January 4, 1918.

Colonel E. M. House,
115 East 53rd Street,
New York City.

My dear Sir,

In view of your special relations to the President and of your very important part in the foreign relations and other concerns of the United States in connection with the war, I take the considerable liberty of enclosing to you copies of letters I have to-day addressed to the President, to the Secretary of War, and to the Secretary of State. The same considerations make me wish that you should be good enough to bear in mind my desire to be of service in case, as might well happen, there should occur to you yourself some work in which I might be qualified to be of useful assistance.

I am, my dear Sir,

Yours faithfully,
