CAPTAIN SAM POTTER, OF THE DRAGONS

Samuel Potter, star halfback of the Drexel Dragons, is playing his last season of football for the Engineers this year. Coming to the Institute in 1931 from Paoli, Pa., Potter set about to continue his record begun at Berwyn High, where he received his fundamental training in the sport. His consistent record as a sterling halfback led to his selection as leader of the 1934 eleven. He is 5' 8" in height and weighs 152 pounds. To Potter goes much of the credit for the fine showing made by the Dragons so far this year.

CAPTAIN SAM LEVIN, OF THE BEARS

Sammy Levin, captain and star tackle of the Grizzly eleven, needs no introduction to the students and friends of Ursinus. Coming to Collegeville from Northeast High, in Philadelphia, he early made a name for himself in football circles by earning a permanent berth on the Varsity lineup in his sophomore year. Sammy will go down in the history of Ursinus sports as the "captain of the team that beat Penn." It is noteworthy that for his outstanding playing in this contest, he received mention by the All-American Board of Football, only the second Ursinus man to receive such distinction.

ABNORMAL ENIGMATIC URSINUS

PRE-SEASON information: Coach McAvoy states that the 1934 Ursinus squad is the best since he started coaching at Collegeville, and the Bears, according to sports writers, will open the season by defeating Villanova in a hard fought game. Stuhldreher's charges encountered little difficulty in defeating Ursinus, 35-0.

Warm-up game for the University of Pennsylvania, was what the Friday night dopsters said of the Ursinus-Penn game in the first paragraph of their writeups, and devoted the remainder of the column to Penn's chances with Yale the following Saturday. One of the biggest upsets of the year in college football was Ursinus' 7-6 win over Penn.

Ursinus should score about three touchdowns on St. Joe's in the first half, after which the second team will probably finish the game, we were told prior to the Bears' departure to scrimmage with the Hawks in Philadelphia. Mr. Heinie Miller and his St. Joe proteges had other plans. Six to four was the final score, and Ursinus came in second.

F. & M., with decisive victories over Albright, Rutgers, and Lafayette, appeared in Collegeville to count Ursinus as its fourth straight win. "Looks bad for the home team," remarked the newspapermen, alumni, students, et al., among the 8,000 spectators before the kick-off. "Coach Holman's boys are going places this year. Ursinus might win, but you would have to give me pretty good odds to bet that way." The final score: Ursinus 6; F. & M., 0.

Ursinus-Dickinson: Sports writers have become skeptical of predicting the Ursinus games on a rational basis. The Bears had done comparatively better than the Red Devils in previous games, so the majority of the writers picked Ursinus, with reservations; and the more sensible ones quit trying to foretell the outcome on any football game in which Ursinus was one of the teams. The trip to Carlisle was very nice, we were told by McAvoy, Chase & Co., and besides a scoreless tie is nothing (0-0).

With the previous experiences of Ursinus to date, Drexel is in a difficult position. Of course, anything might happen in an Ursinus game in 1934, and nothing is outside the realm of possibility in a Drexel-Ursinus game in any year. However, the most surprising thing that Ursinus could do today would be to score three or more touchdowns; and, by our method of figuring, it now seems the most logical, even though Ursinus has scored a total of but 17 points in its five games played.

THE DRAGON INVASION

TWO years ago an undefeated, confident Drexel team invaded Collegeville, thirsty for a victory over a revengeful Ursinus eleven. It was only the year previous that Mike La Bove and his mates surprised the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference champs with a 12-7 clubbing. Ursinus wanted revenge after that and got it—a 28-6 victory was sweet to Ursinus followers. Last year Drexel sought revenge, but failed in its quest on its home grounds. The proteges of McAvoy and Chase stopped the Dragons cold, 7-0. Again Drexel invades Collegeville, smarting under two defeats in a row and seeking revenge. Will she get it?

