Residential Village Saluted Ursinus Recipient of County Planning Award

BY KRISTEN RINNANDER
Of The Grizzly

Ursinus College was recently named one of five recipients of the Montgomery County Planning Commission's 1986 Outstanding Land Development Awards.

The College received the honor in recognition of the Residential Village project which restored eleven old Main Street dormitories to their original Victorian appearance.

Musser Hall is part of the award winning renovation project.

"Ursinus has a strong sense of community," said President Richard P. Richter on Wednesday. "We have been pleased to lead the way in preserving the beauty of our typical small college town."

The Residential Village's components are joined together by informal gardens, a walkway system and off-street parking.

Fetterolf House, recently the site of a modern American art show, was expanded and dedicated to the arts in one phase of reconstruction.

Vice President of the college Nelson Williams said, "Being that only five awards were given and considering the many land development projects that have taken place in Montgomery County, it is quite an honor to receive the award for the college and the borough of Collegeville."

Musser Hall, another renovated residence hall in the project, was listed in American School and University Magazines November, 1986 issue as an award winning college building, according to Williams.

The Outstanding Land Development Awards Ceremony was held on January 21 at the county Bar Association in Norristown. President Richter, Williams and Ken Schaefer, College Director of Foundation and Corporate Relations, represented the college at the ceremony.

Representative of Dagit-Saylor Architects of Philadelphia, Gorski Construction, and Collegeville Borough members also attended the ceremony.

Schaefer said, "The planning award, I think, was more for the concept of our restoration rather than knocking down buildings and starting from scratch."

Schaefer added, "This allows the college to offer small residential housing rather than mainly dormitories that hold over 200 people. It will help attract students to the campus."

The college received a handsome certificate which has been hung outside the board room in Corson Hall, which Schaefer holds above Project architect Saylor said, "It is always nice to have your convictions recognized. It's like a stamp of approval."

Art Critic Kuspit Condemns Ursinus' Acquisitions

BY VINCE LESKUSKY
Of The Grizzly

"I think it ('Aggressive Couple') is aesthetically trivial, an insignificant work of art." This is not the opinion of a 'Philistine' student, as Professor Gerard Fitzpatrick suggested in an open dialog a week ago, but of world acclaimed modern art critic Dr. Donald B. Kuspit.

Kuspit, whose credentials include degrees from Harvard and Yale and Ph.D.s from Michigan and Frankfurt Universities, presented "What's Modern About Modern Sculpture" Tuesday in Wismer Auditorium. With an accompanying slide presentation, he elaborated on the evolution, interpretation, and current status of modern art. Although the lecture was coordinated with the arrival of "Aggressive Couple", Kuspit announced the intention of the forum, "I hope it will let you understand the issues, not necessarily that piece on your front lawn."

Acknowledging the absence of clear guidelines, Kuspit stated that the paradox between a body and its inner tension creates a "psychological realism" in which one can discover a variety of meanings.

The end of the discourse focused on the college's involvement with the medium. "Modern art snaps you out of everydayness—adds a moment of consciousness," commented Kuspit, "particularly on a campus where aesthetic values are important.

Responding to the worth of modern art, Kuspit offered a syllogism: Is relativity worthless because I don't understand it? Do I make relativity any less real? I've seen hundreds of pieces and I can tell an object's worth. Sure, it's an attitude of an elitist authority, but it's been said that art's for a chosen few. And I am one of them."

When political science professor Fitzpatrick asked if the fame of Igael Tumarkin was justification enough to proclaim "Aggressive Couple" a worthwhile piece, Kuspit answered, "Every chicken does not lay a golden egg, even if it's a prize winning chicken. It's basically an appeal to authority... it is not a legitimate argument."

Fitzpatrick then requested Kuspit's opinion on the object. "(It incorporates) old ideas used in unimaginative ways," the 1983 winner of the Award for Distinction in Art Criticism said. "The red is unattractive... it is a bad derivative, immediately disordering itself without enough multiple meanings. It is beyond consensus and beyond controversy, making it doubly uninteresting."

Questioned about the "Temple," Kuspit admitted he did not scrutinize it, but opined, "Both (works) look garish in their context. Find a quiet, out-of-the-way spot for them."

Biology Dept. Offers Field Study

By C. NITSCHMANN
Of The Grizzly

Dr. James Sidie and the Ursinus Biology Department have designed and offered a field-oriented, marine biology course for this summer.

The BIO-350B course is worth three biology credits. The class will run from May 19th thru May 30th at the Marine Biology Laboratory in Woods Hole, Massachusetts in Cape Cod.

The Marine Biology Laboratory is one of the most famous marine biology labs in the world. It also contains one of the most extensive biology libraries in the world. The students will be living and working at the laboratory for the duration of the course.

Students will spend approximately half of their day in lecture and the other half in the field observing various marine environments. The field time will depend on the tide schedule. The students will be working directly with live marine animals, in and out of the lab, which will be made possible by the sea water running through the laboratory itself.

Some of the marine habitats on the agenda include: sandy beaches and dunes, Manomet Bird Observatory, the Mass. State Lobster Hatchery in Martha's Vineyard and many more. The students will be graded on two written tests and two field reports.

The course is limited to approximately twelve students. Biology 111 and 112 or permission of the instructor, who is Dr. Sidie, are the only prerequisites. One other minor detail is the tentative cost of $700 which includes: summer school tuition, room and board at the laboratory, and the lab fees. A $200 non-refundable deposit is needed by Monday, February 16th. If interested, contact Dr. Sidie in LSB 211 or Mrs. Heidel the biology department secretary in LSB.

The Grizzly was founded in 1978, replacing the previous campus newspaper, The Ursinus Weekly. It is published by students twelve weeks each semester. The Grizzly is edited entirely by students and views expressed in the paper are not necessarily those held by the administration, faculty or a consensus of the student body. The staff of The Grizzly invites opinions from the college community and will publish them as time and space permit.

How to drive editors up a large wall.

First complain. Tell them that they are disorganized, have no control over their own office. Tell them that the articles are boring, biased and downright inaccurate. Tell them the photos are dark and fuzzy, editorials are dull and the sports incomplete. Tell them that they have no business printing this or that column or letter. Tell them that the faults you found with one article on one page negate any worth the other eight pages may have. Tell them that the subscription you ordered for your parents arrives three weeks late.

Second. Tell them how to run the newspaper. You know better, after all. Tell them what its goals should be, what its priorities should be, how its advertising should be managed. Tell them that the reporter annoyed you, that their photographer, if he was there, got in the way. Tell them you won't allow anyone from your organization to talk to the newspaper anymore because they printed a story about your organization that wasn't entirely favorable. Never mind their responsibility to report what is news, good or bad. But when you want free publicity and they don't have the room, ask them why they fill the pages with so much garbage. Use them.

Third. Hold them responsible for what the entire community thinks of the College. Tell them that when they print a story revealing something less than pleasant about the College, that they are trying to discredit the institution—cry "Yellow journalism!" Covering the news, after all, should come second to enhancing the College's image.

