Got Beat Skis?

Clinic Offered For Ski-Bums

Ursinus students, faculty, and administration will have an opportunity to attend a free, "on campus ski clinic" on November 9th at 1:00 p.m. in the Utility Gym at Ritter Center. Sponsored by Pepsi Cola and the Big Two, Jack Frost & Big Boulder Ski Areas, the clinic will be conducted by ski school directors and the World Class skier Gerhardt Zimmerman.

Tips on physical conditioning, learning-to-ski, improvement of skiing, racing, ski safety, and equipment care and clothing are among the planned agenda for the clinic. Along with ski films and equipment demonstrations, the Ursinus community will be able to ask questions and learn anything necessary to get started or become more advanced in the sport of skiing.

The Big Two ski areas, Jack Frost and Big Boulder, are located in the Western Poconos, about 1 hour and 45 minutes from downtown Philadelphia. Both are equipped with 100% snowmaking over terrain varying from novice to expert. The two areas contain dining and lodging facilities along with ski shops where equipment rentals are available.

Senior Theresa Pavletich, the Campus Resources Intern, is responsible for bringing the clinic to Ursinus. She comments, "Pepsi conducts similar clinics in most of the colleges in the area. It should be really interesting and I'm looking forward to participating in it. Hopefully, there will be a good turnout!"

Outstanding Choral Students Chosen

Four Ursinus College students are participating in the Pennsylvania Choral Festival, held at the University of Pittsburgh's Johnston, Pa. campus on November 4, 5, and 6. Students from colleges and universities throughout the state will participate in the event. Selected by audition to represent Ursinus at the Festival are senior Ann E. Edris, sophomore Holly Jayne Hayer, sophomore James Doghramji, and sophomore Michael A. Renninger.

Edris, a psychology major from Mt. Gretna, Pa., holds offices for several Ursinus organizations. She is president of Pi Nu Epsilon, the national honorary music fraternity; vice-president of the Whitiens, the women's honor society; treasurer of Kappa Delta Kappa sorority; and a member of Pi Gamma Mu, the national honorary social science fraternity. A Dean's Honor List student, Edris is the recipient of both the Centennial Scholarship for academic excellence and the Presidential Scholarship for citizenship. Edris' future plans include a career in the computer science industry.

Hayer, a Spanish major with a minor in business administration, is also an active member of the Ursinus Community. Upon entrance to Ursinus, Hayer received honors and her freshman year was indicative of her ability in academics. During her first year she was a Dean's Honor List student and also received the Whitian prize for achieving the highest academic average among freshman women. Hayer is also a member of the Ursinus College Choir and the Meistersingers, and was named to the 1981 State College Choir. In addition, she is the secretary of the Spanish Club and received the Centennial Scholarship for academic excellence.

A biology major from Havertown, Pa., Doghramji also received Honors Upon Entrance to Ursinus. He was a Dean's List student his freshman year and received the Gulf Oil, Inc. Honors Scholarship given to an outstanding freshman. Doghramji actively participates in the College Choir and the Meistersingers, is a member of the Christian Youth Fellowship and Pi Omega Delta fraternity, and plays on an intramural softball team. Doghramji plans a career in medicine for the future.

Renninger, a philosophy and religion major from Pottstown, Pa., is also an active participant of Ursinus organizations. He is president of the Ursinus College Choir and the Meistersingers, and was named to the 1982 State College Choir. Renninger is the conductor of the Collegiate Choir of Pottstown; he also holds membership in the Newman Society of Catholic students, the student Christian Association, the Spanish Club, and Socraetic Club. A Dean's Honor List student his freshman year, he received Honors Upon Entrance, and also received the Centennial and Presidential scholarships. Renninger plans a career in the priesthood after graduation.

Two Ski Instructors at The Big Two Ski Center prepare to demonstrate skiing concepts at Ursinus College on November 9.

U.C. Poses For Posterity

by Rosemary Wuenschel '86

Some of the student body, faculty and administration of Ursinus College were immortalized on film when the College union sponsored its tenth annual record-breaker at noon on Friday, October 15.

Hundreds of participants formed a large semicircle for the panoramic picture along U.S. Route 422. Using a revolving tripod, the photo was hot in five segments to form a 180-degree view of the College's front campus.

