TCE level too high?

Collegeville Water Poisoning Level Questioned

by Thomas A. Reilly

Toward the end of last summer, several communities in Montgomery County were shocked to learn that parts of their water supplies had been contaminated by the chemical Trichloroethylene (TCE). Many towns in this area, including Collegeville, were immediately alerted about this health hazard, and advised not to drink from the potentially dangerous water supply. Fresh water had been shipped in by the truckload, and residents were forced to leave their homes in order to obtain badly needed water. Although this catastrophe may seem to have subsided from the public eye, the question still remains as to how serious this problem still is.

Commercial Degresser

The initial source of the contamination was allegedly Superior Tube Company in Evansburg. That firm uses TCE as a degreaser. In late July, a large amount of the chemical was accidentally spilled, thereby polluting the water supply in nearby wells. Superior Tube had never admitted guilt for the contamination, but said they would accept liability for any TCE contamination within a mile radius of the plant.

Unfortunately, Superior Tube Co. is not the only manufacturer in the area that uses TCE. Other plants in nearby communities have actually experienced accidental spills. For this reason, many communities, including Collegeville, Trappe, and Skip-pack, have suspected contamination in their water supplies. A class-action suit has been filed against Dow Chemical Company, the manufacturer of TCE, and Superior Tube.

Test Samples

Health officials believe small percentages of TCE are of no danger in water supplies. However, various test samples have been taken by local officials at water outlets. These findings have indicated an extremely high level of the chemical which exceeds the so-called "safe level." Tests have indicated TCE has caused cancer in laboratory mice.

Greaseband to Present Return Performance In Helfferich

The College Union has contracted the popular group, the Fabulous Greaseband, for Friday night, November 16. The group performed at the College last January in what was considered to be one of the most successful Ursinus concerts in recent years. The Fabulous Greaseband originated in the Trenton, New Jersey area. The group consists of eight members, four of whom are vocalists with extremely broad vocal ranges.

The tour is called a "Rock 'n Roll Revue," and it consists of four different sets. During each of these sets, the members of the Greaseband wear different costumes reflecting the styles of the fifties and sixties era.

The music consists of songs by such artists as Jay and The Americans, Elvis, Chuck Berry, The Beach Boys, Bobby Darin, and The Coasters, to name a few. The Greaseband has been credited with having the ability to captivate the enthusiasm of a crowd, and keeping the atmosphere of the audience in a constant sense of excitement. Accordingly, this year the College Union is encouraging more student enthusiasm in the show. Prices will be given for those members of the audience who will be wearing the best "fifties" costumes.

Tickets for the fabulous Greaseband Concert (November 16) are available Monday to Friday in Wismer during lunch and dinner from noon to 12:30 p.m., and also at dinner from 5:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. Admission prices are $1.00 with student I.D. and $3.00 for guests.

Senior Plays Role As Big Brother

Many of the cases in the Big Brothers files present children with some challenging problems which need to be worked out. The agency is especially equipped to work with runaways, truants, ungodnernables, and those with social or behavioral problems associated with adolescence.

Because of the current trend toward the dissolution of the family unit, single parent families are three times as numerous as they were years ago. As a result, there are several unassigned kids on the agency's roster at any given time. All these kids want is a friend to give them time, encouragement, and interest. The need is especially great for Black volunteers. Students who feel they can make a commitment like Dave's for about 18 months are encouraged to call Roxanne Bobak, counselor at Montgomery County Big Brothers/Big Sisters in Norristown.

Timmy is one of nine children whose father is no longer living and is being raised by his mother. It is a happy household and his mother is friendly and cooperative. Tim simply needs an older male to share with him experiences, time and fun. Dave lives on the traditional student budget, so spending money is not a part of the relationship. In fact, when there are special events shared, very often the agency provides tickets, or Tim's mom might occasionally offer to help.

Between a rigorous study schedule and a pleasant social relationship with his girl, Dave makes time to share four to five hours each Saturday with Tim during which they may play hockey, racing cars (toy ones), or sit around casually enjoying each other's company.