Fourth. Tell them that the 55 volunteer hours they spend each week on that newspaper are wasted anyway because no one can believe anything it prints. Call it The Grossly.

And don't limit your criticism to letters for publication. Editors appreciate letters. They even appreciate constructive criticism, in moderation. Be harsh. Be scathing. Complain to them seven days a week, 18 hours a day, whenever or wherever you see them. (No compliments, please. Never mention a job well done.) Interrupt their meals, stop them at parties, pull them aside when they're late for class, hassle them when they are studying (do they have time to study?), barge into their rooms. Don't talk to them about the weather or classes or what you're doing for spring break, just bother them about the newspaper. It isn't enough the newspaper haunts their every working hour - they should have nightmares about it as well.

Fifth. Tell them they are insensitive to the needs of their constituency. Inensitive, inconsiderate, and arrogant. Don't settle for anything less than perfection by your standards—if their best isn't good enough, let them know about it. But don't volunteer to help out on the paper, because you have too much to do as it is.

And when they get upset, when they walk out in the middle of meals, when they get bitter, tell them they're too sensitive.

And tell them not to take it all so personally.

—The preceding is reprinted from Franklin & Marshall's The College Reporter.

Pro Abortion Bias Suggested

Dear Editor:

I would like to respond to those who view a "religious bias" in the abortion issue as if it were obscene by considering the biases harbored by some proponents of abortion on demand. The first is greed: Anyone making $1,000/hour feels upset when his job is threatened. Yet by charging several hundred dollars for a few minutes procedure abortion clinics and the doctors who work in them find it fairly profitable to "help" those with "problem pregnancies."

Thus we must wonder about the neutrality and openmindedness of faculty members who decry the religious bias of pro-life protesters when their spouse is a lawyer representing a major abortion clinic in litigation which is suing protesters for loss of revenue. Since I have never heard of a lawyer who works for free (I believe this is part of living in the real world), perhaps we should decry the "pocketbook bias" among some on the "pro-choice" side.

Another bias, one which I have much more sympathy with, involves those who defend abortion on demand because they have had one or forced their girlfriend to have one. Everyone naturally defends his actions when challenged, be it the color of clothes he is wearing or his answers on a test. People find it hard to admit that there might have been a better way to handle the problem. However, we should recognize this too is a bias tending to influence people to defend abortion on demand as legal since changing the law would imply they had done something illegal. I empathize with this difficulty, but do not see it providing sufficient grounds for allowing others to continue eliminating their babies.

In short, those who yell "bias!" may themselves have skewed motivations for defending abortion on demand. I think the best solution to this issue is to recognize the (potential) lives at stake and to be looking for alternatives to abortion. If we were more concerned about the personal bias of the "product of conception," would not the right choice of action be clearer?

Art Critic Elitist

Dear Editor,

On Tuesday afternoon, Ursinus College welcomed Donald B. Kuspit to speak about "What's Modern about Modern Sculpture." I was very grateful to have Dr. Kuspit here because I think it is really quite important for every person to realize how insignificant he or she actually is. For eighteen years of my life, I believed that I could actually amount to something in the world. Now I know that I will always be a "nothing" as long as I cannot comprehend modern art. I was always under the impression that art was something to be admired by the people. Thanks to Dr. Kuspit, I have been enlightened. I understand that art is only for the selected few, "the happy few," of the art world. I think, now that I have had this revelation, that I shall go and wonder at the miracles of modern art so that I too can be of that elite group that truly understands life, the universe and everything.

Sarcastically yours,
Mike Todd

Hoopsters Accomplish Goals Despite Poor Press

Dear Editor,

The Ursinus College basketball team succeeded in becoming part of school history recently when we ventured to the beautiful paradise of Hawaii. The trip had been painstakingly prepared and worked on for over a year. Players, coaches, and administration along with superb effort and support of the Hoop Club and boosters allowed some dreams to be realized.

The Hawaii trip was planned for more than just a vacation for the players. Among the reasons for this once-in-a-lifetime trip were to use it for future recruiting of high school athletes, to face tough competition (which we did), and visit a new and different area of the country.

As everyone can imagine, Hawaii has a lot to offer, but we tried to explore the fascination of the islands without bringing embarrassment to the school. Upon returning home, though, we found out that our trip had been tarnished by some overzealous and sensational article writing and we want it known that most of it is untrue and is unappreciated. We don't want to pick on people but to prejudice what the players would be doing in Hawaii before their arrival is blatantly unfair.

We lost three games while in Hawaii. Nothing can change that, but ask anyone on the trip including parents and grandparents, and ask them if we had bleary eyes and didn't hurtle and work hard. We know their reply. Outside of basketball we followed the rules furnished to us and acted just like a group of young guys will—we had FUN. We managed to snorkel, body surf, kayak, lie in the sun and get a tan, and see as many places of historic importance

Kane Commends McCullough

Dear Editor,

Few Ursinus employees have more difficult jobs than Brian McCullough and the men and women who work for the Ursinus security department. While the primary concern of the security office is our welfare, the Ursinus security workers often encounter faculty and students in situations where the security officer appears to be tough and unreasonable.

Since I have heard some of the instances in which someone on campus has been annoyed by an overly zealous security officer, I want to publicly express the gratitude of the Office of Student Life for the commendable job done first semester by student and non student security workers.

While I hesitate to focus on one particular incident, Officers Schwindt and Meyer are to be especially commended for their alertness and quick response to the trespasser who was stealing hub caps from a student's car in the Reimert parking lot. The officers' actions in the morning hours of December 7 not only led to the recovery of the hub caps, but also to the arrest of the criminal by Collegeville police. This type of action helps discourage others who might consider committing campus crimes.

So, here is a tip of the OSL hat to the Security Department!

Sincerely,
J. Houghton Kane
Dean of Student Life

oppose the purpose of an educational institution.

What would your opinion be if you found out that the "Miller's Tale" of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales was no longer being taught at Ursinus because students found it uncomfortably bawdy and didn't want to read it? How would you feel upon learning that the Music History course would no longer touch upon liturgical masses because students found them boring, and that as a result of student outcry, Huckleberry Finn, The Grapes of Wrath, The Crying of Lot 49, and The Sun Also Rises would no longer be studied here?

Chances are that the notion of dictating what professors put on their syllabi strikes you as being absurd. Likewise, most people I know find it hideous to think certain religious groups are lobbying successfully to have textbooks containing Darwin's theory of evolution replaced by books espousing their own "correct" notions on the matter. Censorship and violations of academic freedom

It is for this reason that I grew disturbed during last week's Open Dialog about the "Aggressive Couple." Many students argued that the sculpture is ugly junk, that it is upsetting, and that its presence and placement on the campus should be determined by democratic means. One student asked Mr. Richter, "Why weren't we consulted? We should have some say in the matter." It can be argued that we had our say when we paid our tuition. The college has a specific educational philosophy which, by our presence as students, faculty members, or administrators, we agree to comply with. Professors create syllabi with the intent of educating us, regardless of our comfort or acceptance, and we trust them. We do what they require, or we accept the consequences.

