MRS. OLDFIELD.

When she refused to receive it, he told her that he could not help taking it. His face lit up with a wonderful expression, and he showed her a letter that he had received from his lawyer, who informed him that his property was worth a thousand dollars, and that he was free from all debt. She looked at him with a mixture of kindness and wonder, and said, "My dear, you have always been kind to me, and I shall never forget it." He replied, "But, my dear, you must see that I am under no obligation to you." She smiled, and said, "Oh, I am very well satisfied." He then took her hand, and said, "We will go to the court at once, and have everything settled." She looked at him with a mixture of love and gratitude, and said, "I wish you all the happiness in the world." He replied, "I wish you all the happiness in the world, too." They then walked arm in arm, and went to the court, where they were married.

FORGIVEN.

The task of a Shepherd was done.

---

THE TIME.

When the sun was rising, a young man came to the door of the old woman, and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Oldfield. I have just arrived from the city, and I wish to see you." She looked at him with wonder, and said, "What do you want?" He replied, "I have just arrived from the city, and I wish to see you." She replied, "I wish to see you, too." They walked arm in arm, and went to the house, where they were married.

THE SEA.

The sea was calm, and the sun shone bright, and the birds sang sweetly. They walked arm in arm, and went to the house, where they were married.

THE WIND.

The wind was blowing gently, and the waves were rolling slowly. They walked arm in arm, and went to the house, where they were married.

for reaching these localities have voyage in a comfortable steamer. One through the country. During the voyage there were many instances of ill mannered conduct on the part of the parties to the voyage, toward each other. A number of the New England people had not seen a great many people as they were a number of the passengers who were very disorderly, and the crew had much difficulty in controlling their behavior. The view from the deck of the ship was very picturesque, and the scenery was very beautiful.

The firm and cheat a great misfortune. It is also true that the management of the firm was very unscrupulous, and many of the parties to the voyage were very dissatisfied. It is said that the manager of the firm was very dishonest, and many of the voyagers were very much disappointed. It is also true that the voyage was very hazardous, and many of the voyagers were very much alarmed.

The greatest cause of the prosperity of the people who flock thither was the establishment of a great many factories. It is said that the people who had factories were very prosperous, and that they made a great deal of money. It is also true that the people who had factories were very popular, and that they were much admired.

During the 11th season it is said that 1,400,000 dollars were expended over and above the usual amount. It is also true that the business was very hazardous, and that many of the people who had factories were very much alarmed.

The grand scenery of Switzerland is beautiful, and the people who had factories were very prosperous.

WHERE ARE THE NAGERS?

They Drive Off With A Citizen's Wagon

The Chairmen of Police in their wagon fell into a discussion with two men who were driving away. The conversation began about the weather, then turned to a man who had been left behind in the wagon. The men were puzzled and asked what had happened. The chairmen explained that the man had been left behind during a break in the operation. They then asked if the man had any family who could come and get him. The chairmen finally decided to bring the man back to the station, where they would make sure he was reunited with his family.

LETTER FROM AMBLER

Amber, November 29th 1873

Dear Sir,

I am writing to you to express my gratitude for the kindness of the “Our Girls” and the “Our Boys” of the town. They have been a great comfort to me during my stay here. I have been recovering from an illness and they have been very kind to me. I hope to come back and visit them again soon.

Yours sincerely,
