Nov. 17, 1915-

Dear Mr. Clark.

My attention was called this evening to an article in a newspaper stating that Huntington Wilson & his wife had been divorced. Having heard nothing of trouble between them, the report came as a shock to me. I had passed a good many pleasant hours at their home in Washington, and from their bearing towards each other I inferred they were happy in their married life. I have always felt an attachment for Wilson and appreciated his good qualities, among which were fidelity & a strong sense of duty, and his wife I always found clever and attractive far beyond the average. I suppose they just drifted apart.

I hope you are well, & I am

Sincerely yours,

J B Moore.

Yr. friend,

J. Reuben Clark.