While I find the "Aggressive Couple" ugly, I feel that students who state that they should be able to determine what is and isn't placed on the campus aren't arguing from a well-considered position. Demanding such power is no less antithetical to liberal education than demanding the power to choose which theories Biology professors teach or banning books. If we refuse to look at "Aggressive Couple" now, or permit others to take that option away from us, we may lose As I Lay Dying and find ourselves in a school where placation supercedes education, a place more akin to nursery school than college.

What is more important than your agreeing with what I suggest is that you at least consider the possibility that there's more involved in this debate than whether or not you like the sculpture. Furthermore, if we're going to choose modern sculpture on this campus as the issue over which we shed our general complacency, let's at least do it for the right reasons, and with sensitivity to the larger issues involved. There are some who think most Ursinus students are incapable of sustained and careful thought. They're wrong, and I hope this is the issue which proves it.

CAMPUS MEMO

A graduate of Ursinus from the mid-sixties, who has been a school teacher for a good many years, recently gave me her opinion of the teenagers she encounters daily.

"At home they are not taught to share," she said. "If they don't like the I.V. program they are watching with someone, no problem—they go off to their own room and watch what they want on their own set."

She felt that young people lack the feeling that there is a common bond with other people. They do not know that one has to give of himself or herself in order to receive support and understanding in return.

"They live in single rooms, drive their own cars, do what they want to do without accommodating others."

What our alum was saying is that teenagers are being trained for a lonely and self-centered life. She sees them caring more about things than about people. Cars and computers seem more valuable to them than the character of those around them.

as possible. Everything was beautiful and we can prove it with the pictures we brought back home. To close this, we would like to say thank you to all involved. Incident-

Not being in direct touch with high school students, I am unable to judge the accuracy of such an interpretation. Recalling some of the territorial conflicts over room rights among our own Ursinus students, however, I confess it sounded plausible.

Whatever the current case, it is an unchanging responsibility of educators, in high school and at undergraduate colleges such as Ursinus, to bring out of students a civilized sensitivity to the fact of being inescapably social. "No man is an island," said John Donne. Every bell that tolls, tolls for you and me.

This means that our desires, our needs, our most private-seeming feelings are incredibly like those in the persons around us. And theirs are like ours, if we could just recognize it.

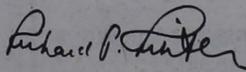

That is why the arts are important. When someone makes a creative work, that person, one might say, literally puts his or her inner feelings on the line—whether the work be painting, poem, musical piece, dance, or even a big outdoor ally, one article that didn't make it back was a Pearl Harbor idea by S.I.D. who wanted a picture of the team posing with a case of beer with a caption reading "Bombed Again." Fortunately sculpture. The texture, shape, contrasts, rhythms, harmonies, all evoked by the inner states of the person making the work, end up in the outside world, accessible to us.

Suzann K. Langer, in "Problems of Art," gets directly at this idea. She says that a work of art "is a perceptible form that expresses the nature of human feeling." It thus enables us to contemplate the very form of another person's feeling by taking in the characteristics of the work that the person created.

That is the humanizing power of art. It is a medium that connects us with another human being and permits us to sense the similarity of our inner lives. It can make us a little more willing to believe that we are on an island with others of our kind. Perhaps it even can make that happen to a 1987 teenager in danger of being trapped in a self-created isolation booth.

Richard P. Langer
President

this nonsense would never be given a second thought, because we are young men who know between right and wrong.

Weaver to Play on Heefner Organ Again

Ursinus College and WHYY-91 FM will jointly sponsor the broadcast of a concert on the Heefner Memorial Organ by John Weaver, internationally-known organist. The concert will be aired on Wednesday, February 11, 1987, at 9:00 p.m.

The program will include A Trumpet Minute by Hollins and Adagio and Allegro in F (K. 594) by Mozart. Works of Durufle, Widor, and Reger will also be included.

The 62-rank, three manual organ, built by Austin Organs Incorporated of Hartford, Conn., is the gift of Mrs. Lydia V. Heefner of Perkasie, Pa., in memory of her husband, Russell E. Heefner.

The concert was taped during Mr. Weaver's November 19, 1986, performance celebrating the dedication of the instrument.

John Weaver has been director of music at the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York City since 1970, and head of the Organ Department at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia since 1972. Following undergraduate study at Curtis Institute, Mr. Weaver earned a master of sacred music degree from Union Theological Seminary.

Weaver has played concerts throughout the USA, Canada and Germany, and has been guest soloist on national television and radio network programs here and in Germany. He has written numerous articles for organ and church music magazines, and his published compositions for organ, chorus/organ and flute/organ are widely performed.

1987 Graduate Guides Now Available

Copies of the 1987 Graduate School Guide have been received in the college's career planning and placement office.

This directory contains information about master's and doctoral degree programs at over 400 colleges and universities in the Northeast and Midwest. Every graduate degree program is listed along with majors, tuition, names of deans and satellite campus addresses. A cross reference section is provided so that students can quickly identify those schools which offer the degree program they are interested in.

In addition, the directory includes a section of student reply cards which make it easy for students to write away for literature and application forms.

Free copies are available while they last.

OBITUARY

Board Member Jeffers Dies at 79

The Rev. Dr. Merritt J. Jeffers, '29, a member of the Board of Directors of Ursinus College since 1953, died on Sunday, February 1, 1987. Dr. Jeffers served for many years as chairman of the Athletics Committee.

A memorial service will be held at St. Stephen's United Church of Christ, 3rd Street and Walnut Street (East Route 422), Lebanon PA 17042, at 2:30 p.m. Sunday February 8, 1987. A reception will follow at the church. Interment will be private.

Gifts in memory of Dr. Jeffers may be sent to St. Stephen's United Church of Christ or Lebanon Community Library.

Flowers will be accepted and recognized at the service.

Those wishing to send messages of sympathy may write to Mrs. Ruth Jeffers, 302 Pershing Avenue, Lebanon, PA 17042.

Merritt Jeffers loved Ursinus College and served it well as a student, alumnus, and Board member. He was a member of the Ursinus Hall of Fame for Athletes. In his ministry Dr. Jeffers exemplified the Christian ideals upon which Ursinus was founded.

The Coddling of College Students

BY NICHOLAS BERRY

Ursinus Pol. Sci. Professor

The recent Carnegie report on education was far too soft on the current generation of college students. Year after year since the mid-1970's those of us in higher education have faced the uncaring, the insipid, the drab. It is a travesty even to call them students.

They ask all the wrong questions: "What do you want us to know?" "What should we study for the exam?" "What do you want on the term paper?" While not new questions, everyone now seems to be asking them. These late adolescents want to be either sponges or clones.

