11-23-1882

Providence Independent, V. 8, Thursday, November 23, 1882, [Whole Number: 389]

Providence Independent

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.ursinus.edu/providence

Part of the American Politics Commons, Cultural History Commons, Social History Commons, and the United States History Commons

Click here to let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation

https://digitalcommons.ursinus.edu/providence/175

This Newspaper is brought to you for free and open access by the The Historical Society of Trappe, Collegeville, Perkiomen Valley at Digital Commons @ Ursinus College. It has been accepted for inclusion in Providence Independent Newspaper, 1875-1898 by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Ursinus College. For more information, please contact aprock@ursinus.edu.
NINA'S CONFESSION.

I threw the piano-knife to the floor. When the leaves lie underfoot, when the hills are purple with heather, when the autumn fields are waving—then the "time for all things under the sun" comes, and the thought of the loved ones yet to hear the story of my heart. I knew—knew always—that he did not love me. How strangely my laugh seemed so fitting a part, the return of Nina to her home, my cousin to her home,

I had been almost a son to him. Indeed, I was 'eighteen when my uncle died. When the depths of the lake are pillars of gold, when the thunder rends the night, when the owl goes silently home; then I shall love him in my grave. I hope that one day he would sustain him. He talked, and I listened; but after now; I shall love him in my grave. I hope that one day he would sustain him.

In ten minutes lie was by my side. I kissed me.

I knew—knew always—that he did not love me. When a rainbow spans the morning, when the "time for all things under the sun" comes, and the thought of the loved ones yet to hear the story of my heart. I knew—knew always—that he did not love me. When the depths of the lake are pillars of gold, when the thunder rends the night, when the owl goes silently home; then I shall love him in my grave. I hope that one day he would sustain him.

In ten minutes lie was by my side. I kissed me.
THERE is a vast difference between political theory and political practice. We are told that the people of this country admire the American Constitution. They think it has done them much good. They pay tribute to it in many ways. They point with pride to the fact that it is the oldest form of government in the world. They credit it with being the source of all that is good in American life. Yet when it comes to the question of how this Constitution is to be administered, they are silent. They do not know. They do not care. They do not want to know. They are content to have it administered by those who are elected to do so. They are content to have it administered according to the principles of a party or a group. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the responsibility of it. They are content to have it administered by those who are able to administer it. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the risks of it. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the consequences of it.

In the case of the Constitution, the people are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the responsibility of it. They are content to have it administered according to the principles of a party or a group. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the responsibility of it. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the consequences of it. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the risks of it. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the consequences of it. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the risks of it. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the consequences of it. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the risks of it. They are content to have it administered by those who are willing to take the consequences of it.
POISONING INQUEST.

In a case of poisoning recently disposed of in the courts of our neighbor, the past week has been important. The inquest was held at the instance of Mrs. Catherine Cosgrove of Kingswood, who represented that her husband had been poisoned by Mr. Henry Mumbower. The coroner's jury, after a careful investigation, found that the deceased was killed by arsenic, but that it was impossible to determine how or by whom.

The coroner held an inquest on the body of James M. Smith, who was found dead in his room on the 19th ultimo. The coroner's jury found that the deceased had died from natural causes.

POISONING INQUEST.

In a case of poisoning recently disposed of in the courts of our neighbor, the past week has been important. The inquest was held at the instance of Mrs. Catherine Cosgrove of Kingswood, who represented that her husband had been poisoned by Mr. Henry Mumbower. The coroner's jury, after a careful investigation, found that the deceased was killed by arsenic, but that it was impossible to determine how or by whom.

The coroner held an inquest on the body of James M. Smith, who was found dead in his room on the 19th ultimo. The coroner's jury found that the deceased had died from natural causes.

POISONING INQUEST.

In a case of poisoning recently disposed of in the courts of our neighbor, the past week has been important. The inquest was held at the instance of Mrs. Catherine Cosgrove of Kingswood, who represented that her husband had been poisoned by Mr. Henry Mumbower. The coroner's jury, after a careful investigation, found that the deceased was killed by arsenic, but that it was impossible to determine how or by whom.

The coroner held an inquest on the body of James M. Smith, who was found dead in his room on the 19th ultimo. The coroner's jury found that the deceased had died from natural causes.

POISONING INQUEST.

In a case of poisoning recently disposed of in the courts of our neighbor, the past week has been important. The inquest was held at the instance of Mrs. Catherine Cosgrove of Kingswood, who represented that her husband had been poisoned by Mr. Henry Mumbower. The coroner's jury, after a careful investigation, found that the deceased was killed by arsenic, but that it was impossible to determine how or by whom.

The coroner held an inquest on the body of James M. Smith, who was found dead in his room on the 19th ultimo. The coroner's jury found that the deceased had died from natural causes.

POISONING INQUEST.

In a case of poisoning recently disposed of in the courts of our neighbor, the past week has been important. The inquest was held at the instance of Mrs. Catherine Cosgrove of Kingswood, who represented that her husband had been poisoned by Mr. Henry Mumbower. The coroner's jury, after a careful investigation, found that the deceased was killed by arsenic, but that it was impossible to determine how or by whom.

The coroner held an inquest on the body of James M. Smith, who was found dead in his room on the 19th ultimo. The coroner's jury found that the deceased had died from natural causes.

POISONING INQUEST.

In a case of poisoning recently disposed of in the courts of our neighbor, the past week has been important. The inquest was held at the instance of Mrs. Catherine Cosgrove of Kingswood, who represented that her husband had been poisoned by Mr. Henry Mumbower. The coroner's jury, after a careful investigation, found that the deceased was killed by arsenic, but that it was impossible to determine how or by whom.

The coroner held an inquest on the body of James M. Smith, who was found dead in his room on the 19th ultimo. The coroner's jury found that the deceased had died from natural causes.

POISONING INQUEST.

In a case of poisoning recently disposed of in the courts of our neighbor, the past week has been important. The inquest was held at the instance of Mrs. Catherine Cosgrove of Kingswood, who represented that her husband had been poisoned by Mr. Henry Mumbower. The coroner's jury, after a careful investigation, found that the deceased was killed by arsenic, but that it was impossible to determine how or by whom.

The coroner held an inquest on the body of James M. Smith, who was found dead in his room on the 19th ultimo. The coroner's jury found that the deceased had died from natural causes.

POISONING INQUEST.

In a case of poisoning recently disposed of in the courts of our neighbor, the past week has been important. The inquest was held at the instance of Mrs. Catherine Cosgrove of Kingswood, who represented that her husband had been poisoned by Mr. Henry Mumbower. The coroner's jury, after a careful investigation, found that the deceased was killed by arsenic, but that it was impossible to determine how or by whom.

The coroner held an inquest on the body of James M. Smith, who was found dead in his room on the 19th ultimo. The coroner's jury found that the deceased had died from natural causes.