The Walk Upon Stranger Roads
by Leo Batfish

It was Sunday evening, and many people had already gone to bed. Only those of us with the Pennsylvania Dutch Studies test the next morning were still awake. The volume of material we were responsible for was so incredible that we were probably going to be up to our knees in it.

The rain outside had been falling for hours and the wind had recently kicked up to gale force. A huge branch broke off the big oak tree and went crashing through a window of Pfahler. Hurricane Billy was on his way and he was already making his presence known. Only a clown would be out on a night like this.

The situation necessitated that I head over to Old Men's. My umbrella lasted only seconds in the wind and my jacket proved to be quite a sponge for the rain. The wind and rain's influence was the only logical result of my venture, but I had to forge on.

I entered the building through the rear of Curtis and started my search in the basement. Tom Laronius nearly trampled me under foot as he ran out the door, a caretaker to an electrical fire somewhere in the Collegeville business district.

My mission was fruitless, as the building was barren. I had no choice but to forge on. The doors to Myrin were locked, so I tried breaking in. A security guard spotted me and I bolted down the stairs and around Bomberger. A mutant squirrel on a late night acorn run crossed my path, causing me to go flying head first into a stupid mud puddle. A narrow escape.

Using my panty raid technique learned during pledging, I check­ ed out Keigwin and Clamer. Both of these houses suffered the same plight as the other places I have been. I thought about checking out residential homes, but a breaking and entering rap was not worth it. There has to be a simpler solution.

With diligence, I checked out all the dorms on 422. Maples, no. Hobson, no. South, no. DuRea, no. Of course, there is a good reason. Unfortunately, he had a room that was definitely out of hand. But what could I do? It was one final option.

In despera­tion, I rang President Richter's doorbell.

For sure he'd be able to help me out. The dog started barking and his light was on in the previously dark house. Wearing his Pierre Cardin velour robe and fur-lined slippers, a half-sleeping Mr. Richter answered the door.

If I hadn't had a good reason for standing on his doorstep at this hour, I would have been excused. I thought about it, but I did have a good reason. Unfortunately, he couldn't help me. You see, it was a typical Sunday night at Ursinus, and there was no toilet paper on campus.

A lot of people were over at the Union the other night watching the Flyers. Downstairs, Weasel was racking up the games on Paragon. In the campus curfews players played their evening round of ping pong.

At that same time, the Brodbeck mung monster was bombing unsuspecting targets with his vast weaponry. Herrn and Bruno was battling it out for the Cyrus Curtis Wrestling Championship at Scrappy watched in amazement. And over at 310, all was really 'great.'

In the whole campus seemed to have entertaining, non-academic things with which to occupy their time. But not me. I have a heavy English paper due in two weeks, and I was at the library just starting it. Somehow, I've got to stop leaving things until the last minute.

The topic of my paper seemed a bit interesting, "Subliminal Seduction on Public Television" and I was psyched for an A. But for some strange reason, research materials were not available. Who knows, maybe I'm a pioneer in an untouched field branded for the big time. Next joke.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

It is or should be no secret that several buildings on campus are in varying degrees of deterioration. As anyone who frequents the basements of Wismer and Bom­berger knows, these rooms have become the homesites for colonies of putrid mold.

Apparently it is rain that leaks from the ceilings of Bomberger but God only knows what is oozing into the classrooms below the kitchen of Wouhgi. One professor I know already relocated her class due to the obnoxious odors and drippings.

Whatever is dripping smells even more unsavory than the victuals being served above. Be­ing subjected to these odors at mealtime is torture for those having to struggle to keep from gagging during classes where some of us are having enough of a struggle just to keep our hunger at bay.

While the rooms of Wismer basement are in varying degrees of fungal mustiness, Bomberger a vapor is unlike anything one would expect. It becomes especially difficult to breathe in there during or after rain when the carpet becomes saturated with stinking mold.