That is not all they want to be. They also want to be comfortable—properly bedded, wedded, and careered. Security is their launching pad for the higher frontier of status and fun, fun and status. Their ability to think seemingly abandoned them at birth. In short, this generation of college students is a disgrace.

Can you imagine the day when these comatose minds become captains of industry, government and the professions? Unless something happens to snap them out of it, this country is in for an era of blah.

Everyone will be into therapy, diets, gourmet cooking, more diets, strange hairdos, straight teeth, body care, selective sex, flower gardening, and the "club," whether golf, tennis, or yacht. With us now, these self-centered activities will boom in the future. I can't think of a nicer bunch of people to be stuck with a $2 trillion national debt.

How did they become the brain-dead generation? The familiar explanations probably contain a great deal of truth. Concern over getting a job produces both business majors by the legions and strong motives to conform. Being out of step may endanger employment or graduate school—at least that's what the students think. Be safe.

In addition, the intellectual hangover after Vietnam and Watergate brought a desire for stability. Students' parents wanted to settle down, regroup, think about themselves, forget about doing good and do-gooders. More couples began working hard, not just to make ends meet, but to bring home superfluous bucks. What values are given to the kids? Money and security—all for status and fun.

And then there was the nation's leadership. It started with an accidental president, Gerald Ford, who was without an agenda. Jimmy Carter followed with his uncertain strategies in pursuit of contradictory goals. Ronald Reagan then gave us the art deco reaction, which was challenged with all the intellect Walter Mondale could muster. It wasn't much. Doldrums.

Students have no example of what they could do and should do for themselves or for the public good.

Few are asking what they can do for their country. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett is wrong when he blames the educational establishment for teaching the wrong values or no values at all. There are limits to what schools can do. The temper of the times overwhelms the influence of teachers, many of whom are very much in harmony with the temper of the times themselves. Don't blame the schools. Blame ourselves and what we have done to the young.

Unless we want a disaster to break the lethargy (war, depression, and plague do compel thought and community-mindedness after all), the generations in advance of current students must rediscover that part of American tradition that is now neglected.

It begins by questioning our sterile preoccupation with money

and status. Bennett is right when he identifies values as the basis of life, for we pursue what we hold to be of worth. The rediscovery continues with answers as to how our lives can make any difference at all. If we think for ourselves about others, thereby combining individualism and community, perhaps students will do the same.

For higher education in America, the rediscovery cannot happen too soon.

(This article was reprinted from the January 14 issue of The Philadelphia Inquirer).

I can easily recall my immediate reactions to Dr. Berry's editorial—outrage, anger, defensiveness. I felt a special closeness to this attack, considering that I was not only an "insipid" "sponge" of the 80's but also a student at the college at which Dr. Berry teaches. The implications were clear that I was a member of the group upon which this article was based. I felt doubly blest.

For a couple of days after the article appeared in the Philadelphia Inquirer, I unleashed my violent rebuttal upon whoever would listen. I eagerly awaited my return to campus so that I could concoct a slanderous denunciation of Dr. Berry's article. But in preparation for this editorial reply, I reread Dr. Berry's article. And then I read it again. Remarkably, I found my views changing, my perspective shifting. I read it a few more times. While some of my initial complaints still pertained, I was able to gain an understanding of Dr. Berry's intended message. My poisoned pen was replaced by a ball point.

My opposition to much of what Dr. Berry aspires still exists. I found his tone arrogant and his judgments terribly self-righteous. The principal flaw of both the article and his entire argument is the gross exaggeration that all of today's college students are insensitive, money-hungry monsters. After one's first reading of the article, there is no doubt that that message was intended; in the second paragraph, the word "everyone" is even italicized. Others have suggested to me that such an overstatement was used to get the readers' attention, but I feel that editorials should contain what one truly believes.

Considering that the Inquirer printed Dr. Berry's college affiliation and position at the end of his article, I believe that Dr. Berry's misrepresentation of Ursinus College's students was careless, as well as inaccurate. Although he never attacked Ursinus students specifically, on whom is the reader to assume Dr. Berry was basing his views?

The Bible states that God said He wouldn't destroy Sodom and Gomorrah if there was "one honest man" in the cities. Unfortunately, Dr. Berry did not give us the same courtesy when it came to the search for "one honest student" at Ursinus. Fire and brimstone rained down upon all members of the Ursinus "travesty." No personal success stories or statistics need to be presented here to prove that there are many fine students at Ursinus and other institutions.

However, I do agree with Dr. Berry's main point: Today's college students, a group of which I am a member, have an unhealthy obsession with "money and status." Dr. Berry is not speaking against people who strive for success and happiness. He is pointing to the flaws in value systems that consider salary first and then desire and motivation. If money becomes one's primary concern, one has been depersonalized to a "unlearning clone."

There can be no doubt, however, that the current preoccupation with money is a sad yet evident product of the entire nation's value system. If food prices drop one percent, we overlook our two trillion dollar deficit and praise President Reagan. Our perception of national money matters is grossly distorted.

The system not only tells us to be concerned about money, but it warns us that we won't get much if

Grappling Bears Stun Opponents in Streaking to 9-2

Assistant Head Coach Lonny Moore discusses strategies with Head Coach Bill Racich, who led Spring-Ford High to the Chest-Mont league title in 1980 before assuming his role at Ursinus.

Wednesday night, in their fifth Middle Atlantic Conference game of the season, the Bear hoopsters roared back from a nine point deficit at halftime to down Johns Hopkins 79-64.

Sophomore forward Swirl Joyner led Ursinus with 19 points while pulling down 11 rebounds. Paul Udovich added 18 points of his own and 11 assists, which fell short of his personal best of 13 assists accomplished earlier in the season against Mount St. Vincent.

In the first half of the contest, the lead see-sawed between Hopkins (4-11, 0-4) and U.C. Hopkins sophomore center Mike Latimore (6'4") netted 12 of his 16 points in that half but was held back for the remainder of the game by a solid Ursinus defense. In fact, the Bears gave up just seven points in the first 14 minutes of the second half.

This important win keeps Ursinus (8-11, 3-2) eligible for the MAC playoff scheduled for February 26. In the last 19 games against Hopkins, U.C. has been on top 15 times.

However, the hoopsters were not so advantageous earlier in the week falling to Widener, 60-49. Widener, ranked fifth in the nation in Division III, was down by one at the half after Ursinus fought back from behind, 7-0. But the Bears could not stop the MAC's best player, Lou Stevens, who poured in an incredible 27 points to help the Pioneers soar to a 37-28 lead with nine straight points with just 10 minutes left in the game.

Ursinus attempted to close the gap with just minutes to play but the Bears were forced to foul and Widener managed to hit 22 of 24 free throws to secure their win over threatening U.C. John (Ice) Maddox was the Bears hi-scorer with 15 points and he also led in rebounding with six.

In Monday's non-league game against Moravian, free throw shooting once again proved to be a key factor as Moravian, who went 17-for-19 in free throw attempts, edged Ursinus, 64-54. Joyner contributed 13 points while Senior John Boyle added 10 points and six rebounds

When they're down, the grappling Bears of Ursinus don't roll over and die.

