Ursinus is back in action

Freshmen enter on high note

By MAURA BEAUDRY

September has touched the Ursinus campus and brought with it a new entity: The Class of 1989. This year's freshman class has been doing its part to fill our campus with fresh ideas, enthusiasm and a sense of humor. According to President Richter, the freshman class has taken Ursinus and its orientation activities seriously while manifesting a sense of humor about itself at the same time. "There is a genuine enthusiasm in the freshman class," added Richter.

As far as comparison goes, Richter stated that the quality of the Class of 1989 is a continuation of the quality of other Ursinus students. In addition, interest in majors are also characteristic of Ursinus upperclassmen. This year, the largest single major interest in biology, followed by economics/business administration. Most freshmen, however are still undecided about a choice of major. According to Lorraine Zimmerman, head of admissions, this is a very good sign because Ursinus encourages its students to keep an open mind toward all choices of majors during their freshman year.

Geographically, most of the freshmen have come to Ursinus from Pennsylvania and New Jersey as have their predecessors. However, Zimmerman pointed enthusiastically toward an increasing number of students from more distant states such as Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Delaware, and Maryland. Some Ursinus freshmen have origins beyond the borders of the United States. London, China, Japan, Spain, Mexico and Iran are some birthplaces of present Ursinus students. "Next year we hope to further increase geographic diversity," Zimmerman added.

The especially diverse range of interest that permeates this year's freshman class is no coincidence. "The college made a deliberate effort to find students that had interests in the arts and the humanities," said Richter. Active involvement in Ursinus clubs and activities is another mark of our new freshmen. This trend was accounted for by Zimmerman who supplied the information that 29% of the Class of '89 were involved in some kind of student government in high school and 39% were involved in varsity athletics. This class has a very strong academic background as well, with 90% graduating in the top two fifths of their class and an average SAT score some 50 points higher than the average in past years.

President Richter expressed bright hopes to the future of the freshman class here at Ursinus. "The whole college is prepared better than ever." More specifically, the President commended the faculty, student services and the admissions program.

President Richter, while realistically predicting that the Class of 1989 will commit the "classic freshman mistakes" also hopes that they will prepare to broaden and deepen their sense of what is important in life as they enter college.

The Class of '89

New look campus

By A.M. SALAS

This fall four residence halls have a new, pleasing look. Three more houses represent an ongoing project for Gorski Construction Company of Collegeville.

The four completed houses, Hobson, Sturgis, Schreiner and 702 Main Street were renovated and remodeled during the summer months. They are now safer, more comfortable structures as well as being aesthetically pleasing and in character with the look of the town.

Super House, Fetterolf and South Halls are Gorski's projects for the winter. South Hall, which will accommodate about 46 students, many in single rooms, will be re-named Musser Hall.

The change in name is due to the fact that Dr. and Mrs. Warren V. Musser have long been actively associated with Ursinus. Their generous pledge of half million dollars is funding a significant portion of the renovations. Mrs. Musser, Class of '45 is on the Board of Directors of the college. Dr. Musser, an honorary alumnus is chairman of the board of Safeguards Scientifics Incorporated.

President Richter is quick to point out that the renovations undertaken by Gorski Construction were not the only improvements made upon the campus. The woman's suites in the Reimert Complex were repaired and painted during the summer by our own maintenance department. The massive improvements made upon 732 Main Street were undertaken by our maintenance department. Ever busy, the grounds crew game a new, well-kempt look at the area near Bed-Rock, as well as the rest of the campus. President Richter says that while we were under contract for many renovations, the major improvements in the campus were undertaken by our maintenance staff. And they did a great job. An unnamed senior concurs she is enthusiastic about the surprise improvements made upon her room in Clamer.

Hopefully, members of the Ursinus community will respect and appreciate the efforts toward improving the appearance of the campus.

U.C. athletes are scholars too

By HEATHER CAMP

Word travels fast at Ursinus. Even though the freshman athletic recruits have barely had a chance to suit up for their first crack at college competition, the school is already buzzing over the potential and the past athletic achievements of the Class of 1989. And among the female students, every male athlete's marital status and campus address has been discussed and memorized. But what about the freshman athlete's academic potential. What, are you kidding? Joe Football doesn't have to be smart. He just has to look good and have the moves.

Yet, three students from UC's Class of 1988 have refuted the popular notion that "the lights are on, but nobody's home" for all athletes by maintaining the top three grade-point averages among last year's freshmen class. Not to mention the countless other student-athletes that destory the "dumb jock" image by keeping their names on the Dean's List each semester. According to the latest figures from the registrar, two of the top three grade-point averages in the Class of '88 belong to football players. The third belongs to a member of the women's basketball team.

Despite the academic competition that a class of nearly 350 creates, Brian Holloway leads the way with an academic average of 96.37. However, combining sports and academics comes naturally for this graduate of Springfield (Delco) High in Springfield, Pa. Brian was a varsity athlete in football, basketball and track in high school, while holding the number one spot in class rank as well. At Ursinus, Holloway is a tight end for the football team, yet dedicates most of his time to his chemistry major and pre-med goals. While Brian enjoys the competition of football, he also looks at it as a release from the academic pressures of Ursinus. "Football gives me a chance to unwind from the hours I put in studying," remarked Brian.

teammate Chuck Odgers of Havertown, Pa. and Haverford High ranks third in the class with a 95.19 average. Odgers, a pre-med major, not only plays football, but also wrestles for UC as well. Along with his academic honors, Chuck won Freshman of the Year honors from the football coaches for his performance in the secondary last fall. When asked how it has been maintaining his grade-point average while playing two sports, Chuck replied, "even though college courses are hard, you have a lot of free time to get the work done. I really haven't had a problem juggling my school work with sports."

