Poem by Thaddeus Kenderlein

p. 45

Then pies made in two different ways,
As was the fashion in those days.

No wonder Robert Winder said

He wished he'd been a Dutchman's lad,
For then he'd had that true pleasure feel
Of having pie at every meal.

A long, low row of wooden sheds
For sheltering of gig and chair,
A solid horse-block at one end
For use of horsemen riding there.
