Dear Sir:

It so happens that I am now publishing in The Yale Review an article on the entente of the English-speaking peoples, and have arranged for another article dealing with the subject from a different point of view. In the circumstances, I do not feel as if I could take on still another article on this subject. Nor does the second subject which you propose particularly appeal to me just now. At least, I should like to have the subject a little more definitely defined before committing myself to it.

Very truly yours,