Finally we come to No. 2 ranked Jeanne Radwanski, who proves that good things do come in small packages. Radwanski, of Oak Ridge, N.J. and St. Mary's High, is a psychology major with a 95.55 average. Like Brian, she, too, was ranked No. 1 in high school while a member of the cross-country, basketball and softball teams. Jeanne agrees, however, that college is much harder than high school, yet she continues playing basketball because of the enjoyment she gets out of it. As Jeanne said, "It has been rewarding to work my school schedule around so I can fit in basketball and other activities."

Congratulations are in order for Brian, Chuck and Jeanne on their academic and athletic achievements. And for all those aspiring athletes who don't feel school and sports can mix successfully, consider this your inspiration. You might even find that sports can complement your education at Ursinus.

The Grizzly was founded in 1978, replacing the previous campus newspaper, The Ursinus Weekly. It is published by students ten weeks each semester. The Grizzly is edited entirely by students and the views expressed in the paper are not necessarily those held by the administration, faculty, or a consensus of the student body. The staff of The Grizzly invites opinions from the college community and will publish them as time and space permit.

Appointed staff members

The following persons have been appointed to the Ursinus College staff by President Richard P. Richter:

Karen Dalzell has been appointed a counselor in the College Admissions Office. Miss Dalzell received a B.A. in French and Spanish from Ursinus last June. She was a dean's list student, and was named in "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." Her position involves interviewing and counseling potential Ursinus students.

Claire Lambert has been made research/writer in the College Development Office. Formerly secretary in the College's biology-premedical department for six years, Mrs. Lambert will receive her A.B.A. in marketing from Ursinus Evening School this November. Her duties include researching information and creating files on College development prospects. She also helps with foundation research and works with the College Financial Aid office to encourage stewardship of student scholarships.

Dr. John C. Maerz Sr., M.D., has been appointed associate medical director of the college. Dr. Maerz holds his B.S. in Chemistry from Temple University, and his M.D. from Thomas Jefferson University, and has for many years had a family practice in Schwenksville. He replaces former assistant medical director Dr. Arthur Martella, who resigned. Dr. Maerz will have part-time hours in the campus health center, and will serve as assistant to Dr. Stephen Williams, medical director.

Jeffrey C. Page has been appointed assistant director of student activities. He formerly was residence director at Adrian College, Adrian, Mich. and holds an M.A. from Bowling Green

State University, Bowling Green, Ohio. Mr. Page will be in charge of social and educational residence hall programs, which are being organized on campus for the first time this year. His duties also will include assisting student activities director Susan Ashman in organizing major campus programs and in leadership training; serving as advisor to the United Student Government Association, the Interfraternity Council and the Intersorority Council; and acting as a resource person to campus clubs and organizations. He will reside in Reimert Hall, where he also will have responsibility as a part-time duty dean for the Office of Student Life.

Dear Editor:

Upon entering Wismer Dining Hall the other afternoon for lunch, I was quite shocked and appalled at the length of the lines, even at 12:15. This is obviously due to the pathetic process we students must go through in order to enter. It seems to be getting worse each year. I feel like a minor trying to enter the local pub with an illegal I.D.; I'm surprised I wasn't requested for a second source of identification or I might have gone hungry. I would also hate to think of the physical punishment some of the new bouncers now hired could inflict. It would be one thing if the food was worth the wait, but I won't go into that for what will most likely be the topic of another editorial at a future date.

There just must be a simpler, more efficient and especially quicker method of identifying those who enter our elegant, little dining facility.

Enthusiastic USGA says be prepared

Dear Editor:

After spending four of the most educational and enjoyable days of my summer at the National Student Government conference at the University of South Carolina, I am personally psyched for this year. I know I can speak for Devin Murphy, USGA president, when I say we are prepared to make changes.

We have a few "leftovers" from last semester; but, before I discuss the specifics, I would like to petition you, the Ursinus student body, to help us implement change, attack apathy, and make Ursinus the best campus it can be. To prove that we are serious, the USGA officers will begin by training their members so that they will be better able to serve and to represent you. Our goal is to become the most effective and powerful voice for you before the administration. To accomplish this goal, we need your assistance. The Ursinus student body must do its part to become informed, aware, and interested in making changes.

Specifically, last semester we were surprised with the news that some houses on Main Street would be renovated and due to the costs involved in the renovation, no longer would there be the regular Friday and Saturday night parties we have all grown accustomed to. This change in policy paralleled an even greater change in state and national laws regarding the serving of liquor to minors, drunken driving and host laws. Because of the nationwide crackdown on college campuses, Ursinus College has had to respond. The administration's reply began with the restricting of parties in houses which was designed to solve some of the house "wear and tear" problems. Inter-sorority and Interfraternity council formally appealed to the USGA for its support at the meeting, April 11, 1985. After receiving the backing of USGA, the appeal was made to President Richter who still could not allow frequent parties in the houses. As a result, USGA has formed four subcommittees to study the problem of house wear and tear, but even more importantly, to study the liability faced by Ursinus College, the deans, the party organizers, and the resident assistants whenever a party is held. The committee chairpersons are Cara Yingst and Joel Davies. The four subcommittees are concerned with the liability problem, actions taken by other schools, the effects of the policy change on our campus, and the feasibility of enforcement.

