The Story of the Seal.

There is probably no part of the sea more interesting than the life of the whale and his companions. The visitor from the land who has only limited space to look into, finds, when he is satisfied to rest and watch, a world of interest, of beauty, and of wild and wonderful life. The fisherman, the sailor, the naturalist, thearine, the botanist, the zoologist, the geologist, and the physician, are all in a perpetual state of delight. The whale is the grandeur of the ocean, the bird, the beauty of the land. The seal is the gem of the sea, and the music of the waves.

The seal is a most interesting animal. It is found in all parts of the world, from the Arctic to the Antarctic. It is not a fish, but a mammal, and has the peculiar advantage of being able to live in the water as well as on the land. It is a most interesting and beautiful animal, and is found in great numbers in the Arctic and Antarctic regions.
