak.

HoffHoopla

By GEORGE GEISE

"When the days of the 70's..." but unfortunately, unlike those years of dominance with burners like Carr and Chamberlain and Cunningham, this year's Bearette squad will have to complete rebuilding program from last year's disastrous 9-73 campaign. But with the returnmg to the squad's leading rebounder and the real professional athletes, conveyed.

Students may have to use the new courts during the daylight hours when they are not in use by the gym classes. The lights will not be used this fall, but will probably be in use during the spring. Mr. Bailey insists that all students wear tennis shoes (not basketball shoes) to protect the new surface. If a student wishes to use a wide variety of hours and the courts are locked, he should report to the gym office for the key before attempting to climb the fence. Also, no tennis equipment is allowed on the court. No cooperation in any case of gym classes.

Student must provide their own equipment. What about the old courts? The sets on the six old courts will be up all year round, unlike the new courts, which will have the sets up only during nice weather. In a few years from now, a one-way road will be built through the old courts going to Helfferich Hall.

NEW CLASSIFIED AD

SECTION 42 WORD LIMIT THINGS TO BUY OR SELL Rate $1.50 per col. inch

MEET THE BANDS' COMMENT: Hockey Bearettes on Their Way to Successful Season

The eight newly surfaced tennis courts will be open during daylight hours.

New Tennis Courts Ready For Use

By HELEN LUDWIG

The eight brand new courts will be opened to the students on a Saturday in October. The courts were constructed to replace the old courts which were outdated and in poor condition. The new courts are located next to the old courts and are of the same size. The new court surfaces are made of a special durable material that is designed to last for many years. The new courts are located next to the old courts and are of the same size. The new court surfaces are made of a special durable material that is designed to last for many years. The new courts are located next to the old courts and are of the same size. The new court surfaces are made of a special durable material that is designed to last for many years.