Another problem is more fundamental: the state law reads that the drinking age in Pennsylvania is 21. By allowing minors to drink, we must be prepared to face the likelihood of a law suit if an accident occurs. So many other colleges have decided to attack the problem by becoming "dry" campuses. At Ursinus, our possibilities range from the extreme of becoming a "dry" campus to beginning an ID check system with wrist bands or cards. We must stress the seriousness of this dilemma. It is impossible for Ursinus to expect to survive forever by continuing along its blind and ignorant path. Ursinus is unique and our student population is also unique. If we, the students of Ursinus, do not want to see a dry campus, we must cooperate to solve this problem in another way. We must try alternative programs to keg parties and we must make them succeed. USGA is your voice and is here to serve you, but we cannot work alone; your cooperation, participation, and enthusiasm are a must.

This letter is only the beginning of our decision to inform all students of the changes on campus. Please keep an eye open for notices announcing an open discussion regarding the alcohol policy changes. We need your input. We demand your ideas.

Other pursuits of the USGA include class elections which are planned for Sept. 26. All interested in running for an office must complete petitions before Sept. 20. Homecoming is Oct. 5. Any organization with a charter may nominate candidates, so don't delay in your preparation. We have still not found representatives for all of our committees. All interested in applying for Judiciary Board representative and Academic Council representative, please see Linda Giunta or Devin Murphy before Sept. 16 to set up an interview.

We have many grand ideas and goals for the year. Help us to succeed in our first project — solving the alcohol policy problem on campus. Do not forget, USGA meetings are held every other Thursday at 5:30 p.m. in the Union conference room. Anyone with ideas, however creative or off-the-wall they may be, please come; we are here for you.

CAMPUS MEMO

By RICHARD P. RICHTER

On Aug. 31 it was my pleasure to greet the freshman class in the opening convocation in Bomberger Hall. I share the following excerpt with the larger campus community.

A few days ago, I received in the mail a note from one of our retired professors, Dr. Herman Wessel, who was a member of the graduating class of 1919 at Amherst College. The President of Amherst in that period would write a personal note in the freshman handbook that each incoming student received. Dr. Wessel still has his copy of that freshman message that he first saw in 1915, 70 years ago, and he shared it with me. It went like this:

"When a man chooses to go to college he declares that he wants to be different, that he is not satisfied to be what he is. If any one of you is satisfied with himself, he had better go back and keep still for fear something may happen to disturb his perfection. If those who stay are rightly dissatisfied with themselves they will satisfy us." Signed, Alexander Meiklejohn. (Amherst was all-male in those days.)

These are provocative, even disturbing words, to read to freshmen on their first day. But they are interesting words — for two reasons.

First, Meiklejohn meant to clarify the kind of education to which his college was committed. It was called liberal education, and it is precisely the kind of education to which Ursinus also is committed, even today. Ursinus does not set out to prepare you for this job or that. It sets out to acquaint you with the best and most useful ideas, to equip you with skills that can be used with confidence in many different professional situations. It seeks to make you more responsible for the welfare of your community and your nation, indeed, for the welfare of the whole human race in your time.

I am pretty sure that the full meaning of liberal education will not reveal itself to you until you have studied with us for some time. But please know you are at a college that is not just trying to force feed a body of facts into your mind — we are trying to change the way you think, the way you behave, the way you are.

The second interesting thing about Meiklejohn's statement is that it recommends to freshmen the attitude that they should have toward themselves as they start college. He wanted his freshmen to be dissatisfied with themselves. That sounds very negative. Certainly a freshman in 1915 no less than in 1985 needed confidence in himself or herself to do the work at hand. But freshmen, Meiklejohn was saying, should also be open to new ideas. Freshmen should be prepared to broaden and deepen their sense of what is important in life as they enter college.

You will encounter new ideas. Sometimes they will be encountered in the classroom, sometimes outside of the classroom, in books and in conversations. Be critical but receptive to new ideas! I predict that just about all of you in the next year will have a special intellectual encounter with a professor or staff member — or a fellow student — that you will remember for the rest of your lives and that will change your lives. This encounter may be pleasant or unpleasant, but it will be memorable and lasting and constructive. Please keep on the lookout for that encounter. When it happens, you will know that your education is taking a big leap forward. And remember that you are not limited to just one such encounter!

Lentz discusses following the leader

What do MVP baseball player Cal Ripken, actress-singer Liza Minelli and Vice President George Bush have in common?

All have followed in a parent's career footsteps, and are discussed along with other famous career followers by economics professors Bernard F. Lentz of Ursinus College and David N. Laband of the University of Maryland, in their just published book, "The Roots of Success: Why Children follow in Their Parents' Career Footsteps." The book was published by Praeger Publishers, CBS Educational and Professional Publishing, New York. Excerpts from the book were published in the Aug. 1985 issue of Psychology Today.

Mr. Ripken's father, Cal Ripken Sr., for many years a minor league player and coach in the Baltimore Orioles' organization, now coaches his son from the third base box. Lisa Minelli is, of course, the daughter of actress-singer Judy Garland. And George Bush, the son of U.S. Senator Prescott S. Bush, presides today over the house of Congress his father served for 10 years.

The child who chooses a parent's career has a number of advantages over the rest of us, according to Dr. Lentz. These advantages are of benefit not only to the second-generation worker, but to the entire economy, he asserts.