Ursinus boasts of an unusual team, and her record, although odd, matches Drexel's record of three victories and two defeats. However, the visitors rise to heights in the Ursinus game, for the Dragons consider the Grizzly contest their biggest game and always fight to the utmost. The series is even, each team holding two victories over the other. Drexel brings with her such veterans as Captain Potter, Hoff, Brevda, and Wallace, who remember previous Ursinus defeats. Ursinus is ready. Drexel is smarting. The stage is set and a great contest should be witnessed on Patterson Field today. Halas vs. McAvoy and Chase, Captain Potter vs. Captain Levin, Bear vs. Dragon, Philadelphia vs. the country, revenge vs. determination. Everything's ready for a grand old ball game!

CONFERENCE PREDICTIONS

THE Eastern Pennsylvania Conference race, which started on October 20 with the Ursinus-F. & M. game, promises to be even more exciting and closer than that of last year. Although only three contests have been completed to date, several surprises have already resulted, and it now appears to be anyone's race.

So far Ursinus and Gettysburg are leading the league. Victories over F. & M. by the Bears, and over Muhlenberg by the Gettysburg Bullets giving these two teams the edge in the opening two weeks of Conference play. Dickinson, the fifth member of the league, holds the middle position with only one tied game to its credit, the result of the 0-0 draw between the Red Devils and the Ursinus Grizzlies that occurred last Saturday at Carlisle.

It is probably too early in the season to make predictions based on the results up to this time, but it is, nevertheless, possible to point out why the pre-season dopsters had the outcome all wrong. When F. & M. came to Collegeville, they were unanimously slated for this year's championship in light of its victories over such strong teams as Rutgers and Lafayette. The Ursinus victory over the Lancaster Nevonians marked the first big upset for the year.

This 6-0 win turned the tide in favor of the Ursinus Bears, who were picked by all sports writers to overwhelm Dickinson on October 27. Again the dopsters were wrong, and the 0-0 tie that resulted put Dickinson in a position that would have to be reckoned with.

Gettysburg, usually a school of strong teams, is once again living up to her reputation, and the one victory over the Allentown Mules gave her a percentage equal to that of Ursinus.

Drexel-Ursinus Games of the Past

Captain Tropp scoring winning touchdown against Drexel in 1933. Ursinus won, 7-0.

DREXEL INSTITUTE, although added to the list of Ursinus football foes comparatively recently, is gradually becoming one of the Bears' most formidable rivals. The series started in 1928, when Ursinus journeyed to Philadelphia to meet the Dragons for the first time. There was a lapse in Drexel-Ursinus meetings until 1931, when the Bears again met the Dragons, and since that time a Drexel-Ursinus contest has been on the bill every year. The game this week is, therefore, the fifth of these annual contests.

The results of the four contests waged so far show that each team has tacked two victories to its belt. Back in '28 the Dragons clawed the Bears, 13-7, while the next meeting, in '31, was another Drexel victory, 12-7. Ursinus came back the following two years to chalk up decisive wins, scores 23-6 and 7-0, respectively, and thus evened up the series. Today's game is the bully of the series. In the total number of points scored, the Collegeville gridders lead with 49 to their credit, as compared with Drexel's 31. The Bears average over 12 points per game to Drexel's 7.

In 1931 Ursinus had a crackerjack team, having won five games, tied one and lost none at the time when they met Drexel. Among these victories was one over Lehigh, who had been rated far above the Bears' class. But Drexel nosed out the Grizzlies by a score of 12-7, and thus marred a previously clean slate. Ursinus had been leading until the beginning of the fourth quarter by the perilously close score of 7-6, both of which tallies were made in the second period. The Dragons had been the first to push the pigskin across the goal, after carrying the ball steadily up the field on straight running plays, but their try for the extra point was stopped. Ursinus immediately retaliated when Swede Paul blocked a kick on the Dragons' 16-yard line, and a score followed on a pass from Soeder to Miller. The extra point was good.

This turned the contest in Ursinus' favor, and it seemed another victory was imminent. But the turning point came in the final period, when Ursinus fumbled on the 40-yard line, and Drexel advanced the ball to the Bears' two-yard stripe. Here the Grizzly line tightened and held for three downs, but on the fourth, Knapp, of the Engineers, broke through for the yardage, a touchdown, and the game.

The next year the Philadelphians came to Collegeville confident of another victory. They had an undefeated team, and this was to be their seventh contest. Furthermore, they boasted of a line which was said to have outplayed every other line it had met so far that season. But the Bears were out for revenge for the unexpected defeat of 1931, following which Drexel had celebrated with a holiday, pep meetings, and a banquet, and had claimed "the championship of the small colleges of the East."