Before their opponents can blink, or glance casually at the scoreboard, the Bears turn up the winner.

The Bears (9-2) journeyed to Susquehanna Tuesday night to oppose Elizabethtown and host Susquehanna in a tri-meet. Both competitive teams figured to be stacked.

"Tonight's going to be tough," said head coach Bill Racich before their chartered bus to Selinsgrove hit the highways.

Racich was right. His team was forced to battle back for the first time this season. But they did, 37-12 over Elizabethtown and 29-19 over Susquehanna.

"We wrestled well," said Racich, "and the team is starting to come on."

Racich continued, "We were losing for the first time this year in both matches but our wrestlers did what they had to do."

The edge in both matches was the Bears' consistent line-up.

Against Elizabethtown, Ursinus was in a bouncing, up and down battle which wasn't secured in Bear paws until Kevin Ross, at 167, pinned Steve Cappofferi at 1:45, to solidify the lead, 19-12. The rest was academic, to say the least.

Junior Chuck Odgers won by injury default over Dan Scaricciottoli at 3:31 after leading 8-6 in the match. Two forfeits were graciously accepted by John Love at 190 lbs. and Ron Matthew at heavyweight.

The early road through Elizabethtown's territory wasn't as easy.

Sophomore Tim Seislove (118 lbs.) dropped a 7-1 decision to Jeff Forrer and last year's team's Most Valuable Player, Brian Hons, suffered through a close one, 11-10, after suffering two near falls in the third period.

Key wins against Elizabethtown were registered by 126-pounder Steve Laudermlch in a decision over Tim Gerber, 8-4, and sophomore Tri-Captain Milton Silva-Craig who pinned Jeff Franquet at 5:09.

Tri-captain Dave Durst turned the tide of the entire match by taking a major decision at 158 over Tom DiPasqualle, 13-5.

"I just told the kids, win your match, and the team victory will follow," said Racich. "A good team can overcome obstacles."

The Selinsgrove boys brought heavy artillery to the mats, including the likes of defending Middle Atlantic Conference 158 pound bronze medalist Chris Laberque, who beat Hons in the finals last year.

However, Durst (21-5-2) laid low the effort of Laberque and held him off to a 6-6 draw. After being down 6-0, Durst rushed back with two take-downs and a near fall to even the score.

It was a case of deja vu as Durst and Ross again put Ursinus on top, after trailing the first five bouts 14-12.

Ross decisioned George Sax, 4-0 and made it 17-16. Ursinus never looked back following victories by Odgers and Love, who pinned their opponents respectively at 5:31 and 3:01.

Racich said about Ross, "He's getting mentally better. I think his

Men's Track Impressive Early in Season

BY DEAN LENT
For The Grizzly

Last Friday night, the men's indoor track team competed in a six-team open meet at Lehigh University. This meet featured schools from all three divisions. Along with Ursinus were fellow MAC schools Moravian, Muhlenberg, and Delaware Valley, Division II Kutztown, and Division I Lehigh.

With the weather conditions outside being at best lousy, the team has had no real chance to train. However, they came prepared for this meet and the results were outstanding. Out of the 11 running events, Ursinus won 5 and placed in 4 others. Leading the way was Senior Dean Lent. Dean won the 600 yard run in a personal best of 1:14.4. He then led off the winning two mile relay, which included his twin Dale, John Melody, and Jim Doyle. Dean Lent (2:02.8), Melody (2:03.3), Dale Lent (2:05), and Doyle (2:06), won by a margin of 22 seconds, and set a UC BEST at Lehigh with their time of 8:17.

Senior Co-captain Mike Griffin met with success in the 1 mile/2 mile double. The mile turned out to be the harder of the two races. Griffin stayed up in the front of the pack for most of the race, but had to settle for third place. His only consolation was that the two runners that beat him were from Division I Lehigh. Griffin's time was 4:31.1. In the two mile, he again had no problem. Leading from the sound of the gun, he controlled the pace and went on to win in a time of 9:52. Freshman John Melody was Ursinus' other double winner. Along with his victory in the two mile relay, Melody won the 1000 yard run.

Using a late surge, John held off teammate Dale's blistering kick, to win a time of 2:23.1. Dale finished second in 2:23.7.

In the 60 yard dash, Ursinus had a good showing. Junior Rich Dunlap won the 60 in a time of 6.7 seconds. He was followed by Senior Dean Condodina (3rd) and Freshman Lou Heanel (6th). Dunlap joined up with Freshman distance runners Rob Hacker, Brian Schulman, and Pat Sherwood for a fourth place finish in the mile relay. Freshman shot putter Trevor Hughes finished third in the shot, with a toss of 42 feet.

Other fine performances were: Doyle's 5th place finish in the 600 (1:23) and Dale Lent's 6th place finish in the 440 (54.9). Hacker (4:53), Schulman (5:02), and Sherwood (5:02), all ran well in the mile. Lou Heanel had a good jump of 19 ft. 10 in. in the long jump while Rob Cordes jumped 6 ft. 2 in. in the high jump.

This weekend the team has two meets. Tonight the team competes at Haverford College in an open meet, and Sunday the team travels to the University of Delaware Invitational. This meet features schools from all three divisions.

Mer Men Waiting for Loyola

The Ursinus men's swim team continued to roll this past week, with back to back victories over Western Maryland and Elizabethtown.

The men's team has now won four in a row against Western Maryland. Peter Smith, Gavin Geiger, Dave McDevitt, Scott Robinson, and Rock Heebner all won individual events.

Robinson, McDevitt, Paul Fornale, and Seymour Clark Reynolds all participated in winning the 400 Meter Medley Relay and Superfly. John Amon captured the diving.

Fine performances continued against Elizabethtown on Tuesday. Junior Smith won the 1000 freestyle, establishing a new school record in the event. Senior co-captain John McGurk scored an impressive victory in the 200 yard freestyle. His fellow captain, Paul Barone, swam a fine race in winning the 100 yard freestyle. Junior Clark Reynolds was outstanding in 500 freestyle, showing a strong comeback from shoulder tendonitis. McDevitt and Amon also scored strong victories.

The Bears also turned in two excellent performances in winning both relays. Rob Stankiewicz, (who has been showing remarkable improvement), Lenny Paparo, (who turned in a personal best in the 100 yard free), Robinson, and Geiger swam to victory in the 400 yard relay.

There were many personal bests on Tuesday night. Smith in the 1000 free turned in a time of 10:41.98, Senior McGurk 1:58.78 in 200 free, Junior McDevitt 5:22.77 in the 500 free, Paparo 55.84 in the 100 free, and Stankiewicz 55.2 in the 100 free as well. The most remarkable improvement was shown by Freshman Paul "Fonzie" Fornale who turned in a blazing 2:30.52 in the 200 breast, and an awesome 105.8 in the 100 breast.