"The main thing that we emphasize is the actual skill that is learned. For example, a son who's been working with his father's carpentry firm since he was 12 years old and has an eight year advantage over someone who graduates from high school and decides to be a carpenter," notes Dr. Lentz. "Secondly — and this moves over into things like politics and self-employed proprietorship — a follower has a system of business contacts. Sometimes its a group of clients or a loyal bunch of voters."

This wealth of knowledge about their parents' work — "career-specific capital" — absorbed during the growing-up years, allows them to enter the business at an earlier age than their contemporaries who do not have such an advantage. It leads to their being able to take over the business at an earlier age, and ultimately to having higher lifetime earnings (on an average, 25% higher) than those who have not followed a parents' career path. The non-followers, by contrast, may spend four years in college and several more in the marketplace, working up to the level of the career-followers. There lifetime earnings are, as a result, lower.

"What we have found in our research is that if you take two people who are alike in all other respects, then it is the case that the follower has an advantage — at least as measured by market earnings — over the non-follower," notes Dr. Lentz.

"Children who follow in their parents' career footsteps have the potential for making everyone better off," the authors write. The economy benefits from the higher spending and investment levels of career-following offspring with larger incomes. The populace benefits from their multi-generational knowledge.

Because they have viewed the phenomenon of career following from an economist's point of view, their conclusion have been more positive than those of sociologists in the past, Dr. Lentz notes.

Career following "is generally

Grants awarded

The National Science Foundation (NSF) has announced that Ursinus College has been chosen to receive a $34,284 College Science Instrumentation Program grant. The grant will be used for the purchase of equipment for the Ursinus Chemistry Department.

Under this program, the College is required to secure one-to-one matching funds on a one-to-one basis within two years. To date Ursinus has received matching support from the Firestone Trust Fund ($4,000 over two years) and the E.I. duPont deNemours Company ($7,000).

The NSF College Science Instrumentation Program is extremely competitive. This year the NSF received 1,348 proposals but granted only 203 awards. The average award was $23,500.

Over the years, Ursinus has gained special recognition for its excellent science programs and counts among its alumni a Nobel prize winner in medicine and physiology, Gerald M. Edelman, M.D., '50. The Chemistry Department has been accredited by the American Chemical Society (ACS) since 1959. Graduate and professional schools, as well as business and industry, have long recognized the high quality of the chemistry curriculum at Ursinus.

To maintain the quality of this teaching program and to insure that Ursinus students are prepared adequately to meet the challenges presented by post-baccalaureate education or employment, the College must keep pace with the rapid changes taking place in the field of chemistry, particularly in the area of scientific instrumentation. The NSF grant will enable the Department to upgrade its experimental capabilities in liquid chromatography, infrared spectroscopy, and gas chromatography.

Since 1978, bachelor of science degrees in chemistry have been awarded to 160 students. Of these students, approximately 36% have gone into the chemical industry, 25% to medical school, 25% to other graduate programs, and 4% into teaching.

Glory Years

1893 First Ursinus team goes 2-3-1, opening the season with a 20-0 win over the Melrose Athletic Association. Team raised its own money and wound up with a crushing deficit of $1.50 at end of year. It played without a coach because no suitable man could be found who had ever played football before.

R.E.M. returns with more confidence

By JOSEPH F. PIRRO

On the night of Tuesday, Aug. 28 the Tower Theater in Philadelphia once again rocked as the Stroh's Summer Music Festival continued on. That particular night featured R.E.M., who brought their unique form of folk rock to life on stage.

The band has come a long way since their last appearance at the Tower on Oct. 15, 1984. R.E.M. now has the ability and courage to just go out and play what they desire on a given evening. Michael Stipe, vocalist, can now communicate the band's messages without having to resort on playing crowd favorites, such as "Radio Free Europe," R.E.M. is now a band who has enough devoted followers on their pilgrimage who will respond equally favorable to any song from their three albums, "Murmur," "Reckoning," and the latest (released in the early part of the summer) "Fables of the Reconstruction." How many bands could have played songs from a poorly distributed EP ("Chronic Town") and still keep their audience standing on their feet. The fact is R.E.M. could have played any song known to mankind, and the audience would still have gone to the exits with the same two feelings; disappointment because R.E.M. ended the show, and secondly the powerless aura of being overwhelmed by the talent of these musicians.

One of the strangest problems with R.E.M. is that very few people have heard of them. Of course, the reason for this mishap is that radio stations simply don't give the band air time. In addition, the band has done only one video for MTV, unfortunately the biggest media advertiser in music today. But R.E.M. doesn't thrive on being popular, or being nationally recognized, nor do their followers demand them to be. The only expectation mutually shared is that of musical excellence.

R.E.M. is composed of lead vocalist Michael Stipe, who becomes molded to his microphone stand, using it as his mouthpiece. The only time he releases the stand is when he goes into an epileptic frenzy of dance, which makes up the majority of their stage show. Guitarist Peter Buck, is also free to wander the stage cranking out ferocious lead chords, and occasionally doing Townshend-like leaps. Mike Mills takes care of the brass work, and in this past show took time to sit on the edge of the stage talking to some fans in the front row, while he was playing. Drummer Bill Berry, holds the whole show under control with consistency behind his drunkit.

The Tower crowd sprung to their feet as soon as the band took the stage, and never took a seat until they went to their cars in the parking lot some two hours later. R.E.M. opened with "Feeling Gravity Pull" from the new track, "Fables of the Reconstruction," followed by what has become a standard, "Talk About the Passion," from R.E.M.'s first album, "Murmur." This song was one of only three numbers played from the breakthrough album. The other two were "Sitting Still," and "We Walk."