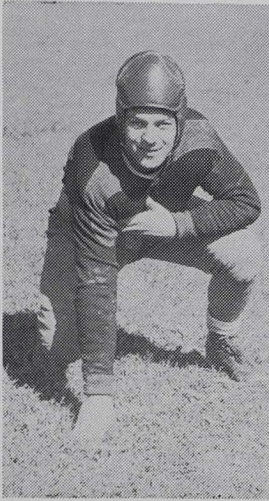

This time the unexpected again happened, but in Ursinus' favor. The Dragons were overwhelmed by a score of 23-6, the Bears scoring once in each of the first and second periods and twice in the last period. Ursinus led at the half, 14-0, but Drexel came out on the field for the final half looking like a new team. They received the kick-off in mid-field, and in five straight running plays had crossed the Ursinus goal. This was the end of their attack; Ursinus held the upper hand for the rest of the game, during which they tallied twice, the last touchdown being made by Parunak, Ursinus guard, who intercepted a pass and ran twenty-five yards for a score.

Last year, 1933, Ursinus again netted a victory over their Institute rivals. In a game marked by hard-playing on the part of both teams, yet full of fumbles which caused much damage to the Bears, the sons of Ursinus came out on the long end of a 7-0 score. Although the play was not one-sided, the Grizzlies clearly outplayed their rivals, and had the ball in a good scoring position at least four times. The only score of the contest which the Grizzlies were able to tack up was made by Captain Wally Tropp, who crossed the goal line in the second quarter on a line plunge from the two-yard mark. This win, the second for the Grizzlies, gave Ursinus an even break in the series. The final whistle today will signify new results.

WERE all gettin' used to the ups and downs of the Bears this year, kings of the football world one week, goats the next . . . which leads us to believe, however, that the men of McAvoy are versatile, to say the least . . . We've all heard practically enough allusions to the "Three Little Pigs," but couldn't we suggest for a nice combination in the center of the Ursinus line the "Two Big Barrels" (meaning Rinehart and Costello) who sometimes look as broad as long in their crouching positions?? . . . On the other hand, the Ursinus squad boasts of one of the smallest men in college football, none other than "Moon Mad" Fenimore, of Eagleville, 130 lbs. (no less) of amalgamated dynamite.

And, reader, did you know that Herman Bassman, the fighting back from Central High, received a trophy from his neighborhood admirers for scoring the touchdown that beat the mighty Penn eleven several weeks ago? The Grizzly Gridders have other claims to public notice in view of the fact that both Bounce Bonkoski and Mitch Fenimore play the same position in football and music alike . . . both are quarterbacks and both play the piano. And did you know that the Price brothers are twins . . . and that the two Johnsons on the squad are not related, neither are the varsity tackles, Sam and Rube Levin . . . while if we had Wally Tropp, 1933 captain back, we could place on the field at one time a backfield of masked Bears—Jakomas, Gaumer and Bonkoski being the members of this year's squad who also hide their faces? Incidentally, all three wear these masks to protect former broken noses.

This year there are eight candidates for end positions, which is more than Ursinus ever had out before for that post. In fact, the squad of 37 men, now all physically able, is the largest Grizzly squad assembled for quite some time. Among the nationalities on the squad we find representatives of England, Norway, Greece, Germany, Italy, Russia, Poland, Wales, France and Palestine . . . see if you can figure out who's who and from where . . . can you beat it? "German" Wildonger just pops in and claims he's a true Alpine Swiss. Oh, well . . . eight seniors, twelve juniors and seventeen sophomores is the way the squad reads by classes, and the whole bloomin' varsity line only averages 176 pounds—which isn't exactly the heaviest line in collegiate football. But the boys are in there all the time, and showed up Penn's and F. & M.'s 200-pound forward walls when they tangled with them in games past.

Tutors of The Dragons

Rae Crowther (top left) is coach of the Dragon line-men. Crowther hailed from Colgate University where he was a famous star. His success in turning out strong lines is a result of his skill in teaching both the theory and practice of line play.

