Dear Hunt:

This is terrible - my not having acknowledged your letter which came with the enclosure back in March, when we were at the end of the reorganization fight.

The chapter of your book came at a time when it was absolutely impossible to get it in to the papers, and when there was no use trying to get it in the record. I tried to get my own stuff into the record without any success. It couldn't be done, apparently.

Now we're off on a new fight against the big spending and pump-priming folly. When will you be home? I'd like to talk to you. I wish we could have another class dinner just for the sake of seeing you, not to mention Joe's drunkenness over fundamentals. He really is a good egg and I love to see him, drunk or sober.

Best regards to you both.

Yours as ever,

Amos
