GOOFS-NIGHT.

Good night is a little word for something noble, honest, and good. Mrs. Rushworth had taught her girl to use it, and the girl had learned to use it.

The young girl's name was Cornelia. She had been taught to use the little word, and she had learned to use it.

The Lover's Quarrel.

It was a dark, moonless night.

"Never, while I live," said Miss Bash.

"You're not going to see my face again," said Miss Bash.

She went out, and she went out again, and she went out again.

The next morning, Miss Bash was found dead in her bed.

The young girl's name was Cornelia. She had been taught to use the little word, and she had learned to use it.

Stage-Corner.

Stage-coaching was the main means of travel in the 1800s. It is described in the text as a way of life, and it was a time of great change in society. People were moving from the countryside to the cities, and the stage-coaches were the main way of getting there.

The driver was a man named Orville. He was going to borrow to buy a rabbit. The rabbit was going to be a pet for his mother.

Morning.

"It's Saturday," said Orville's mother. "I'm going to borrow to buy a rabbit. The rabbit is going to be a pet for my mother."
