Sorority Pledging

In Full Swing

Working together in fun and spirit to familiarize themselves with their security sisters, girls across campus are donning sorority blazers and symbols to participate in pledging.

Pledging, the last stage before the girls actually become sorority sisters, lasts nine days. During this time, the various pledge classes are responsible for parties for their sisters, service projects, learning the sorority's history, and wearing sorority symbols and colors.

And if anyone happens to notice an overabundance of people at breakfast during the week, it's just the pledges entertaining their security sisters.

Talking To Teachers

Once, when I was a freshman, somebody asked me why I chose to come to Ursinus. At that time, I could not answer him. Now, as I enter my third year here, I still could not tell him why I chose Ursinus. But I could now say that whatever they were, I am very glad they led me here.

Surely these words of praise do not mean that I have no quarrels with Ursinus's standards, curriculum, and rules. I do, however, see Ursinus in two lights. Firstly, Ursinus is ultra-conservative, slow to change, and limited in its course offering, based on reasonably small classes, discussion as well as lectures, and, above all, accessible professors.

It is with gratitude that I consider those members of the faculty who have been in touch in the past two years and with whom I have had and now have dealings. Never have I, in my experience, encountered a problem in which a professor or instructor refused to counsel me. Could the same be said at Temple or at State, where, though many men of great stature are on the faculties, most courses are taught by graduate assistants? Can any student at Temple or at Penn State be assured of any individual attention at all? Yet at Ursinus, faculty personnel are not only erudite, emotional, or even if we just want to talk to someone who will listen.

Of course, I do not mean to say that variety in course selection is not available at Ursinus. There are very few faculty-student rapport. I certainly see absolutely no reason why the two should not go hand in hand. Ursinus is now creating more and more new courses, and, so far, I see no increasing inaccessibility of faculty personnel.

There are those who may think that professors are not all that accessible after all. And there are some who may wonder why anyone would want to talk to a professor other than personally. I would like to say that my experience has been different. I have never had a professor instead of at him. You'll be surprised at how much there is to talk about. Try it some time; you may find out that professors are human, too. And while you're at it, you may discover that they are not all that inaccessible after all. This may have some advantage over its distant relatives, the giant economy-size universities.

Don't you think that people are exciting? I get a natural high from being with people.

Sue's interest in people extends to her academic endeavors. She came to Ursinus as a biology major. But a few weeks into the semester she began her major first to physical education, and then to psychology. Of her experience she says:

"When I first came here I never thought that I would go into psychology. But you must find the thing which will make you the happiest."

"The people I have met here have helped to give me a broader outlook on life. Through them I have found Psychology is not only a course in my major, but a part of my life and I have learned a new view of people."

"I also found that by changing majors I was able to meet people from different departments in the college."

Sue is not sure of her future plans after she leaves Ursinus in 1973. She has been working to work in clinical psychology or work with young people as a college pre­essor in a group like "Young Life."

Sue says she has learned much from the people she has met on the campus.

NOT RESPONSIBLE

Dear Editor,

Because Lesa Spacek is a member of the Weekly staff, she cannot express her opinion in the paper. But she says:

"I think the professors here are great. Many of them have the ultimate goal of helping others. Just being in contact with them has influenced me very much."

Of the professors here Sue says, "I think the professors are available for help outside the classroom, but have not taken the opportunity that I might have to become acquainted with them.

When we asked Sue about the things which could be improved on the campus, her answer was again characteristic of her interest in the interaction of people. She said, "I would like to see the new student union opened as soon as possible. It's a shame when people come to college and have no real place to socialize. Another solution should be to open more dorms."

I could also like some of the courses to become pass fail.

"That might lead to more group discus­sions, and I think that would be good."

One of the activities in which Sue has involved herself is the Ursinus Christian Fellowship. She is really enthusiastic about it and its organization. When talking with me, she asked if I would like to be an active member of the fellowship. She said, "The Christian Fellowship is really dynamic this year. There is a great deal of interest, and people from different backgrounds and different majors are in it. The Fellowship is part of what makes Ursinus a valuable experience."

On Required Forums

"Every full-time student is required to attend a minimum of two Forums each semester for a total of six seminars." That all-important word, Ursinus Tradition, apparently has it that the only way to expose reasonably adult college students to cultural events is to create their down their throats as a requirement. Has anyone ever thought to introduce to Ursinus Tradition the theory that anything required automatically becomes trivial? Forums are a valuable experience. The time has come in our lives, however, for certain lectures, and other cultural offerings to be attended voluntarily and not because of a requirement. In other words, it is time for another rule to be eliminated in favor of progress and adults.
The subject of drugs is only one side of youth and must be looked in the complete analysis. Reverend Detterline cites the concern of young people. Since we have more channels of communication, people listen to what young people have to say—there is a chance for idealism. The days of spiritual matters are not gone as some believe—I say that they are coming, but we are looking at people and their problems. Idealism sounds good, but we must remember that idealism is not always completely practical. We need a mixture of idealism and realism, says the Reverend. "If we have idealism with patience and in addition to that the perspective of age combined with the vision of youth, then we have a real mixture."