Al Repscha (lower left), a one-time backfield star himself, has a two-fold position on the staff of the Drexel coaches. He assists Coach Halas in instructing the backfield men, and also has complete charge of the freshman team.

Walter H. Halas, Head Coach of Drexel, has been turning out Drexel's football teams for the past seven years. He received his own training in the sport at the University of Illinois, and upon graduating from that institution, went to Notre Dame as a backfield coach and a scout under Knute Rockne. He is one of the men responsible for that famed combination of backs known as the "Four Horsemen." By putting Rockne's technique into practice at Drexel, Coach Halas has succeeded in greatly improving Drexel's teams so that they are now on a par with the best of the small colleges in the East.

Why Do You Cheer?

Read This and Find
How College Yells Originated

COLLEGE cheers and yells have always seemed natural to the red-blooded student who is intent on seeing his Alma Mater carry off the day's laurels. But how often have we, as red-blooded "cheerers," stopped to think who first originated the particular yell or chant which at this moment might be issuing from the frenzied vocal chords of your head cheerleader and cohorts? Parke H. Davis, noted sports writer, has submitted an article which runs as follows about the "Origin of the College Cheer." Since it is fitting that such information be known at this particular moment, we are herewith publishing it in hope that it may enlighten those who were curious, others who cared not, and still others who, upon reading it, will not think college cheers and yells such foolish nonsense after all.

Let me add to your enjoyment of the game today by telling you the glorious story of the origin of the college cheer. This distinctive feature of American college life, now conquering all the world, is an aristocrat among American institutions, for it is a memorial of one of the most dramatic events of the Civil War, the march down Broadway of the Seventh Regiment of New York, April 20, 1861.

Men of all ages when engaged in conflicts have uttered cries and cheers. The war-whoops of the Indian is a cheer. The ancient Greeks charging to battle cried "Allalla," and militant Christianity has preserved this classic cheer in "Halleluiah." The warrior Jew shouted "Maccabee." The Japanese Samurai yelled "Banzai." The Teutons under Ariovistua facing the legions of Julius Caesar cried "R-r-rah."

And so when the Seventh Regiment of New York mobilized for war in their armory in Tompkins Market, April 20, 1861, they rang the rafters time and time again with the "Hurrah" that had come down to them through two thousand years of Anglo-Saxon strife. But, somehow, somewhere in that frenzied mass of men in that eventful day an unknown soldier suddenly conceived a new cheer in imitation of a rocket bursting in air, and the admiring appreciation of the spectators. "Siss! Boom! Ah!" This quickly was taken up by the soldiers and added to their regular cheer, to which others previous to them had added the "Tiger" of the old-time British Navy. Thus as the regiment that day swung out upon the street its thousand men in unison greeted the gauntlet of humanity, assembled to honor their departure, with the cheer, "Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah! Tiger! Siss! Boom! Ah!"

Away they went, the band playing national airs and regimental quick-steps, with the police relieving each other to clear the way, with lines unbroken by pressing crowds, surging like the billows of ocean, underneath a canopy of flags fluttering gloriously in the sun-light, past buildings streaming with banners, every porch, window and ledge and roof jammed with people, past Major Anderson, the hero of Fort Sumter, reviewing the Regiment, past crowds that blocked Chatham Street, that filled the Park, with handkerchiefs fluttering, with bayonets glistening, with feet resounding, figures erect and martial, and to the frequent inspiration of the Regimental war cry, "Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah! Tiger! Siss! Boom! Ah! the Seventh Regiment, nine hundred and ninety strong, marched down Broadway.

Entraining on flat cars in Jersey City the Regiment moved on to Washington. They passed through the town of Princeton at midnight. Here a hundred and more of the Northern students had assembled to greet and to cheer the soldiers. The collegians employed the old-fashioned cheer of the three hurrahs but the soldiers shouted back their snappy regimental cheer. While the train stopped in Princeton songs were sung, speeches were made and cheers exchanged. And then the whistle blew, the bell clanged, and the train rolled away into the night until its rear light burning to a point, disappeared in the darkness.