Sheer age might account for some of this at Bomberger, but Wismer should be less prone to decay because of its relative newness. Besides, Wismer has a graver problem than annoying leakages - roaches.

Early at breakfast one morning, I stopped off at one of its front lobby bathrooms and upon flick­ ing the switch I was confronted with not one but two scads of these gross insects crawling bra­ zenly on the walls. Needless to say, my appetite, as well as the need to relieve myself was greatly diminished.

While leakages are rather graver than insects, Wismer food may be to them. Besides, if the fraternities' rooms were infested, imagine what crawls around in the kitchen when it's dark.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Bassett

To the Editor:

Well, Vietnam and Watergate are history. Anybody have a cause? What? Wismer Food? Sure, why not. Let's complain about not getting the right food at the right time, in the right quantity. Let's ignore the considerations of budget, efficiency, and waste. Hey! How about blaming Jim Sakell or the wait­ reesses? This is fun.

Listen. Wismer Hall is neither a restaurant nor mom's kitchen. Food is prepared in bulk. There is no matter how enticing Wismer food may be to them. Besides, if the fraternities' rooms were infested, imagine what crawls around in the kitchen when it's dark.

Sincerely,

displayed by the UC booters. Washington took advantage of Ursinus' inability to sustain any kind of offense with their own kick and run game. Defensive letdown by the Bears helped the hosts go up 1-0 count midway through the second half. Crippled by injuries to Esposito and Butz, the offense finally cashed in when Espo fed Drivin no form of net to cut the score to 2-1. That was as close as Ursinus could get despite many close calls. Jim Birchmeier added another outstanding performance to his credit in spite of the loss.

On Homecoming Day, all sports were at home except soccer, who journeyed to Chester to play Widener. The Bears used the game as target practice racking up a 5-1 win that wasn't as close as the score indicates. Jim Drevs proved to be the big gun for Ursinus scoring the hat trick. The offensive onslaught began with the kick off and UC's first score came at 20:15 with Drevs re-routing Jeff Jewitt's indirect kick. Six minutes later, Drevs headed in Brian Barlow's well-placed corner kick for a two goal margin. Widener closed to within one goal with thirty-one minutes gone in the first half.

In a great display of hustle, Bob Thomas beat the Widener goalkeepe to a pass from Barlow at 7:00 of the second period. Barlow added another goal later when he fed Greg Gifford in the slot for his first goal at the 21:00. Gifford then repaid the compliment feeding Drevs for his third goal late in the half. Tomorrow the Bears take to the road as they venture to Bethlehem to play very good Moravian squad. The hosts will be out to avenge a 2-0 loss to Ursinus which knocked them out of the play-off picture last year. Already out of post-season competition, the UC booters will still play their usual inspired game and can hope to defeat the MAC power again this year to cap a great season.

and half. The first ten minutes were played in the Bears' defensive end, forcing goalkeeper Joanne McPhillips to make several fine saves. With almost ten minutes gone in the half, West Chester produced their best scoring chance of the game. A Ram shot from the top of the circle dribbled through McPhillips' pads. If it had not been for the quick stick of sweeper Dawn Anthony, the game would have been tied. Anthony got around the ball and hit it out preventing the score.

The save woke Ursinus up. The Bears took control of the game and produced a few more scoring chances. Included were a break-away by inner Trisk Defennie which was stopped by an outstanding Defensive play. Also, a shot by Tweed missed scoring by the smallest of margins.

West Chester then attempted a last ditch effort in the closing minutes. Several nice plays by halfback Sue Dravin prevented any Ram threat. The Bears needed only to finish out the game errorless, which they did, winning it by the score of 1-0.

I started contemplating life and times, when my thoughts were interrupted by a high-pitched scream from behind a stack of books. Rape in Myrin's reference section? Be serious. But it was of a curious nature, so I decided to check it out.

A crowd was already gathering as I arrived on the scene. A freshman girl was writhing in pain on the floor trying to fight back tears. The cause of this outburst was that she had stepped on a tack. That'll teach her to leave her shoes on when she's in the library. Stupid hoag.