The men face Susquehanna this Saturday and on Tuesday will face the Division I Greyhounds of Loyola at home in what has the potential to be the most exciting meet of the season.

Lady Hoopsters Capture First Home Win

BY BRIDGET ALGEO
Of The Grizzly

The Ursinus women's basketball team has finally shown some signs of health. After suffering from a three week malady—during which the Lady Bears saw any hopes for an MAC title vanish as they lost six out of seven contests—the team displayed evidence of recovery this past week by defeating two MAC conference teams, Haverford and Swarthmore, before the home crowd.

The back-to-back wins came only after the women suffered losses to Spring Garden, Moravian, Muhlenberg, Albright, Immaculata, and Widener.

However, the team worked to cure themselves of whatever had been ailing their play, and on Monday evening, they defeated Haverford, a game in which every Ursinus player scored at least one basket. Despite a flagrant lack of competition, the Lady Bears savored the victory for morale's sake, as Co-captain Ginny Migliore-bucketed 13 points in the effort. Migliore led a host of other team members—Nancy Karkoska, Kris Carr, and Ronni Algeo—who each shot superbly as well as playing outstanding floorgames.

In addition, sophomores Kim Graeff and Judy Facciolini and junior Laura DeSimone contibuted greatly to the team's disciplined play.

If Haverford was an easy win, Swarthmore was the exact opposite: a hard-fought battle that was eventually awarded to the team who have more. Again, it was U.C.

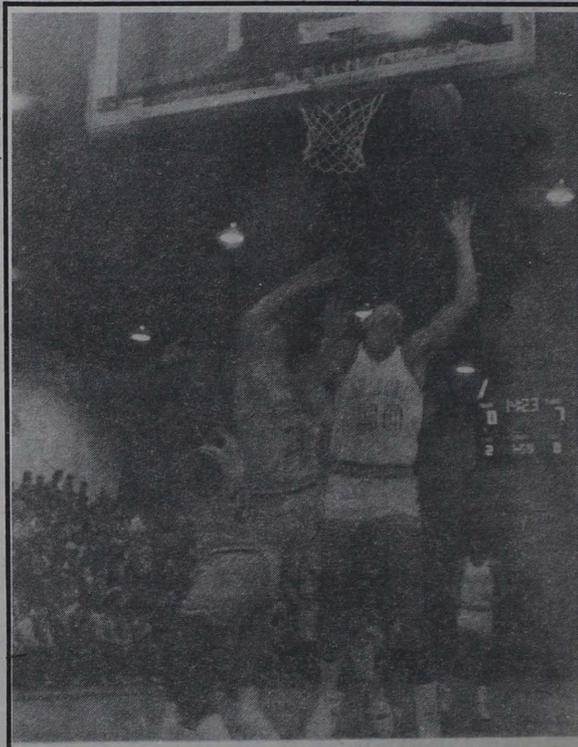

Though lacking in control and composure early in the game, the Grizzlies healed their weaknesses (as well as a 12-point deficit) to move within 5 points at the half. The momentum swing was due largely in part to freshman Lynne Ashman, who came off the bench to score 7 first-half points, and junior Bobbie Sue Copley, who performed an excellent floorgame before being sidelined with a potential broken nose.

Junior livewire Barb Caffrey carried much of that momentum into the second half, as she teamed with Ronni Algeo, Migliore, and Carr to give Swarthmore a pesty defensive unit that caused turnovers and converted points.

The game was finally won, however, as sophomore sensation Laura "Touke" Letukas, nailed two free throws to boost the score to a 61-59 final. Letukas also joined Bridget Algeo (16 points, 11 rebounds) in scoring, as she posted 13 points.

The two consecutive wins seem to be an indication of improvement for the Lady Bears with many tough games still before them (as well as dealing with several team injuries). The team is hoping it has cured its temporary illness, but has kept a permanent fever.

Senior John Ginley maneuvers between his two Widener opponents to pick up two points off the boards. Widener went on to win the Division III game, 60-49.

BEAR NOTES—Sophomore Durst (158) has been named Ursinus Athlete of the Week after winning a silver medal against Division I and II opposition at the West Liberty State Invitational in West Virginia last weekend.

Durst opened the season November 15 by winning his second straight gold medal at the LaSalle Invitational. In December he took the bronze at Lebanon Valley, and in January he won a fourth-place medal at the highly competitive Ram Invitational at West Chester.

Sophomore Wrestler Seislove on a Roll

Tim Seislove, former Spring-Ford High standout, hadn't lost to an MAC challenger this season until this past Tuesday night.

By JOSEPH F. PIRRO
Grizzly Senior Editor

When Tim Seislove walks triumphantly from a wrestling mat, he doesn't bask in the glory.

"It feels good to win, but I think about how I wrestled and how I can get better," said the Spring-Ford High School graduate, who now leads Ursinus College's Bear attack at 118 pounds.

"He doesn't need to blow his own horn," said Bear head coach Bill Racich. "Seislove is that good. He does his talking on the mat and others respect him. I admire him."

Seislove had made improvement seem generic, like something that's supposed to happen in athletics. But it's not always the case.

Like making money, becoming a better wrestler only comes about the old fashioned way - by earning it.

"Wrestling is all confidence," said Seislove. "If you think you're better than your opponent, you will go out and beat him."

It's this kind of positive thinking that's allowed Seislove to improve his record from 6-7 as an Ursinus freshman to 14-6-1 thus far in his sophomore stint.

The 118-pounder had taken silver medals this year at the Division I West Chester Invitational Tournament and at the LaSalle Invitational. And he hasn't lost to anyone in the Middle Atlantic Conference this year.

Two of his losses at the competitive 22-team Lebanon Valley Tournament came at the hands of former nationals qualifiers, and he still took a fourth-place.

"I've learned to stick it out," said Seislove. "Last year, I came into the college's practice room and had four 118-pounders beating me up."

Seislove lasted, the others didn't. "I'm more confident on my feet," he added. "I feel I can take down anyone I wrestle."

"He will never quit," said Racich. Seislove is dedicated, determined and has the desire. He never stops. He uses his movement and capitalizes upon it."

Racich continued, "He's taken verbal abuse from me lately because I want him to succeed and get better. He can win the conference at some point in his career."

At Spring-Ford, Seislove followed the footsteps of older brother Dan, who qualified for states his senior year with the Rams. The path was sometimes painful.

"I'd come home from a match and my brother would laugh and ask, 'Did you get pinned?' and I would say 'yes,' and then he'd laugh again.

"In seventh grade, after the first week of wrestling, I was getting killed," said Seislove. "I didn't think it was my sport; I wanted to try basketball, but my father said stick it out and if you don't like it, don't go out next year."

Spring-Ford High School is glad he didn't trade in his shoulder roll for a basketball.

In three years as a Ram, he amassed a 62-19-2 record. His win total still stands as a Spring-Ford record.