It is a shame that some students see the administration as an abominable machine. It is not all that bad—the open-mindedness of Reverend Detterline serves as proof. The administration does not always agree, but one thing it does agree on is the betterment of Ursinus. We might add that if the administration were a machine, then there would be no discretion within its structure. Finally, the administration said that students seem to see his title as a roadblock; that is, they see him as administration, not as a person interested in the student. He also said that there was no place that he would rather be than at Ursinus, and his job since his job deals with people. What can be more enjoyable than that?

Watch the picture by telling the audience that insects were eventually going to take over the earth because they were much more capable than man. This was very logical and not a bad beginning. However, as the film progressed, Dr. Hellstrom cut into the insect film with some very inappropriate comments. It is possible that this was supposed to be funny. If it was, it was not only a failure but out of place because it took away from the awe and beauty of the film. Perhaps the worst scene in the picture is Dr. Hellstrom's back yard shooting insects with his garden hose and apparently deriving some sort of strange, disturbed pleasure out of it. This scene couldn't help but put you in hysterics because the acting was so bad.

Although I was tempted to walk out several times during one of Dr. Hellstrom's bizarre bits of behavior, I did enjoy the beautiful footage of the insects and it is for this reason only that the movie is at all worth seeing. After much deliberation, I give it a C. It is an object of much speculation among the student society, Reverend Detterline said it to what young people movies and plays, especially the film footage with some of the members of the administration who had seen it, I didn't think it was very good because it was a bit too much for me. Next week, if the student staff decides to allow me to continue writing, I will write about other things, "The Late Great Planet Earth," a book by Hal Lindsey.
Kilt Klads’ Komment: Miss Snell Throws a Change-Up
By BUTHANN CONNELL

Well, last week was the beginning of the Varsity and J.V. soccer seasons, marked by sub-par play, victory, and indecision. The Bears received a beautiful clear from Ursinus’s Bruce Montgomery, 26 yard field goal in the last 22 seconds later returned to give the Bears a 16-13 win. Against Temple, Sally Anderson moved up from J.V. to Varsity fullback and Claudia Boomer played the entire game at halfback. With this new look, the Subdlizzlies skipped past Gettysburg, 2-0. Robin Cash and Janet Grubbs added another notch to their hockey sticks in chalking up the win. The Bears are currently undefeated, have not lost a game and 1 touchdown on Saturday against Swarthmore College.

Bears Receive Honorable Mention in ECAC

Ursinus’s Bruce Montgomery, from Costa Mesa, Calif., was honored with first team mention on the Week on ECAC Division III Team for the third time this year. Bruce contributed to the Bears’ 9-9-11 7-0, 2 losses, 3 ties) and are readying for a second half of defenses tightened, but the Bears finally got on the scoreboard in the third quarter on an 1-yard waver by John Sabatino, Bruce Brumbaugh, substituting for Mark Fiegler who will be out for the season with a broken collarbone, added the P.A.T. Swarthmore tied the game 34 all, and set the stage for fourth quarter dramatics. With 1:01 showing on the clock, Don Larson rolled to his left and fired a perfect strike to Bill Komandarik who raced 63 yards to provide the winning margins.

Soccer Team Drops Two: Bears Have Rough Week

BY MICHAEL REDMOND

Handicapped by having three of its starting team out, the Bears were in a tough spot. No one on the front line seemed to have the spark for hitting goals. Possessing for the Bears was fair to poor. During these games, the other teams were not living up to their usual form. The Ursinus College Bears won their second straight game Saturday in a 41-34 see-saw battle at Swarthmore College. This week the Bears are readying for a homecoming match up with Geneva College. Geneva is presently 6-0, dominating some of the toughest small college competition in the nation. The Key next week will be a continuation of offensive play by quarterback Don “Catman” Larson. Defender Explodes Larson led the team Saturday to their highest scoring output of the season against Swarthmore. The Gurnet scored first, but the Bears bounced right back with a 64 yard touchdown aerial from Larson to the league’s leading receiver Bruce Montgomery. The first half featured rampant scoring by both teams. Down 20-7 Ursinus maintained its poise, and went ahead on consecutive touchdowns by John Sabatino (2 yard run) and John Stuwart (4 yard run) making the score 21-20. With three minutes left in the half Swarthmore tallied again to take a 22-20 advantage. The Bears, however, refused to be held back, and moved 55 yards in seven plays for the fourth touchdown of the game. The Bears are now 2-2-3 (2 wins, 2 losses, 3 ties) we have several games remaining. This Friday (TOMORROW?) we face PMC at Edinboro. This game is the perfect time to show the team that you care, try to build up their drive by screaming for them. We need you there.