Glowing with patriotic fervor the collegians returned to their dormitories but as they walked along they tried out the new cheer. Soon they were giving it with the military sharpness of the soldiers. In that hour of glorious history was born the institution of the college cheer, for Princeton then and there adopted the cheer of the Seventh Regiment as their cheer.

The soldiers passing from trial to trial forgot the rocket cheer. But Princeton did not. It regularly was heard at Princeton during the war to celebrate northern victories and finally peace. With the return of the latter baseball burst forth. Cricket, too, was raging. Football was in the forming and rowing was more popular then than now. Into college sports Princeton carried the peculiar cheer. Yale heard it and responded with an adaptation of the frog chorus from Aristophanes, "Brek-ke-ke-kex." Amherst, Williams and Harvard followed and thus the college cheer spread throughout collegiate America.

Let the critics take a fall out of me for my version of the origin of the college cheer and in order to record its authorities I desire to say that I ran down this story in 1910. My authorities were Samuel Butz of the Seventh Regiment; General Frank Reeder, Colonel Howard Reeder and Chancellor Alexander T. McGill, of Princeton, all later of the Union Armies who participated in the events related.

And now, in fancy, let us consecrate one of the best cheers of the day from both sides of the stadium to the unknown soldier of the Seventh Regiment of New York, who April 20, 1861, unconsciously invented and established the institution of the COLLEGE CHEER.

EDITOR'S NOTE—We are now waiting for some authority to write an article on the "Whys and Whynots of College Cheer Leaders."

CONFERENCE PREDICTIONS

Neither Muhlenberg nor F. & M., however, are out of the running. F. & M., in an outside-conference game last week, showed some of her old form as she rolled up a 22-0 score against Swarthmore. This seems to indicate that the 6-0 loss to the Bears was truly just another touch of the Ursinus "jinx," and the Nevonians still have many backers who boost them as the Conference winner.

Whatever the outcome, the race promises to be one worth following closely; and as this seems to be the year for upsets, a forecast at this time is quite out of place. Nevertheless, the Bears are now at the front, and if they keep up the spirit that downed Penn and F. & M., they undoubtedly have a very good chance of remaining there.

Freshman Football Review

Swede Paul
Coach

AT the beginning of the year, prospects for a successful freshman season looked especially bright if the number of candidates reporting for practice can be taken as a criterion for success. For the group of forty-two men who answered Coach Swede Paul's call was one of the largest ever to report for freshman football at Ursinus.

The freshman football schedule this year consisted of only four games, but every one of these promised to be a tight contest. So far the Cubs have completed half their schedule and have netted one loss and one tie. Perkiomen Prep. piled up a total of nine points to the Little Grizzlies' none, while the Farm School game ended in a scoreless deadlock. Two more contests are listed for the Cubs, Brown Prep. and Wyoming Seminary.

In the two games so far completed, the freshmen have not shown up so badly as the results might indicate. The Perkiomen game, although marked by many fumbles and bad "breaks" on the part of both teams, was a closely fought battle. For almost the entire game the contest waged back and forth, neither side severely threatening the other. But with only two minutes to play, the visitors broke into the scoring column with a successful field goal, kicked from a rather difficult angle on the twenty-yard line. On the next kick-off the Frosh took to the air, and were unfortunate enough to send a pass into the arms of one of the opponents who broke loose on a twenty-five yard run for a touchdown. The game ended with this 9-0 score in Perkiomen's favor.

The 0-0 tie with National Farm School speaks well for the Freshman gridsters. This school has the reputation for putting out strong teams, and until the Ursinus Frosh-Farm School game last year, had the enviable record of being undefeated for four years, and not shut-out for eight years. Despite the fact that their team this year is not so good as average, it is still among the best of the prep school teams. The Cubs threatened to score twice during this battle, the best chance being the time when they drove the pigskin up to the farmers' one-yard line. A slippery, sluggish field put both teams on the defensive a great deal of the time and tended to slow up the play.

Coach Paul will spend the next two weeks in extensive practice in order to get a winning team in shape in time for the Brown Prep. game on November

10. The freshman season will close two weeks later when the Cubs journey to Wilkes-Barre to meet Wyoming Seminary. The Little Grizzlies have an exceedingly heavy club, but as yet have not mastered a smooth-working offense.