The photograph recreates a picture of the same portion of the campus taken in 1912 when the college's total student population was only 134. Today Ursinus enrolls nearly 1200 students in its day school, nearly 1000 adults in its evening school and employs more than 200 faculty and administrators. Though all weren't present for the recordbreaker, co-chairpersons Holly Coffin and Inge Karleberg were pleased with the attendance.

the Union sponsored a raffle of tickets purchased before the event. The third place winners of the drawing included Maurice Meskovitz, Mark Hinkel, Ed Woodland and Eric Lanyes who received certificates to Zack's Place. The door prizes awarded to the second place winners, Craig Turner, Bev Bergey, Ed Stemmler, Lorie Cramer and Jim Nowrey, were gift certificates to the college Book Store. The first place prize, dinner for two at H.A. Winston's went to Peggy Staiger. Any of the winners who have not picked up his or her door prize may do so with his or her college ID card.

An enlarged copy of the 1982 record-breaker photo will be on display soon in the college union. Smaller reproductions are expected to be available for purchase in the near future. A fourteen inch copy will cost $2.50 and a twenty inch one will cost $7.50.

Letters to the Editor

Greeks Piqued

To the Editor:

Once again, the administration is criticizing Greek organizations, this time because of overly difficult sorority pledging. Why, for once, cannot sororities and fraternities be appreciated for their positive aspects? I point out that were it not for Greeks, this campus would be void of any sense of differentiation. The administration refers to these groups as cliques. However, they are not cliques, but groups of individuals who choose to associate with each other because of common interests like the structural organization of the real world. In addition, Greek societies, especially those most criticized, bring social life to this dead campus, which is something necessary for us to learn to interact with people as well as try to retain sanity.

Every individual has the voice to refuse Greek pledging. As it is said, nothing worthwhile is easily gained; neither is Greek membership. Those who choose to join know what is in front of them, and the final reward is being associated with a group of individuals who are a pseudo family. Not only does harder pledging make for a more unified family, but it gives the individual a greater sense of security, and from this grows the ability to be more outgoing.

In conclusion, I strongly disagree that the nineteen days of sorority pledging are as difficult as our leaders suggest, especially in comparison to the benefits. I would go through them again simply to gain the trust and lasting relationships I hold with my sister; and damn anyone who ever suggests that I'm not an individual.

President's Corner...

by President Richard P. Richter

All pre-med students worth their whites will want to be in Bomberger Hall on Sunday, November 7, at 2:30 p.m. It's probably the one and only time that they will ever see assembled on one stage the president of the American Medical Association, a Nobel laureate in biomedicine, and one of our own outstanding alumni physicians.

Each year the Founders' Day convocation is devoted to a special emphasis in higher education. Last year the emphasis was upon the achievements of women. In a prior year we concentrated upon athletes. (Next time you are in the lobby of Helfferich Hall, check the big plaque that displays the names of about sixty-five alumni who have been cited by Ursinus as our all-time best athletes.)

Sunday's event will acknowledge the long-standing emphasis upon pre-medical education at Ursinus. Dr. William Y. Rial, current head of AMA, will deliver the principal address. In addition to Dr. Rial, honorary Doctor of Science degrees will be conferred on Dr. Baruch S. Blumberg, who won his Nobel Prize in 1976 for discovering the causative agent in hepatitis B-virus, and on Dr. Clarence S. Livingood, class of 1932, who is chairman emeritus of dermatology at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit. Dr. Livingood is also team physician for the Detroit Tigers.

Pre-med students may wonder how Ursinus came to have such a strong pre-med program. In the lobby of the Life Science Building you will find a portrait of Professor J. Harold Brownback, class of 1915. He was one of the principal builders of our pre-med reputation. After studying and teaching at the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Brownback came back to Collegeville in 1926 to head the biology program. Dr. Brownback had a crusader's zeal to prepare Ursinus students for the medical schools in Philadelphia. In his era, the course offerings in sciences became so rigorous that anyone passing them was fairly well assured of moving with ease into the first year of medical school. Meanwhile, Dr. Brownback cultivated his contacts with the medical schools and gave Ursinus in the region a highly respected reputation among medical educators.

When Dr. Brownback died in 1952, a protege, Dr. Paul R. Wagner, class of 1932, took over as chairman of biology. He was the second early builder of the program. He carried forward the academic rigor set in the Brownback era and added a special warmth of personality. Having taken freshman biology under him, I can directly attest to both his academic rigor and his personal warmth.

By the time of his death in 1970, our preeminence in pre-med education was securely in place. The complete story would embrace the work of more than these two men, but they are key figures to know about.