A Baby and the Ball—Two Plays Called at Once

By ELLIOT TANNENBAUM
Sports Info. Director
Special To The Grizzly

"Ginny! Run the play! Run the pl . . ."

Once again, Lisa Ortlip-Cornish caught herself in the act of shouting. She choked back the next few words before they could escape her throat.

Lisa Ortlip-Cornish is a basketball coach, the new women's coach here at Ursinus. And basketball coaches have been known to speak up now and then, especially when practice isn't going picture-perfect.

But not this coach. Not when it could wake the baby.

"I've brought her to practice three times," said Ortlip-Cornish, 26, who this fall ran smack into a situation unique among women coaches -- a new baby and a new team arriving just a week apart. "I had the baby against my chest in a Snuggly, and she slept right through everything. Except when I forgot she was there and started yelling."

On Oct. 7, eight days before her first scheduled practice with her first college team, Lisa Ortlip-Cornish landed her first blue-chip recruit -- 8-pound, 15-ounce Brooke Cornish, Ursinus' power forward of the future.

The baby's bloodlines are impeccable. Mom goes 6-foot-4, Dad

6-7. As plain old Lisa Ortlip, Mom led Villanova to a 29-4 record and the AIAW Final Four in 1982, taking Big East MVP honors and winning her second Philadelphia Big Five player of the year award. Four years before that, in 1978, she led Norristown High to the Pennsylvania Class AAA state title.

But for little Brooke, college basketball is 17 or 18 years away. All it means now is a rude interruption to her afternoon nap.

"Having to keep quiet at practice, that's the only hassle," her mom said, "that and not being able to run. What I'll do is have one of my assistants standing beside me, and I'll go, 'Yell this, yell that,' and they do. Even if I don't tell them, they'll pick up on it and yell for me."

Ortlip-Cornish had a 2½-year-old son named Derek and a ripe five-month pregnancy when she signed on at Ursinus in May. After two years at Bishop Kenrick High in Norristown, it would be her first shot at college coaching, and she knew it was no plum assignment. The Division III Bears have had only one winning season (1979-80) in 14 years.

She also knew that the baby's due date (Oct. 1) and the start of preseason practice (Oct. 15) were uncomfortably close.

"I suppose I was a little worried about how my husband Doug would take it," she recalled. "The day I got the job I called him at work and said, 'Uh . . . guess what?' But he was fully behind it from the start. We never saw it as a major problem. He was excited for me, no question about it."

Excited enough to lend a hand at practice until Ortlip-Cornish made her first appearance Oct. 20. Excited enough to scout Ursinus' opponents once the season began.

"I've been pretty lucky," she said. "the baby's into a good schedule, and Doug is helping out a lot. So far it hasn't been a chore at all. I asked one of my captains, Ginny Migliore, if she could find us a babysitter, and she hooked us up with three girls from Ursinus. They're taking turns babysitting for me, and they're just great. If one can't be there, another can."

"Derek hasn't given me any major headaches, either. When he comes to practice with me, he stays off the court and bounces his basketball. He's getting better and better at it. I think he'll be ready for a league soon."

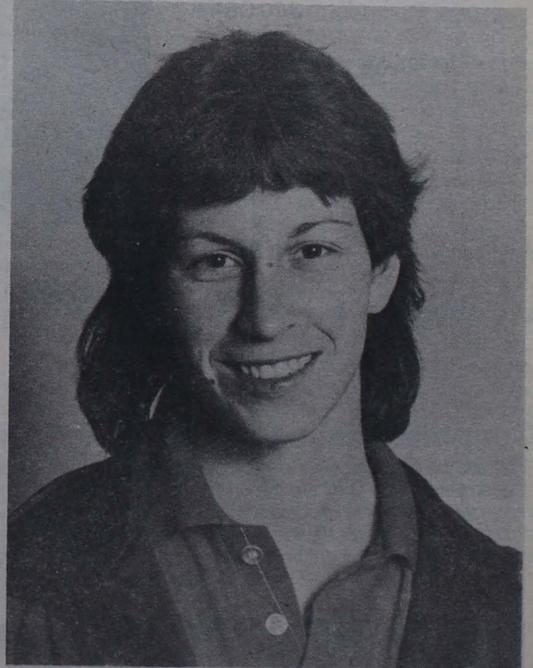

In the late '70s and early '80s, Ortlip pulled Villanova into the major leagues of women's basketball, setting 13 school records and leading the Wildcats to three Big Five titles. She ranks third on the 'Cats' all-time scoring list with 1,634 points (14.7 avg.) and leads all rebounders with 945 boards (8.5 avg.).

As a senior in 1981-82, she made the Kodak all-America team as an honorable mention and was a finalist for the Wade Trophy, the Heisman of women's basketball.

See OrtlipP8

Balancing a baby and a basketball team, ex-Villanova star Ortlip-Cornish takes reins of Lady Bears.

• Ortlip from P7

But her best sport may have been volleyball.

In 1981 Ortlip won the Whelan & Whelan Award, given to the top woman volleyball player in the Philadelphia area. Some aficionados will swear she'd have played in the Olympics alongside Flo Hyman had she made the decision to concentrate on that sport in college and put basketball out of her life.

(Last spring she coached the Bishop Kenrick girls to the Philadelphia Catholic League title in volleyball.)

But Ortlip took on both sports and excelled at both, just as today she's choosing to coach and raise a family. After coping with Final Four pressure and state title-game pressure, what's a dirty diaper?

"It would be different," she said, "if Ursinus had a Division I program and I had to eat, drink and sleep basketball 24 hours a day. But with a Division III program like ours, you can still have a family life."

A slightly disjointed dinner schedule is about the worst thing the family has to put up with. The Cornishes live just half a mile from campus. When the Bears practice in late afternoon, as they do most of the time, dinner is served around 8 p.m.

"I put the baby to bed around 6:30, 7 at night," Mom said, "and she's been just great. She'll sleep all the way to 7:30, 8 in the morning. I'll get up and feed her, then Derek gets up and I'll feed him, and by that time the baby's ready to go down for another hour, hour and a half of sleep.

"She's real content most of the time. She'll lie there and look at her mobile. She never cries unless she's hungry or wet.

"About the only problem I have is keeping Derek from climbing into her crib. He likes to sit there and look at her, but he's athletically inclined and sometimes he practically climbs on top of her."

And has the baby shown any sign of athletic prowess?

"Well, she's got long fingers. It looks as if she'll palm a basketball before her mom does."

Lisa Ortlip-Cornish can be reached by phone at 489-4111 (office) or 489-4983 (home).

Japanese Program Offered Again

BY MATTHEW DARRIN
Of The Grizzly

For the sixth consecutive year, Ursinus students are being given a wonderful opportunity to study abroad in Japan.

The program runs from May 20-June 25 in collaboration with Tohoku Gakuin University in Sendai. All students receive three credits upon successful completion of a three week academic program by the faculty of Tohoku Gakuin.

