As the moonlight lighted up the room, she could see his face more clearly than she ever had before. He was thin, with dark hair, and his eyes were filled with pain. She knew then that he loved her, and that he had been suffering all this time, alone and unloved. She reached out her hand to take his, and his eyes closed in relief. They kissed, and the world around them faded away.

"I love you," she whispered into his ear. "I love you more than anything in the world."
The following was deceived by mail in the mail box of the President of the United States.

The President expresses himself as entirely satisfied with the result of the election, and feels that the country is now in a position to move forward with confidence and energy.

The defeated candidate, John G. D. Pills, of California, who was so active in the canvass, sent a letter to the President, expressing his willingness to serve as Postmaster at Washington, and stating that he would be ready to start work at once.

The President replied, expressing his appreciation of the offer, and stating that he would be glad to have Mr. Pills as Postmaster at Washington.

We regret to announce the death of John H. Yoho, recently elected President of the Lebanon Iron Works.

A Pottstown man has invented a plan for a post office which he says will be a good man in every sense of the word. It consists of a small building with a bell tower, and a series of rooms for the accommodation of the clerks and other officers. The building will be erected in the town of Pottstown, and will be ready for use at the earliest possible date.

The most important feature of the plan is the arrangement of the offices.
The clerks will be in separate rooms, and will be provided with all the necessary apparatus for the transaction of business. The building will be of plain hats, all plugs.

The inventor, Mr. A. H. Bergey, has spent many years in the study of this subject, and has made a careful investigation of the best plans now in use.
He states that his plan is superior in all respects to any that have been proposed heretofore, and that it will be cheaper to build and maintain than any other. The building will be erected at a moderate cost, and will be ready for use at the earliest possible date.

The inventor has already received many orders for his plan, and is now making arrangements to put it into practice. He is confident that it will be a success, and that it will be received with enthusiasm by the public.