USGA Notes

The USGA and Sigma Rho Lambda sponsored a Halloween party last Saturday night at Ritter Center. The results were plenty of good times and a satisfied crowd of approximately three hundred people. Acknowledgements of a job well done go out to Dave Borgstrom, USGA president, and the brothers of Sig Rho. The efforts of these persons should be recognized and appreciated.

The USGA is now reviewing applications for the student openings on the Judiciary Board. This is a decision making committee that handles disciplinary cases. Cases reach the J-Board by the request of the defendant, or by a request from the appropriate dean. According to the Student Handbook, a student has a guaranteed right to a Judiciary Board review. The committee calls a formal hearing in which a given case is heard, and pertinent questions are asked. The decisions reached are final, unless they are overruled by the President of the College.

The Judiciary Board is empowered to make disciplinary decisions ranging from academic warnings to full expulsion or suspension from the College. The student applicants for the vacated positions will be reviewed by the USGA executive board, and the best candidates will be chosen.

The Men's Campus Council had its first organizational meeting on Tuesday, November 2. The MCC has the responsibility of handling all complaints from the men's dormitories. All male students with any grievances are urged to see any member of the MCC, and action will be taken.

Ropes And Chains or Can You Eat Plasterboard?

by David J. Evans '83

Hey kids. Did you notice the latest changes on campus? No, they are not serving real food in Wismer, but, low and behold, Mr. Ed got a new milk machine. Now that's a real solution to that nasty problem of long lines, like the ones that build up at what has become popularly known as "Dead Man's Curve" or "Barnes' Bend." You know, where the cups coffee, tea, hot water, milk, sugar, and straws are all located within six inches of each other, and where the counter convolutes itself into a 225 degree angle. Every time that I get to "Barnes' Bend," I, for some strange reason, am reminded of the Cincinnati Who concert. I can't seem to remember exactly why though. Anyway, the milk machine is fine. Now if only I could get something out of the "new" ice machines. I hear that the guy who sold them to Ed is the same guy that sold the Bio department white blackboards. Word is out that he is now selling some big bridge in Brooklyn. Anyone interested should contact me between twelve and one in the Wismer cafeteria. He was kind enough to give me his name and address and allow me to transact this sale for him, for a commission of course.

Wilkinson fans, take notice, I finally found out why the bills are so high when maintenance comes to fix the holes in the wall. I also found out what they do with the extra plasterboard. You know the holes that I mean — the ones that magically appear on weekends, the ones that nobody knows anything about. Well, maintenance uses a four x eight sheet of plasterboard to fix a one x two hole. They charge you for the entire four x eight sheet plus $37.50 per hour labor, and then sell the leftover plasterboard to Wismer. When I first uncovered this vicious "crime ring," I followed it to its source. But, I couldn't figure out what Wismer and Art, were doing with the plasterboard. Then one day, Tuesday I believe, while eating dinner.

I looked down at my plate, and it could be, no, yes, yes, yes it was, a piece of plasterboard — cleverly disguised I'll admit, but plasterboard all the same, covered with cheese and red sauce. The missing plasterboard had been found. There it was, masquerading as a piece of pizza. The mystery was solved. Now to put an end to this "crime ring" once and for all.

I thought of a sure way to fix maintenance and Ed Barnes for good. Instead of throwing away the crusts of the pizza, save them, buy some spackling compound, and the next time the holes appear in your walls fix them yourselves. Think about it, you will save the $37.50 per hour maintenance charge, Art will think everybody likes his pizza, and the "crime ring" will be cut off at its source. The other solution, of course is to stop putting holes in your walls. Maybe then, Wismer will serve better food.

Back to the changes. Did you notice, U.C. has thrown off those ugly ropes and chains and finally come out of the closet and into the 20th century? Maintenance, with a little help from some of the student body removed those unsightly plastic chains. Gee, weren't they effective? Could this be a sign that Ursinus is granting the students some responsibilities? The question — will the students have enough respect to honor this new-found responsibility and not walk on the grass? The answer — probably not. Students in the past have blazed new trails across campus wherever convenient. So, why should today's trailblazers be called upon to stifle their pioneer spirit? Why, it's un-American! The solution — maintenance is installing land mines randomly throughout the campus lawns. The mines will contain Wismer matza balls — remember them? — and old Wismer Jello — is there any other kind? According to a bulletin issued by the Acme Mining Corporation. "Upon detonation, these new A-1 mines will scatter various substances in all directions." The administration released this notice, "Flying debris from land mines may cause serious injury to all those in its immediate area. If no injury results, it is hoped that students will be scared enough to use the walks next time."