By now I would imagine all of you readers have correctly labeled me an avowed disco-hater. While nothing could be closer to the mark, you disco diehards may have been surprised to find myself praising the current achievements of one group of music fans. I think a great deal of today's rock 'n roll has become an avowed disco-hater.

While nothing could be closer to the mark, you disco diehards may have been surprised to find myself praising the current achievements of one group of music fans. I think a great deal of today's rock 'n roll has become an avowed disco-hater. However, there isn't the slightest point: Foreigner. I know I've ruined some of you by writing in Pick Up Drummer Terry Bozzio. The trio wasted no time in juggling the Spectrum audience into a dance, with a combination of new music and a public sound mix. They rallied with a respectable version of "In The Dead Of Night" and a good jam that followed, but that was the extent of their performance. They played for less than an hour with only one encore, which originally prolonged the pain.

Tull's entrance was colorful, to say the least, enhanced by large fish nets which Anderson hoisted to full length before the first tune began. The first five efforts, all from the new album, rallied the audience to go along. Typically when they played the new single from Stormwatch, which has already received considerable comment, they charmed the crowd with seasoned versions of "Skating Away" and "Thick as a Brick." Pacified by the nostalgia, the audience settled back to listen a little too soon as Tull caught them off-guard with the all too familiar opening to "Aquarius." The band made a quick exit and waited for the torch display of the awakened audience.

The band reached further into its past with "Too Old to Rock and Roll" at the beginning of their next set, and then featured their new bass player, Dave Pegg, in a song of his own composition. Pegg was added to the line-up just before the tour started to replace former bassist John Glasscock, who underwent open heart surgery in 1977 and has been unable to tour since that time. The loss of Glasscock has surely taken away from the band's sound, but Pegg proved himself quite proficient at his task.

Once again, Tull caught the audience offguard with the sudden opening chords to "Cross Eyed Mary," a vintage Tull rocker from Aquabong. With the crowd at their mercy again, Tull left the stage again to build up to the climax of their latest release. They returned with Anderson's amazing exhibition of flute mastery which led into traditional versions of "God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen" and "Bourree." John Evans' piano cadenza immediately after signaled the end of the song. Tull brought up their acoustic bass solo. but not in a subsequent study using rats. Furthermore, some health officials have speculated the chemical may be a primary cause of liver disease. It is possible, however, TCE directly affects some persons, while it has no known effect on others.

The important question that remains is how can the problem be remedied? At present there are two methods that could purify the water supply; unfortunately, both are extremely costly. With an expected cost of close to $500,000, one alternative is to install carbon filters in local water plants. Another method is to construct large scale plants and inject air into the water. This would cause the TCE to rise to the surface, where the chemical would evaporate.
The Best Of The Seventies-Part 2

by Jay Roker

Part II reviews the top groups of the decade and all I heard was “[name] Bruce Springsteen and The East Street Band!” While I agree, The East Street Band is an entity in itself, Clarence Clemons & Co. really owe their notoriety to Mr. Springsteen, whom you will find listed below as I present the top individual performers of The Seventies.

Neil Young — Mr. Young wins out over Dylan and Springsteen in other reason than sheer volume. The man has done so much incredible stuff it’s almost unbelievable. Neil Young has outwitted, outplayed and outperformed everybody else in this decade, including Dylan and Springsteen. He is undeniably a genius and probably one of the last real heroes rock ‘n roll has to offer. And the new record is awesome. Bruce Springsteen — I say that hasn’t already been said? You’ve heard his records. You’ve seen him perform. Born To Run is one of the American rock ‘n roll albums of all time. And Springsteen live is, well, Springsteen live. And all right. The East Street Band probably could make it on their own, but not with Clarence as lead singer.