R.E.M. has certainly come out of their sheltered home in Athens, Ga. They are doing this in a confident manner — knowing that they will start reaching more ears in the near future. The band's second album, "Reckoning," was almost played in full at the Tower. Songs like "Harborcoat," "Pretty Persuasion," "7 Chinese Brothers," "South Central Rain," "Rockville," and "2nd Guessing" shook the Tower walls.

Michael Stipe, a shy, quiet person for the most part, spoke quite freely and openly through the first set and three encores. He told stories about songs which only written lyrics could help make clear and comprehensive. However, R.E.M. does not print lyrics and about 40 percent of Stipe's words are mumbled which leaves many people confused. R.E.M. is still a mystery in many respects for this reason. But in "Pretty Persuasion," listeners are asked to "condemn their confusion."

Of course, the major purpose of the night was to promote the new recording, "Fables of Reconstruction." The group did this by playing practically every song from the album including "Life and How to Live It," "Green Grow the Rushes," "Maps and Legends," "Driver 8," "Auctioneer" and "Can't Get There From Here" the hit single which sounded as good as the studio version even without the horn section.

Before R.E.M. left for the evening they played "Gardening at Night" from the Chronic Town" EP. Also included in the show were a few new songs, which are probably going to be on an upcoming album. As mesmerized as everyone who witnessed this event was, there was confidence that R.E.M. would return again in the near future.

Squeeze back in

By TOM BROWN

One of the highlights of this summer's concert season was the reunion of the '80s most creative and enjoyable bands: Squeeze. After a 2½ year break-up, Squeeze rejoined to record a new album, "Cosi Fan Tutti Frutti," and embarked on a summer tour.

The "new" Squeeze is actually almost entirely "old" Squeeze. Only MacMillan was not a member of the original band. Holland, however, left the band in 1980, when he was replaced by Paul Carrack, formerly of Ace and Madness and now with Nick Lowe's Cowboy Outfit. MacMillan is the third bassist employed by Squeeze, preceded by John Bentley and Harry Kakoulli. A recent show featured many Squeeze classics such as

"Another Nail in My Heart," the opening song, "Goodbye Girl," "Up the Junction," "Pulling Mussels (From the Shell)," and "Tempted" (a song written by Carrack). The encores included "Annie Get Your Gun" and "Black Coffee in Bed."

The songs of Difford and Tilbrook, once called the Lennon and McCartney of the 1980s have a great appeal, probably because they are about everyday life. Problems with a girlfriend and/or drinking are problems common to many young men. Difford and Tilbrook have a way of Black Comedy, combining both optimism and pessimism.

The return of Squeeze is one of the best things to happen to pop music since...well, since the founding of Squeeze.

Women's field hockey looking strong

By JUDY RUPPERT

The Ursinus Women's field hockey team is preparing for another competitive and winning season. Preseason camp started on Aug. 23, and approximately 50 girls attended to try out for a spot on the squad, which ranked 13th in the nation last year.

The hard work throughout the week paid off. The squad played very strongly at the annual Penn State tournament when they played many skilled teams. Their record ended 1-0-5, which included a win versus William and Mary, and tie draws against, Perdue University, Boston College, Boston University, Lehigh, and Penn State. The team was excited about their play, and is looking forward to the tough competition and a winning season.

The squad is led by Senior Captains Kelee Whiteley, Carrie Rainey and Donna Wurzbach, and Seniors Pam Braun and Judy Ruppert. Other varsity team members include Tami Trauger, Ginny Migliore, Beth Bingamen, Lois Groff, Sheri Green, Mia Fields, Jill Johnson, Joanne Schoener and Kris Carr.

The team will also be helped by many freshman, including Susanne Thomas and Sandy Diction who attended the Penn State games.

The junior varsity will also have a strong team, led by many strong sophomores and skilled freshmen. Both teams are looking toward a very successful season. They will both be tested in their opening game versus Rutgers on Thursday.

The Westhead is dead

By GREG FRASER

After the resignation of men's basketball coach Gerry Grasser (single year record 11-14), Ursinus College began looking for his replacement. The name Paul Westhead emerged. Westhead, former head coach of the 1979-80 N.B.A. championship L.A. Lakers, was looking for a small school in his native Philadelphia area to coach basketball and teach English as Mr. Westhead is a Shakespearean scholar.

Ursinus fit the bill. After a contract had been drawn up and a press conference scheduled for the announcement of a three year agreement, all seemed well and good for Ursinus basketball to get a needed kick in the shorts. But, (yes, there's always a but); unfortunately, Mr. Westhead backed out at the last minute.

Westhead stated that, while packing their belongings for the trip back East, he and his wife suddenly realized that it would be too hard to separate from their three college-aged kids — remaining in California. With this great dilemma facing the poor, forlorn couple, all seemed bleak on the western front.

But then, out of nowhere,

Westhead received a job offer from Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles!

It seems as though Ursinus has been used by Mr. Westhead as a safety valve. To insure himself some job security, as well as raise his stock in the eyes of Loyola Marymount. Westhead obviously and blatantly abused the sanctity of Ursinus' verbal agreement with him. In this way, he lost the respect of a few of the faculty and students of this college.

It is probably best to leave this touchy issue to rest, but before this is done there is the suggestion that Mr. Westhead look to his Shakespearean roots for a mirror of his inconsiderate treatment of our school. A re-reading of Iago's lines in "Othello" might do the trick.