It appears that the administration is getting serious. Pioneers, Trailblazers, and harmless squirrels beware!

Robby Krieger - Versions

Ex-Doors guitarist Robby Krieger has made a rarity - a rock record sans vocals. And excepting the layered on guitar work it's a stripped down affair - just keyboards, drums, and bass.

Krieger does all the guitar work on each song. Along with him is ex-Doors Ray Manzarek playing keyboards. To their credit they bring this record off without sounding like the Doors.

The record opens with the Pretender's tune "Tattooed Love Boys." It sounds little different than the original.

What makes the difference is Krieger's guitar lines replacing the vocal. I have to admit that he does the tune justice.

Krieger covers the Rolling Stones "Street Fighting Man" too, keeping the rhythm guitar work as dirty as it should be for the tune. After the original and Rod Stewart's version he'd be a fool not to.

The Doors' "Crystal Ship" gets the treatment too. The funny thing is that this tune, of all the tunes on the album, is the one rendered nearly muzak. It chimes along, missing the haunting tone of the original.

Krieger makes a mess of "Reach Out, I'll Be There," the old Motown tune. It starts well enough with an energetic intro carried on the drums but when the guitar work starts it pales to the pits. The sound doesn't make up for the missing weight of the vocals.

There's a few other tunes on here, some by Krieger. How palatable they are is a matter of taste. Me, I have a problem with this stuff. But the amazing thing is that this record, born in California, and that's not a plus, clicks right as often as it does.

Next Week: Something.

Protheatre Presents Comedy at its Best

Dave Evans/The Grizzly

Sara Seese and Tom Ramos celebrate an unhappy anniversary in "Fumed Oak."

by Lisa Hendren '84

When November rolls around, most of us finally realize that it is time for the fun to stop and the studying to start. The Student Protheatre Group has been working on a couple of things to make you forget about dreadful library carrels and those nasty little yellow slips some of us were lucky enough to receive last week.

Two comedies will be presented at 7:30 p.m. tonight and tomorrow night in Ritter Center. Noel Coward's "The Fumed Oak" is a British one act play about how one man deals with the three women in his life, a domineering mother-in-law, a complaining wife, and a sniveling daughter. This volatile combination lends itself to a hilariously funny situation. Tom Ramos, a senior, has the lead as the lone man. The wife is played by freshman Sara Seese. Andrea Butler plays the mother-in-law, and Claudia Sony is the daughter.

The mirth continues when "Next" by Terrence McNally takes the stage. This is a one act play, in which Duncan Atkins plays Marion Cheever. The story unfolds when an older man decides to enlist in the army. The fun begins when he goes to get his physical and the examining officer turns out to be a woman, played by Katie Toner.

Ann Fruit, a senior, with her magnanimous experience and talents produced and directed this project. Fruit was assisted by freshman Allison Brown. Tickets are available in Wismer and at the door for $2.00.

The 'Messiah' Is Coming!

The Ursinus College Choir's 45th annual performance of Handel's "Messiah" will be Saturday, December 4, at 7:30 p.m. in Bomberger Auditorium.

The College Choir is made up of 80 voices including students, faculty, alumni, and area residents. Guest soloist this year will be Edwina Dunkle French, soprano; Nancy Curtis, alto; Michael Magiera, tenor; and Gregory Cantwell, bass.

Miss French has performed with the Philadelphia Oratorio Choir, Pennsylvania Pro Musica and the Philadelphia New Music Group. She is currently soprano soloist at Gloria Dei Lutheran Church in Huntingdon Valley with music degrees from the Philadelphia College of Performing Arts and the Peabody Institute of Johns Hopkins University.

Curtis performed with the Westminster Choir at the Spoleto Festivals in both the U.S. and Italy. She is presently a faculty member of Darlington Fire Arts Center and she continues to study and perform in the area.

Cantwell graduated from the Curtis Institute of Music where he studied voice with Richard Lewis and Margaret Harshaw. He has performed as soloist with the Opera Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania Opera Theater, Philadelphia Singers and the Pennsylvania Pro Musica.

The Concerto Soloists, noted for its brilliant performances of music from every period, will return for the 6th consecutive year to play the orchestral score.