Pat Conroy — Okay, so Dylan did release a handful of mediocre albums, but a half-bad Dylan is still good, isn’t it? Well, I think so, as do a couple million other Dylanites who own a copy of all his records, good or bad. Blood on the Tracks and Slow Trains Comin’ are certified masterpieces, and that’s more than most musicians accomplish in a lifetime.

Jackson Browne — The master of the shimmering California rock sound. Mr. Browne’s seventies output has been nothing short of phenomenal — five exceptional LP’s ranging from For Everyman to Running On Empty. There’s no denying Browne’s poetic genius as evidenced by such tunes as “Your Bright Baby Blues” and “Fountain of Sorrow.” And if you’ve ever seen him live on stage, you know that Jackson Browne is undoubtedly a master of his craft.

Billy Joel — This man will always have a special place in my heart. I’ve followed his career from the very beginning — from the terrible production troubles of Cold Spring Harbor to the bumpy road that is 52nd Street. But in between there was a hell of a lot of good music. Make that great music. Turnstiles is a gem, and “You’re My Home” is one of the best songs ever written. Billy Joel’s story reads like “The Rocky of Rock ‘n Roll.” And no one could be more deserving.

Rod Stewart — But not the prefacing of the Bang Bangs, Blondes Have More Fun is without a doubt the biggest platinum turkeys of all time. However, Rod Stewart has more than makes up for those blemishes and more than makes up for the bad Blondes may be, in Fact Picture will undoubtedly be on every rock ‘n roll record of the Seventies. And Rod is a gritty performer. But hell, Johnny Rotten made Stewart his number one enemy and the guy was never alone enough to make you love the man.

Joni Mitchell — I must confess I am not a big Joni Mitchell fan. Before she was too okay and now she’s too jazzy. But you have to give her her due. As a pure artist she has no equal. Joni Mitchell is also as sincere as they come. Something the music industry could use a whole lot more of. A genuinely charming performer.

Linda Ronstadt — How about that, two females in a row! And two completely different females at that. Ms. Rondstadt is an interpretive singer with the face of a model and Ms. Mitchell is a singer/songwriter with... well, anyway she’s sincere. Linda has Ciggarin in the future with the sultry looks and she has the ability to make other people’s songs her own, kinda in the same way Elvis Presley did. Does that make her “The Queen of Rock ‘n Roll”? Lou Reed — true the bulk of his career has been shaky to say the least, but when Lou Reed is on target he’s as awesome. As the leader of The Velvet Underground he was rock’s most rebellious figure. As a solo act the rebelliousness turned into mystique until no one was sure exactly where Lou Reed was coming from. And really, I guess, no one still does. But listen to “Sweet Jane” and you probably won’t care.

Bob Seger — if for no other reason, because Mr. Seger is rock ‘n roll’s hardest working individual. He’s been banging away for quite some time now and the man cannot get no notice. He’s not the world’s greatest singer, not the most prolific writer, and not a great musician, in fact he doesn’t waste a bit of what he does have and rates a hundred points with me anytime. That’s enough for one of the few really great live records.

David Bowie — if not for the unevenness of his latter day work, Bowie would be a lot higher on this list. But let’s face it. David Bowie has tried to just about everybody recently — he’s curried favor — and has failed miserably. His early offerings were charmers, however, and he remains a pioneer of sorts in the art-rock world.

Elton John — At this point in his career, Elton John sounds and looks tired. Trouble is he’s been that way for years now. Mr. John is just another in a long list of performers whose music has gotten progressively worse over the decade. Again, though, some of his earlier efforts were knockouts and he still does put on quite a show. Personally, I never liked him.

James Taylor — I never bought a James Taylor record and I can’t figure out why. I guess I’m just not a mellow individual by nature.

This guy is, however, the best at what he does. Until recently I had never heard a J.T. tune I didn’t like — Then along comes Traffic Jam and the streak to heck. This is a man called Van Morrison — Again, why don’t I own any Van Morrison Albums? No, it’s not because he sings like Demorenhence working on care. Although Van’s mumbling does tend to get annoying at times. Frankly, I don’t know why. I really enjoy a bit of his work. And he’s Irish, which is reason enough alone to take the guy into your heart. Really, though, as a lyricist Van Morrison has few peers. A unique individual indeed.

