June 21, 1940.

The Hon. Henry P. Fletcher,
Republican Headquarters,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Henry,

I enclose my suggestions for a plank on foreign policy and national defence. I count upon you to see that it receives consideration, for you know well enough that I am informed upon those matters.

If, after appointing an isolationist temporary chairman, Mr. Hamilton and the other Republican powers that be, supply the spectacle of making an issue of foreign policy in a great crisis and if ~~xxx~~ ^{they} draw up a trick platform currying favor with the purblind isolationists, the party ^{will} assure the defeat that it will deserve. I hope you can prevent the party from falling into this abyss when it draws up it's platform.

Best regards and every good wish from

Yours very sincerely