On a much happier note, Ursinus has hired a very competent new men's basketball coach. Al Angelos, former assistant to Philadelphia Textile's Herb Magee, will take over the controls of the Division III Bears. His reputation as a fine recruiter will surely help build a strong Ursinus basketball program.

Soccer adds much depth

By JIM SWAYZE

The potential for the 1985 Ursinus soccer team seems to be limitless. Coming off a record-breaking 18-4 season that ended in a disappointing loss to Clark University in the E.C.A.C. championship game, the team appears to be in its best shape ever. The team hopes to pursue its goal of an ever-elusive MAC Championship or a NCAA bid. The Booters have lost only two starting players from last year's squad. They also experienced a fine year of recruitment. Many freshmen are playing strongly. This should provide the team with much more depth than it has ever had in the past.

After an extended, very intensive, nine-day pre-season camp, the team is looking very solid. To date, the team has had two scrimmages. The first was against Division I St. Joseph's University. Ursinus surprised St. Joe's, dominating much of the game. After one hundred minutes of very physical hard-fought soccer, the Bears finished on top by a score of 2-1. It is interesting to note that both goals were scored by freshmen, the first by Bob Carmignani and the second by Rob Walder.

The next scrimmage was against the Division I Powerhouse, Temple. The Bears seemed to lack their usual sharpness and lost to Temple by a score of 3-1. Ursinus' only goal was scored by freshman half-back, Dennis Quinn.

The Booters will officially open the '85 season on this Saturday, Sept. 14, away, against the always-tough Gettysburg College. The first home game will be on Tuesday, Sept. 17, when they host Western Maryland. Be sure to catch all the action and excitement of the 1985 Ursinus soccer team and follow the winning tradition.

McCloskey: geared to do a Rambo

By ELLIOT TANNENBAUM
The second annual Revenge Bowl, the very earliest of the holiday bowl games, took place on Nov. 16, 1984. In case you missed it, the final score was Brian McCloskey 2, Gavin Lentz 2.

The Revenge Bowl story goes back three years — to the day McCloskey, then a sophomore quarterback, took one too many brain-scrumbling hits in practice from Lentz, then a junior defensive end and Ursinus team captain.

"We were going through a full contact drill," McCloskey remembered. "I ran an option play toward Gavin, and just as I pitched the ball he decked me, really knocked me on my butt. I said, 'I wish I had the chance to do that to you.' He said, 'You can.'

"So we made plans to stay out on the field in full uniform after the last practice of the year, two days before the last game. I'd get to hit him twice, as hard as I could, and he'd hit me twice, as hard as he could.

"We're good friends. We weren't trying to hurt each other or anything, but we COULD have been hurt. It was kind of dumb. If Coach (Sterling) Brown had found out, he'd have killed us.

"We did it my sophomore year, and then we did it again last year. Last year our offensive line coach almost caught us. He stayed out there after practice working with a player.

"We jogged around the track for a while, wondering when they were going in. The lights get turned off, and they're still out there. We run up the hill and jump the fence to the soccer field and wait there. Finally they go in, and we're out there in the dark whaling away at each other."

Lentz is gone now after two all-Centennial Conference seasons. Now that the 5-9 McCloskey has survived into his senior, he can concentrate on going after two other formidable rivals.

The first is Craig Walck, an opponent who can't hit back. His hands and feet are frozen in time, you might say. Walck, who played for Ursinus from 1977 through '80, held every school passing record before last season.

McCloskey chipped away at a couple of them last year. He fired five touchdown passes in a 47-0 win over Lebanon Valley, breaking Walck's record of four and earning Division III Player of the Week honors from the ECAC and Maxwell Club. He wound up with 15 touchdown passes for the season, breaking Walck's five-year-old mark of 14.

This year McCloskey is gearing up to do a Rambo on the record book. He needs just 48 more completions to break Walck's career mark of 262, just nine more TD passes to shatter Walck's record of 32, just 1,325 passing yards to surpass Walck's 4,261, and another 1,679 yards in total offense to snap Walck's record of 4,606.

Just who was Craig Walck? Only the Division III MVP in the ECAC South in 1980, that's who.

All right, and who is this other opponent? He's the bogey man who keeps prying that elusive winning season out of Ursinus' grasp and recovering the fumble. The Bears have gone without a winning season since 1972. Since 1933 — a span of 51 years — they've had only four winners in Collegeville (1953, '54, '69 and '72). None won more than five games.

Sterling Brown and Brian McCloskey, coach and quarterback, arrived at Ursinus together in 1982. That first year, McCloskey came off the bench in the second quarter of the opener and won himself a job.

After five games the Bears were 3-1-1, but then the bogey man stepped in. McCloskey was hurt, and Ursinus lost its last four games to finish 3-5-1.

In 1983 the Bears were 4-4 entering the season finale against a pitifully weak Dickinson team. But even Dickinson can't lose when the other team fumbles six times.

Last year the Bears beat the teams they were favored to beat and lost to the teams that were expected to beat them. Except for one game.

In the second week of the season, playing at home, Ursinus pushed around a punchless

McCloskey on the option

Western Maryland team. The Bears couldn't be stopped and Western Maryland couldn't move the ball — except when the Green Terrors intercepted two McCloskey passes and ran them back 90 and 97 yards for touchdowns. The final: Western Maryland 20, Ursinus 14.

