Beta Beta Beta Biological Honor Society
- Advancing in the Field of Biology

This organization is an honor society which recognizes individuals who excel in the field of biological science. The society functions to help guide these individuals with career choices and decisions concerning post-graduate education. This is accomplished, in part, by organizing plant trips to local businesses and factories within the medical and biotechnological industry. The organization’s leaders gather material from various graduate programs and present that information to members of both the society and the student body of Ursinus.

U.C. Hot S.H.O.T.S.
- Caring Students in the Community

U.C. Hot S.H.O.T.S, Students Helping Others Through Service, is an outreach organization founded to aid and promote philanthropic projects from campus organizations to the surrounding community. They provide "pre-packaged" service projects which include contact names, advertisement ideas, and activity schedules. Hot S.H.O.T.S. may even arrange transportation to and from a service function for student volunteers. If you want to reach beyond the option packages available to you, Hot S.H.O.T.S. is willing to help you arrange a project based on your own imaginative ideas. Community service is rewarding, fulfilling, and can also be a stepping stone to future opportunities. So don’t wait- get involved today!