Persons interested in attending this year's performance should order tickets as soon as possible, as seating is limited. Reserved tickets are $6 and may be obtained through Sandra Frank, College Communications office, (215) 489-4111, ext. 238, weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Take That, West Chester!

Ursinus College Fencing Club, the Bear Blades, edged out a 9 to 7 victory in foil fencing against a strong West Chester team. The fencers met at West Chester on Monday, Oct. 25.

West Chester led 7 to 6 with only three bouts left in the competition. Stu Sachs faced West Chester's top competitor and dropped to a 1 to 4 position. West Chester needed only a point to tie the 16 bout match. But Sachs rallied, won the next four points in a row and the bout. The team score was 7 to 7.

Steve Arnold won the next-to-last bout for Ursinus, guaranteeing at least a tie for the college.

In the final bout, club president, Bruce Schoup, beat his opponent and won the advantage for Ursinus with a final team score of 9 to 7.

Arnold, Sachs and Schoup were joined by four other competition veterans in representing Ursinus on the fencing strip. Don Ginn, Eric Lehenes, Eric Mercer and Dave Redstone all saw action in the meeting of the two clubs. Chris Biddle and Matt Izzo accompanied their fellow club members, but did not enter competition.

Joe DeQuinque of the Phoenixville Fencing Club directed most of the bouts. The balance of the competition was directed by Larry Nann, West Chester assistant coach, and T.J. Arnold, Ursinus coach.

The Bear Blades will face Wilmington on Dec. 5 in Helfferich Hall. A return meeting with West Chester is planned for next semester as well as meetings with Franklin & Marshall and Lehigh Valley.

Reviews by Romer

by Perry Romer '84

Father forgive me for I have sinned.

I saw a movie accompanied by a beautiful girl

I paid $4.00 per ticket,

I saw "Monsignor,"

and I am a movie critic.

These lines, though not fit for a confessional, do penance for a movie that otherwise is a sin in itself.

"Monsignor" depicts the trials and tribulations of army chaplain Father Flaherty, played by Christopher Reeve. Trading-in his cape for a cassock, Reeve learns what is meant by "weaknesses of the flesh." He is forced to confront pride, greed, and lust in his struggle to make cardinal. Along the way, he breaks several commandments and vows in the scheming world of ecclesiastical politics.

The movie finds Flaherty in the heat of battle delivering last rites to his fallen comrades. Against his will, Flaherty is then forced to use a machine gun instead of his cross as a means of self-preservation. But as quick as the viewer can say ten "Hail Marys," Flaherty is brought from the battlefield to the Vatican thanks to the patronage of an American cardinal.

Much to his surprise, Flaherty is given the task of putting the financial records of the Catholic Church in some semblance of order. Eventually he makes an alliance with the Mafia to sell contraband articles in the post-war black market. Flaherty is constantly alternating roles from that of humble, army chaplain to young, ambitious cardinal. To compound matters, he falls in love with a French postulant named Clara, played by Genvieve Bujold.

Clara willfully admits to her past as a prostitute, but Flaherty hides his holy office from her by wearing his army uniform, minus the two chaplain's crosses. This lack of honesty, however, is not enough to spoil their love for each other. They succumb to the "pleasures of the flesh," and a "romp between the sheets" marks the inevitable downfall for both. Eventually, Flaherty's ties with the underworld are discovered by papal authorities. The culmination of his life's ambitions finds him picking olives at a small island retreat for retired clergy, instead of controlling Vatican finances amidst the splendor of Rome.

This critic doesn't like to "cast stones," but "Monsignor" commits a multitude of sins. Its overbearing plot, marked by a series of unbelievable and improbable events, is the work of Frank Perry, who gave us "Mommie Dearest." "Monsignor's" only redeeming quality is the characterization, especially the role of Father Flaherty. Reeve more than adequately shows the gradual corruption of a young priest exposed for the first time to the big money and power politics of the Church. Try though he may, Reeve does not succeed in his attempt to be another Robert DeNiro-type priest of "True Confessions" fame. A blessing goes out to the viewer who can endure this flagellation. Give it one and a half stars. Amen!

Soccer Season Ends With Win Over Widener

by Scott Scheffler '84

The Ursinus Soccer Team concluded its 1982 regular season campaign with a 2-1 victory over conference rival Widener. The win propelled the Bears to a 9-8 overall mark and a 3-3 conference record. By winning eight of their last eleven games, U.C. has been invited to play in the ECAC championship tournament in Frostburg, Maryland today.