The highlight of 1984 came on Oct. 6, when the Bears rallied from a 20-0 deficit to nip Johns Hopkins, 21-20, for their first win after an 0-3 start. A week later, they played tough against Centennial co-champ Gettysburg before succumbing, 21-10.

The Bears had to win their last four to grab a winning season, and they almost did. But in week 7, they coughed up a 17-0 halftime lead against Muhlenberg and lost a 27-17 heartbreaker on Homecoming Day.

This year the Bears' luck has got to turn. It won't, of course, but this time it may not matter. Sterling Brown has 16 starters back from last year's 4-5 club, 10 of them third- or fourth-year starters. They have the talent to give Ursinus a winner at long last. They have the experience. They have McCloskey.

The records are unclear about whether any Ursinus quarterback in the last 50 years came away with a winning record in games he started. Probably not. But Brian McCloskey is 13-12-1 in 26 career starts (entering his final year. (See RAMBO, P8)

Welcome back coach

By GREG FRASER

Five years ago, in 1980, Ursinus cross country runners won the Mid-Atlantic Conference championship and regretfully said goodbye to the coach that had brought them there. Bob Shoudt, who began coaching track at Ursinus in 1976 and left with an impressive five year record of 54-6 (after an unprecedented 207-7 coaching career at Norristown High) was off to build the Villanova women's track and cross country teams into strong national contenders.

In 1984, he was named Women's Indoor Track Coach of the Year and was quickly hired away from Villanova by the University of Illinois. However, due to an illness inflicting his wife, (from which she has partially recovered) Shoudt found it impossible to coach so far from his family in King of Prussia and decided to find a job closer to home. That job is here at Ursinus and although I would hate to put any pressure on Coach Shoudt, I think it is safe to look for a great season this year.

Good luck and welcome back.

The Shoudt Era

Year	Team	Record
1976	Ursinus	11-4	(11th in MAC)
1977	Ursinus	12-1	(4th)
1978	Ursinus	12-1	(3rd)
1979	Ursinus	11-0	(3rd)
1980	Ursinus	9-0	(1st)

Total: 5 years, 54-6

Ursinus Shorts : There's always campus news

The cross country teams under the direction of new head coach Bob Shoudt, began their season this past weekend by competing in the Philadelphia metropolitan small colleges cross country invitational. For the first time in the history of Ursinus College, a woman's team represented the school.

Also of noteworthy importance is the return of Mr. Shoudt as head coach. Mr. Shoudt was the men's coach from 1976 to 1981 at which time he left to become head coach of the Villanova women's track team. Best known for his recruiting talents, Mr. Shoudt recruited all of the former members of the MAC Championship teams of 1980 and 1981.

The men's team having lost six of the top seven varsity members from last years second place team must now rely on the only returning member of the varsity team, Senior Tom Kershner and on Juniors Dale and Dean Lent to lead the rest of the Bear pack. They are helped by the presence of sophs Bob Shoudt Jr., Barry Papier, and by Freshman Dan Green.

The women's team composed of soph Theresa Divine, Freshman Kristin Volk, Diane O'Toole and Judy Spangler begins its existence with much promise for a successful year and years to come.

Both teams look for strong performances in the upcoming weeks and wish to welcome back Mr. Shoudt as their coach. The teams next meet is at home on Saturday, Sept. 14 versus Montgomery C. C. and Williamson.

SPECIAL SIRENS

Special sirens have been newly installed through this area of Montgomery County. They will emit a steady (not wailing or warbling) signal to alert the public in case of emergencies of various kinds. The sirens primarily are to alert the public in case a radiological emergency occurs at Limerick. The sirens also will be used to warn of other events that endanger the public, such as flooding or an accident involving a tank truck carrying dangerous chemicals or gases.

If the sirens sound, all students, faculty and staff should remain in classrooms, offices or residence halls. The signal will not necessarily call for any action on your part, other than listening to the radio. All radios on campus should immediately be turned to one of the Montgomery County Emergency Broadcast Stations for information about the emergency. See call letters and number in Note A below.

URSINUS COLLEGE RECEIVES WELLNESS GRANT

Ursinus College has announced receipt of a $10,000 grant from the Council for Higher Education, United Church Board for Homeland Ministries, United Church of Christ, in support of a campus-wide wellness program. The program will be implemented during the 1985-86 academic year.

was made secretary to President Richter, and served in that capacity until her recent appointment.

Mrs. Allen's new duties include writing the campus newsletter, The Weekly Gazette and Calendar, writing press releases, editing, print buying, production coordination and maintaining publication schedules.

Mrs. Allen, who lived in Collegeville for 25 years, currently resides in Schwenksville with her husband Dan and two adult children.

CHAIR OF PHYSICS ENDOWED

Ursinus College, in cooperation with the trustees of the Clamer Foundation, will establish an endowed Chair of Physics in memory of Dr. Guillian H. Clamer. Announcing the endowment, President Richter stated that he intends to recommend to the Board of Directors that the College formally establish the chair at Founders' Day on Sunday, Nov. 3, 1985 and name the first person to hold the chair.

Dr. Clamer, a metallurgical engineer, who died in 1963, donated his home to Ursinus, which remains today as a residence hall for women. The Foundation established under his will also has contributed generously to the College over the years. The establishment of an endowed chair seemed to the trustees of the Foundation and to Ursinus to be a fitting way to perpetuate the name and the memory of Dr. Clamer at the College. This timely step on the part of the Foundation and the College will have special relevance for the Campaign for Ursinus. It will highlight the need to provide endowment support for the teaching faculty.

