EASTern POST.

As this paper was in circulating the editor has been played a joke by a correspondent who impressed him with literariness and who seemed quite good-natured. The editor would have no other business. He has not read this paper for a week and has not written for the last two days. He is now in London, where he is writing up his last article for the paper. He has been there for four weeks and is now in the habit of coming to London to write articles. He has not written for the paper since he left, and he is now in the habit of coming to London to write articles. He has not written for the paper since he left, and he is now in the habit of coming to London to write articles.
