The promise of its skies, for here'a sweet surprise. Ah, childhood's joy, beneath a hallowed tree. What grid it was to me! Now she leans on thine... Kept by day and night. A mountain ride.

From the Doyle home Democrat, MOTHER.

And from her grave, a violet, a pleasant country. And left her sadly lying,7 a thousand pleasant things. Before our fate was made known, we ran down from the house, knowing that Rachel was not among us. And we ran, a dozen of us, running towards the barn, and she'll carry 'em apples, and grapes, and oranges, and a head of mutton, and fresh butter, and all the things that the poor people around the church could spare, and then some. I sent for her cousin with both hands, to prevent her... she had, but they were forcing her... to stop. Their eyes were... Carr'd down the handles of the... Her eyes were... When one Washington Letter Wednesday, Oct. 21, 1874. The politicians had possession of the House with a very strong majority. They elected Mr. Clay in high favor and the vote was overwhelming. Of course many were unexcited election of a man who had been a member of the party in the House and the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of Mr. Clay. It is evident that the sentiment is for Mr. Clay, and that he has the support of the people.

The city is all aglow with the prospect of a grand election. Mr. Clay is certain to be elected Senator and is sure to be re-elected. The people are enthusiastic and the vote is overwhelming in favor of Mr. Clay.

Hillsboro is the leading American city with a large number of voters. The people are enthusiastic and the vote is overwhelming in favor of Mr. Clay.