In their regular season finale, the Bears delighted the hometown crowd on a mild Saturday morning. Less than five minutes into the contest, Ursinus got on the scoreboard as Chip Montgomery crossed the ball in front of the Widener goal. Tim Howard then headed it into the corner of the net for a 1-0 U.C. Advantage. The goal enabled Howard to surpass the Ursinus single season scoring record. The Bears lead was short-lived however, as Widener scored only minutes later to even the count. Both teams threatened before intermission, but neither squad was able to capitalize and the half ended in a 1-1 deadlock.

The second half offered plenty of action, with Widener dominating much of the play. Ursinus was on the defensive a good deal, but goalie Jim Birchmeier continually turned back Widener's attempts to take the lead. As the game wore on, it seemed as though a stalemate was going to prevail. With only about five minutes remaining, though, the Bears rallied. Using some fancy footwork, Tom Savage maneuvered toward the Widener goal. Savage then pushed the ball to the ever-present Tim Howard, who responded by recording his thirteenth goal of the season. Howard's score proved to be the decisive tally, enabling Ursinus to better the .500 mark and gain an invitation to the ECAC tournament.

After a tough start, U.C. pulled things together. The team turned in several solid performances over the season, although consistency was lacking. It is hoped that Ursinus will play to their capabilities in the upcoming tournament. The Bears face Mary Washington College in today's action and if they win they will compete in the championship game against the winner of the Widener-Frostburg contest on Saturday.

Bear Pack Waltzes to Victory

by Paul Graeff '83

The scene is all too familiar to those who have attended Saturday football games in the past few years. Maybe five, six, or seven Ursinus cross-country runners race across the finish line ahead of their nearest competitors to complete yet another shut-out for the Bear pack.

This past Saturday, the Bears punished Albright and Moravian in a new style, impressing the home crowd as a pack of six Bear runners cruised to identical times in tying for first place honors.

The team was unaffected by the absence of junior star Neil Brown who watched from the sidelines while resting for this week's MAC championship where he will be one of the favorites to take the individual title. In place of Brown, senior co-captain Paul Graeff and senior John Doyle, running their last race on the Ursinus course, were joined by sophomores John Gelhard, Mike Snyder, Doug Nevins, and Alan Fertig as they waltzed across the line in a time of 28:19. Freshman Mike Griffin, showing great promise for the future, took seventh place while junior Joe Klaiber provided another bright spot for the Bear harriers, posting a personal best time of 28:45.

Brian Clark, another senior who finished up a successful college cross-country career, summed up the effect a pack such as the one the Bears formed one-mile into the race can have on an opponent runner, saying, "A group like that turns the race into only one mile. The other teams are crushed before the race really begins."

The real season begins for The Bear Pack tomorrow as they travel to Lebanon Valley for the MAC championships followed by the NCAA Regional contest one week later. Race time on Saturday is 1:30 p.m.

To Swarthmore

Bears Battle But Lose War

by Jim Nowrey '83

On Saturday, the Swarthmore Garnets rolled into Collegeville followed by their entourage of fans, sportswriters for area papers, and a national ranking. No matter what the papers had said the previous week, Swarthmore was looking past this Saturday's game with the Bears. Why shouldn't they? They are the No. 1 team in the nation Div. III defensively, and their offense has been exploding for 20 plus points avg. per game. Little did they know Ursinus forgot to read last week's paper.

Ursinus exploded for 307 total yards offensively. More than double the amount of yards Swarthmore had been giving up in one game. Freshman QB Dan Murray went to the air for 174 of the yards, while the ground game gained 147 (Seagers = 61 Kolb = 55).

Though the score at the half was 7-3 in favor of Swarthmore, the Bears pushed the Garnets all over the field. Bear fullback Kolb slashed through Swarthmore's line for big gainers and Murray's rifle-like passing had the Garnet's defense reeling. To the misfortune of the Bears, Swarthmore's defense was able to shake away the stars long enough to keep the Bears from reaching the endzone. Ursinus had to settle for a Jim Chupin field-goal midway through the first quarter.