Graham Parker — because I think he’s better than Elvis Costello. In fact, Costello owes his musical existence to Parker. Graham Parker was fostering New Wave ideals long before Costello or anyone even thought about it. Although only later a couple record really captures him on vinyl. This man is destined to become one of the genuinely dynamic recording stars of the Eighties. Incredible potential.

The Tiger Comes Out Of The Tank

Remember when millions was spent to sell us the tiger in the tank?

Well, Mr. Jay F. Cornell of Selective Products Co. is so upset with “Big Oil” that he’s going to take the guy and us off, he took the tiger out of the tank to bite “Big Oil” where it hurts!

Mr. Cornell has started a one man crusade against “Big Oil”!!! He has designed a CRUDE-A-GRAM for the use of anyone who feels like he does, and he has a CRUDE-A-GRAM, which sells for $3.95, is absolutely FREE if you purchase the Tiger T-Shirt and show everyone you told “Big Oil” off ! The minimal profits from the T-Shirt goes right back into manufacturing more CRUDE-A-GRAMS, which is Mr. Cornell’s way of telling “Big Oil” to shove it.

And that’s just what the CRUDE-A-GRAM says! The complete CRUDE-A-GRAM comes to you ready for mailing to your choice of “Big Oil” companies, or a few of their political friends in D.C.

It contains a 1 oz. bottle of their own brand of “Genuine Alaska Pipeline Crude Oil” wrapped in toilet paper (because Mr. Cornell is very thoughtful) with a letter saying why they can’t do what they can do with it!!!

So, when you order a Tiger T-Shirt and show everyone you told “Big Oil” off, Mr. Cornell will donate a CRUDE-A-GRAM to send you to “Big Oil.”

For more details, or to order your name brand, top quality, 2-color T-Shirt for $7.95 plus $1.50 to help offset the cost for shipping the T-Shirt and FREE CRUDE-A-GRAM, write to Jay F. Cornell of Selective Products Co. Dept.-CP, 2504-A Transportation Ave., National City, CA 92050.

More Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

It has recently come to my attention that the registration of the students of Ursinus College has granted Dr. Robert V. Cogger, President of Education, tenure. Upon hearing this news, four student teachers of the Class of ’79 (myself included) and one academic department to bring attention to obvious shortcomings and double standards in Dr. Cogger’s student teacher evaluation system, the overwhelming lines of communication were squeezed shut, and pleas for a one-year in the granting of tenure were thus now deaf, formerly liberal ears.

Three fellow student teachers and I were put off with pleasantly worded letters promising “action” in regards to the complaints surrounding Dr. Cogger’s student teaching practices. A blatant fault in an academic standard and gifted educational institution was passed by, and now there remains no options open to releasing Dr. Cogger from the future should another student(s) bring forth similar complaints.

I have not written to demand perfection or fairness. Twenty-two years of life education have taught me that these two terms exist only in the mind of the person willing to accept the impossible. Everyone should keep them to their fullest extent. I have written to express a hushed piece of information in the hopes that it may come about again in the future. Should the cries of question arise as to why I did not choose other avenues of communication which are more intimate, I shall answer by saying that I exhausted every possible form of more intimate communication. Perhaps some other approach will bring about some needed change.

Sincerely,

George W. Young Class of ’79

Volleyball Team Continues Up And Down

by Tracy Nadzak

The Girls' volleyball team has certainly proven that they know the true meaning of the word "volley." They not only volley the ball, but the game points and the wins and losses. In their last five matches the girls secured two wins for themselves, and gave away three losses.

On Tuesday the girls faced a tough tournament team from the University of Pennsylvania. In the first game, the girls battled for points in their traditional "one for you, one for me" pattern. But then upset the former totally lopsided, and aided with excellent scoring opportunities. It wasn't until 15 minutes were gone in the half that a goal was scored. During a fight for the advantage, Swarthmore's play deftly kept the game tied at zero as the half ended.