DAILY PRAYER MEETING

An invitation is extended to all students and faculty to attend a daily prayer meeting at 12 noon in Bomberger Mediation Chapel.

VITAL MISCELLANEA

All student employees must come to the Office of the Treasurer to fill out a Resident Certification Form. This form is required by the local tax collector. The form must be completed before a student employee is put on the payroll and paid.

Automobile parking on campus: All members of the campus community are requested to park their cars in the proper parking areas on campus. Parking is prohibited on the campus driveways and lawns. All parking spaces are designated for staff by yellow lines and for students by white lines. All cars are to be registered at the Office of Student Life, Corson Hall 113. Enforcement of parking regulations began on Monday, Sept. Illegally parked cars will be towed away.

Class elections: Elections for all class officers will be held on Thursday, Sept. 26 during lunch and dinner. Petitions are available in the College Union and the Office of Student Life. They must be submitted to the College Union by Friday, Sept. 20. President, vice president, treasurer and secretary will be elected. Freshman class representatives to the Ursinus Student Government Association will also be elected at this time. If you have any questions, contact Devin Murphy, Room 203 C, Reimert Complex.

URSINUS M.B.A. GEARS UP FOR FALL

Due to a strong enrollment this past summer, the directors of the Saint Joseph's University M.B.A. program held at Ursinus College anticipate a successful fall semester.

Valerius Herzfeld, director of the Saint Joseph's M.B.A. program, anticipates "large enrollments at Ursinus in the fall" because of this enthusiastic response."

For Fall 1985, nine core and foundation courses are scheduled at Ursinus including accounting, economics, industrial relations, information systems and finance. Those interested in the program may begin taking courses while completing application requirements for the program.

concept of social mobility. They imply that it is upward mobility." Another common assumption in past writings on the subject has been that parents who own businesses force their children to come into the business with them; that the children have no choice. And conventional wisdom has held that children follow parents because the older generation pulls strings for them. Drs. Lentz and Laband found this simply was not borne out by their research.

According to Dr. Lentz, followers as a group have "a good relationship with their parents and control over their own lives." The authors' research revealed a high rate of career following among the farmers they interviewed (80 percent), as well as the self-employed proprietors (50 percent). They also found significant rates of following among clergy, politicians, and professional baseball players. Farmers' children have an especially great advantage in that they not only learn about farming as they are growing up, but also about how to run a specific farm. Then they inherit the property, machinery and livestock that go with that knowledge.

Drs. Lentz and Laband also studied career following from the employers' and parents' point of view. Some employers have policies against hiring relatives of employees. Some parents do not want their children to follow in their footsteps because of a bad experience they have had in their work field or with a certain employer.

On the other hand, many employers prefer to hire the children of employees because they have knowledge of the business through a parent, which would be costly for them to provide to outsiders through training. And labor unions often have rules which favor admitting members' children into their ranks over persons who have no relatives in the union.

Parents and children who work for the same employer are both likely to perform better, the authors note. The parents want to do well, because if he does not, the child also may be punished. And the younger generation wants to do well so as not to reflect poorly on the parent. Drs. Lentz and Laband say they hope their research will inspire further study in the area of career following. They themselves want to examine the whole question of career following more closely from the parents' point of view. "Who knows," they write, "there may even be enough grist left in these ideas for our children to make a living out of studying following."

A native of Denver, Colo., Dr. Lentz is an associate professor of economics and business administration at Ursinus. He has taught previously at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, where he was assistant head of the economics department, and at the State University of New York at Albany. He holds a B.A. from Oberlin College and two master's degrees and a Ph.D. from Yale University.

Dr. Laband is currently Assistant professor of economics at the University of Maryland. He received his bachelor's and Ph.D. degrees from Virginia Polytechnic.

McCloskey will run the option attack once again, his seventh straight year working with the same offense. He ran it for three years at Penn Charter, earning all-Interacademic League and all-city honors.

His main target will be senior wideout Bill Scanlan, who led the club with 23 receptions last year and tied a school record with three TD catches against Lebanon Valley.

Last year the Bears lost two all-star running backs before the season was two quarters old. Joe Sawyers stepped in when Ed Malandro wrecked his shoulder and Mark Garcia tore up a knee, rushing for 479 yards and setting a club record with 54 points, third best in the conference.

Up front, all six men started at one time or another last year. Tackle Mike Maratea made all-conference honorable mention as a sophomore.

On defense, middle guards Charlie DeFeo and Joe Antonio are back for their fourth years, but Lentz left a hole at one flank and no other jobs in the five-man line were nailed down when camp opened.

Senior linebacker Johy Brady could finally emerge from the shadow of all-ECAC John Romano and claim some honors of his own. They finished 1-2 in tackles the past couple years. Gerry Dougherty will get first crack at the backer's job left vacant by Romano.

The secondary features tough, hard-hitting junior Jack Haurin at free safety and 1984's Freshman of the Year, Chuck Odgers, at strong safety. Haurin had 17 tackles in one game last year, and Odgers was so good they created the award just for him.

TANNENBAUM WINS WRITING HONORS FOR SECOND YEAR

Elliot Tannenbaum, sports information director at Ursinus College, has won his third and fourth major writing awards from the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) in only his second year in the field.

Tannenbaum earned top honors in the Middle Atlantic region in the "Season Review" category for a news release on the Ursinus swimming team. He also took second place in the nationwide competition.