The Bears defense equalled the performance of its offense by continually stopping the Garnet's running game dead in its tracks. On a play that exemplifies how games are won on a single play, Swarthmore scored its lone touchdown of the first half. Garnet QB Reil fumbled the snap but recovered his own fumble and dropped back to pass. In the midst of a Bear onslaught, Reil found wide receiver Bennett springing past the last Bear defender. The 88 yard pass gave the Garnets a 7-3 lead. The Grizzlies had a chance to cut the lead to one, but a Chupin field goal attempt as time ran out in the half was blocked.

Swarthmore came out for the second half with a bit more seriousness in their play. On their first possession, the Garnets marched 70 yards with running back Legassi going in from the one. U.C. did not roll over and play dead however. On Swarthmore's next possession, a booming Drew Pecora punt and a staunch defense kept the Garnets inside their six yard-line. Swarthmore decided to punt on fourth down much to the delight of the Bears. On the ensuing punt, the Grizzlies poured through the sieve-like Garnet line. D-back Paul Iannacone got a hand on the ball and nose guard Ed Wheeler fell on it in the end zone. Murray's two-point conversion pass to tight end Bill Henderson put the Grizzlies even with Swarthmore.

For most of the remainder of the third quarter both teams defenses continued to pound on the other's offense. Not until Garnet running back Meehan's 32 yard dash did the Garnets let out a little sign of relief. Meehan's TD run put new life back into the Garnet's defense. The Bears could not get their offense back on track. Reil's 34 yard pass to Bennett in the endzone midway through the fourth quarter put the last nail in Ursinus' coffin. Sophomore QB Chris Mitchell replaced Murray, but the Garnet defense was just not going to allow Ursinus to blemish their perfect record (7-0).

EXTRA

Ursinus' 11 points in the third quarter was the most Swarthmore had allowed all season. Ursinus' 14 points were well above the avg. allowed by Swarthmore: 3.5.

Next Saturday's game against Widener (6-1) will close out the Bears' (3-4-1) 82 season.

Bill Scanlon, wide receiver for the Bears, leaves the Garnets in the dust.

Lady Bears Dominate

by Jean Morrison '83

This past Tuesday the field hockey team got themselves back on their winning ways with a 2-1 defeat of LaSalle College. The win raised the Lady Bears' record to 50% with nine wins and nine losses this season. Scoring for Ursinus were sophomore Marsha Herb and freshman Cindy Flynn.

The game began with Ursinus domination of play. Pressure was immediately put on the LaSalle defense. Ursinus utilized their passing skills to get around the defense thus producing many fine scoring opportunities. Many excellent shots came off the sticks of Herb, sophomore Theresa DeVincent and junior Nikki Zimmerman. At approximately the 15 minute mark, DeVincent took a feed from Zimmerman and moving to the center of the striking circle along the top, took a low, hard shot at the goal. The LaSalle goalkeeper made the save, but, before the keeper could clear the ball away, Herb smacked in the rebound for a 1-0 Ursinus lead. LaSalle threatened several times at the end of the half. They, however, could not put the ball into the goal due to the fine efforts of the Ursinus defense. The half ended with the same 1-0 lead for the Lady Bears.

Ursinus continued to dominate the play in the second half. This domination led to the second Ursinus goal. The Bears moved the ball into the circle. The feed from the top of the circle by senior Janine Taylor went to the keeper's left to Flynn who, running onto the ball, simply beat the keeper's attempt to save the shot for a comfortable 2-0 lead. This second goal was needed as LaSalle found a hole in the Ursinus defense for a score of their own. However, LaSalle could not muster a tying goal and the game ended a 2-1 win for Ursinus.

The J.V. squad blew away LaSalle by a score of 7-1. Scoring for the Bears were senior Stephanie DiSantis with two, freshman Pam Braun with two, sophomore Stormy Baver with one and freshman Leigh Garrison also with a goal. However, the game belonged to sophomore Kippie Crouch as she came from her deep defense position to take a penalty corner shot. The shot was perfect for Ursinus' seventh goal and Crouch's first of her Ursinus career. The win, a show of every player's strength and determination, raised the J.V. record to a very impressive 14-3-2.

"Pitt Panthers put the Fighting Irish in their place. Panthers show college football fans that ND is only a second rate power."

Washington will lose its second straight game. UCLA is much improved and beating up on some pretty good teams. The Bruins prevail in this western power match-up."

Big An

"Notre Dame's offense has been lacking lately, and it's unlikely it will rebound against a tough Pitt 'D.' Panthers triumph easily."

"Rutgers is trying to upgrade their program by playing big time names. But each game ends up with the same result, a Rutgers loss. This game is no exception."