In the second half Swarthmore took over from where they left off, swarming all over Ursinus' defense. Several excellent plays by backs Michelle Speck, Sue Montico and Kit Anderson gave hope to Ursinus' victory. Mojta's play deftly kept the game tied at zero as the half ended.

The JV team has been producing a similar spasmatic season. Last Thursday at Immaculata they showed considerable improvement in their skills to pace a 2-1 win. Unfortunately, they followed with two losses, against Albright on Monday and Penn on Tuesday.

Hockey’s 3 & 4 Finish Season

by Jean Morrison

The third and fourth field hockey teams finished out their seasons on Tuesday against Swarthmore. The third team suffered a loss, thus, finishing with a 5-21 slate. The fourth team rolled, pushing their record to two wins, one loss and a tie.

The third team lost a tough one as they were shutout by Swarthmore, 2-0. The game started out with Ursinus dominating the play. Several good shots taken by inner Stephanie DeSantis and wing Jan Gable were cleared away by the Swarthmore defense. About 15 minutes into the game Swarthmore began to take control of the game. Swarthmore took seven good shots forcing Bear goaltender Barb Mojta into making many tough saves. Mojta's play deftly kept the game tied at zero as the half ended.

In the second half Swarthmore took over from where they left off, swarming all over Ursinus' defense. Several excellent plays by backs Michael Speck, Sue Montico and Kit Anderson gave hope to Ursinus' victory. Mojta's play deftly kept the game tied at zero as the half ended.

The JV team has been producing a similar spasmatic season. Last Thursday at Immaculata they showed considerable improvement in their skills to pace a 2-1 win. Unfortunately, they followed with two losses, against Albright on Monday and Penn on Tuesday.

The Varsity team will travel to LaSalle this weekend for a four-teen-team tournament and one of their last chances to tip their 7-10 record in the direction of a winning season. Both teams will be venturing to Drexel for their final away match on Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Hockey Ties Rams, 1-1

by Jean Morrison

Despite good hustle by the entire team, the Juniour Varsity hockey players managed only to tie the Rams of West Chester in the Homecoming Day action.

The Bears got off to a strong start. Ursinus kept the ball in West Chester's territory in the beginning of the game. The Rams then took the ball up the field and lost it at approximately midfield. Inner Pass Karen Kelley took the ball down the field dodging several Ram players in the process. When she took a shot at the top of the circle, it dribbled through the goaliekeeper's pads. Center Tracy Cherry banged the ball in for a 1-0 Bear lead. The rest of the half was dominated by the Bears with several more scoring chances taken.

In the second half Ursinus still controlled the ball. During this time, they put the game out of reach with two more goals, both from center Terry Mc Kee. Mc Kee scored the fourth goal with a picture-perfect score. She took the ball from the top of the circle all alone, dodged a Swarthmore player, and getting around the ball beat the goalie with a perfectly angled shot. Her second goal came from a beautiful cross from Eichlin. Mc Kee simply redirected the pass into the goal. Swarthmore added a goal of their own with approximately five minutes left in the game. That was, however, too little too late and Ursinus held on to win, 1-4.

Cross Country Wins Two More

Continued from page 8 qualifying meet are excellent, and thus is the possibility that the team will be at the national championship meet.

Throughout the interview, Dave stressed that the key to all the past success and for near future hopes is the depth of the squad. Each of the top seven runners has missed at least one meet this season, but the "bench" was made certain that the team did not miss a stride. Garner also looked forward to success next season, as there are no seniors on this year's team. Let's hope that the depth and tightness of this year's team holds for the next several weeks, as Garner and Co. go for the laurels that so cruelly evaded them last year.

Amidst the Homecoming rush of alumni, queen candidates and dinner dancers, the football team brightened the festive mood with their first win of the ’79 season. They rolled to a 36-13 victory over Lebanon Valley in what was obviously the Bears’ finest overall performance of the season. The Bears piled up an impressive 400 yards of total offense to the Dutchmen’s 287.

Craig Walck completed 14 of 18 passes for 204 yards and rushed for 33 yards, scoring a TD in his own in the fourth quarter. He threw his first of two TD passes early in the first quarter to halftime Jeff Bright on a screen play. Bright caught the pass and then dodged blockers and tacklers for 45 yards until he found the goal line. Mark Doran’s extra point attempt was good and Ursinus grabbed an early 7-0 lead. Walck wasn’t satisfied yet, though. Brian Jewitt recovered a fumble on the Lebanon Valley 45 yard line to set up another Ursinus TD. One play later found Jay Repko cruising into the endzone with another Walck TD pass. Doran’s kick missed its mark this time, leaving the score 13-0. LV bounced back quickly with a TD, but the Bears held on for the 13-0 win.

Five Honored

by Tracy Nadzak

Athletic awards always add a sparkle to the already jubilant air of Homecoming festivities. This year the worthy recipients honored during the football game were Marge Watson, Jim Moyer, John Curley, Gina Buggy and Nick Saba.

The Bruin Club opened the award-giving ceremonies by presenting two awards to individuals who have made outstanding contributions to Ursinus’ athletic program. First to be honored was Marge Watson, Class of ’52, who has been successful in establishing Ursinus’ national caliber lacrosse teams over the past years. Last year Ursinus was runner up in the National Lacrosse Tournament.

Jim Moyer, who for seven years faithfully served as equipment manager and head of field maintenance, was the other recipient. Although he is presently

Cross Country Wins Two More

by Martin Sacks

Amidst last Saturday’s Homecoming festivities, one of Ursinus’ most successful teams closed its regular season in a quite appropriate manner. Led by junior Dave Garner, the cross country team defeated Moravian 15-46, and Albright by a 15-49 score in a double-dual meet.

In a startling first place finish with a time of 26:37, Garner, spurred on by the crowd at the football game, smashed the old course record, which had stood for two seasons, by 32 seconds. Following Dave in second place was freshman Paul Graeff, whose time of 27:18 was the best third ever run on the Ursinus course. Finishing third was sophomore Jon Perotto, who was followed by fellow Soph Pat Wardell. Made from among the first four positions, Ursinus collected six of the first seven places.

The tradition of Ursinus victories raised the Harrier’s record to 11-0 in dual meets this season. The team also has a 23 straight dual meet winning streak that leads into the last two seasons, with the last loss occurring in last year’s first meet. Currently, the runners are preparing for the post-season meets. This Saturday, the MAC championships are to be held at Lebanon Valley College. The following Saturday will see the teams invade the Island for the Mid-Atlantic Regional Qualifying meet. From this meet, the top five teams will go to the NCAA Division III championships next week. The qualifying meet also sends the top 12 individual runners on the five qualifying teams to the national meet.

In an interview with Dave Garner, he stated that he felt that success would be attained by the Harriers over the next few weeks.

Hockey Edges Rivals

by Jean Morrison

For the first time in five years the Ursinus Field Hockey Team defeated rival West Chester State. The win was a part of a run of wins for Ursinus athletic teams on Homecoming Day, October 27. The final hockey score was 1-0, and the win boosted the Bears’ record to 10-0 on the season. The combination of eight wins, three losses and a tie.

The beginning of the game was played at midfield, with several officials on hand from officials to different universities to make sure each penalty call was correct. The bear defense, despite Traci Davis’ many crosses on goal, had an adverse effect on the Bear goalie for a good part of the game. Ursinus’ defense, led by co-captains Jan Zanger and Kim Thorne, kept the Bear return to Lebanon Valley for the Mid-Atlantic Regional Qualifying meet. From this meet, the top five teams will go to the NCAA Division III championships next week. The qualifying meet also sends the top 12 individual runners on the five qualifying teams to the national meet.