This program includes language study, lecture discussion groups, and studies of contemporary Japan. While in Sendai, students live with Japanese families and have a unique chance to experience Japanese life and culture.

Students then take a two-week tour of Japan's historical and economic heartland, including visits to Tokyo, Kyoto, Hiroshima, and an in-depth tour of the Nissan automobile factory.

Despite the dollars large fall to the Japanese yen in recent months, Tohoku Gakuin is offering a repeat price of $2,750. Ursinus will subsidize $200 to lower the price to $2,550. This will cover all fees, boards, and lodging from departure until return. This year the program leader is Mr. Egon Borgamann the Economics Department. More information can be obtained by contacting Dr. Hugh Clark, 304 Sprinkle Hall, ext. 2299.

Fishing Club Facts

By ANDY STANDEVEN
Of The Grizzly

The Fishing Club is another one of those small Ursinus clubs that has noble goals--which you can read about in their four-page constitution--but whose real purpose is to relax and enjoy. The club seeks to make the campus aware of excellent local fishing opportunities and to have a good time in the process.

The focus of the Fishing Club is the Perkiomen Creek, which is a stone's throw from Ursinus along Route 29. Members fish the "Perky" and other local hot spots together or individually, the only requirement being that they keep track of their success or lack thereof.

Members note what fish they catch, as well as how and where they catch them, on a standard sheet. The club amasses these sheets and periodically summarizes its findings and posts club records. The club's '86 Summary, which will soon be available to the campus, and will give information and tips about fishing the Perkiomen.

The Fishing Club also performs monthly water quality testing of the Perkiomen. Possible pollutants and seasonal changes affecting fishing are monitored.

The club meets formally only once a month at 7 p.m. on a Wednesday. Dean Richard Whatley is the advisor. Meetings are always tongue-in-cheek affairs, and they usually feature a member speaking about an area of his/her fishing expertise.

The Fishing Club also sponsors a variety of trips and outdoor activities. This spring, club events will include a white-water rafting trip, a visit to the Outdoor Show in Harrisburg, and the annual Campus-Wide Trout Fishing Tournament in April. New members are welcome at the next meeting to be held on Wednesday, February 11, at 7 p.m. in Bomberger 106.

Health Promotion Project

Greetings to Ursinus! We are very pleased to be working with the students and staff. Who are we? And why are we here? We are both senior nursing students from Villanova University sent here to Ursinus to work on a Health Promotion project. Together we will be working with Student Life and the Athletic Department to continue designing programs on various health related topics.

The key here is that we need your help so that we are able to provide the programs that you, the students and faculty, want. In order to arrange a program certain information is needed—1) what you are interested in 2) what is the current knowledge level of the topic and 3) when is the most accessible time to present the program.

It seems that the most efficient way of collecting the information is through a short questionnaire. This is where you come in. The questionnaire will be handed out in Wismer Hall next week. It will take no more than five minutes. Programs will be planned in response to the desires of the campus. So be sure to fill out a questionnaire next week and let us know how we can better serve you.

Student Symposium in Washington

The Center for the Study of the Presidency is hosting its 18th annual Student Symposium at Hyatt Regency Washington on Capitol Hill the weekend of March 20-22. In observance of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, the Center has chosen the theme to be "Secure the Blessings of Liberty." Ursinus may nominate two students to attend. Some of the nation's top leaders, media persons, and Congressional, State, Defense and White House staff members will participate. Besides the President of the United States, who is invited to give the reception address, other participants include Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and Andrea Mitchell, NBC White House Correspondent. The Symposium, hotel and meals, costs $315. For further details and an application, see Dr. Berry at 016 Bomberger ext. 2416.

Lorelei, a U.C. Tradition

The Lorelei, an Ursinus tradition sponsored by the Campus Activities Board, is a dance in which the girls ask the guys for dates.

This year the Lorelei will be held on February 21st, at the Valley Forge Sheraton from 9p.m. to 1 a.m. Dress differs according to preference, but the majority of people go formally in dresses and suits. There is no charge for this event; CAB is footing the bill. A professional D.J. will be providing entertainment and hors d'oeuvres and dessert will be served. There will be a cash bar with proper identification required. A professional photographer will be available during the evening for those who may want to save the memories of the special night.

There will be free bus transportation offered through the school but seating is limited. To reserve a seat, sign up in the Union.

If directions are needed, there is a map on the back of all invitations that were mailed to female residents on campus. Also feel free to contact any member of the CAB.

Summer Projects in Africa and The Caribbean: Operation Crossroads Africa, Inc., a non-profit organization focusing on international development and cross-cultural exchange, is actively seeking high school and college age students to participate in this year's community development programs in rural Caribbean and African villages. The seven week projects in Africa will involve specialized projects in medicine, nursing community development, archaeology, architectural photography, and agriculture. For six weeks, participants work side-by-side with local counterparts in constructing medical clinics, schools and community centers and in establishing day camps for children.

Both volunteer and leader positions are open. Persons interested in applying are encouraged to contact Crossroads Africa, 150 Fifth Avenue, Suite 310, New York, New York 10011, phone (212) 242-8550 or (800) 42-AFRICA.

Search for 1988 Miss Pennsylvania USA Now Underway: Applications are now being accepted for the annual Miss Pennsylvania USA Pageant to be staged this year for the third time in Monroeville, Pennsylvania, in the Grand Ballroom of the High Rise Howard Johnson's Hotel on April 3, 4, and 5, 1987.

There is "No Performing Talent" requirement, all judging is on the basis of poise, personality and beauty of face and figure. Entrants who qualify must be at least 17 years of age and under 25 years of age by February 1, 1988, never married, and at least a six month resident of Pennsylvania. All girls interested in competing for the title must write to: MISS PENNSYLVANIA USA PAGEANT, TRI-STATE HEADQUARTERS - DEPT. S 347 LOCUST AVENUE, WASHINGTON, PA 15301-3399 BY FEBRUARY 28th. Letters must include a recent snapshot, a brief biography and phone number.

The woman chosen as Miss Pennsylvania USA will receive a 14-day all-expense paid trip to the site of the Miss USA Pageant nationally televised on CBS-TV early in 1988, competing for over $200,000 in cash and prizes. Among her many prizes, the new state winner will receive a $1,000 cash scholarship and will select a $1,000 wardrobe.

Emergency test prep help for the imminent MCAT and DAT.

As you see below, the exams will be here before you know it. And if your vital signs include sweaty palms, a somersaulting stomach and shaky legs, you need help—fast.

Check into a Kaplan center. Our test-taking techniques and educational programs have helped lower the pressure and boost the scoring power and confidence of over one million students. We even have compact classes so you can be ready for this fall's exams.

So if you're getting ill thinking about the MCAT or DAT, call Kaplan. We'll give you all the "mental medicine" you need. And a lot of intensive care.

• Seislove From P. 7 —

The Mercury's All-Area team, and team outstanding wrestler awards his senior year.

But when Seislove entered district competition he was in for a show-down.

"It was an ugly scene," he remembered. "I was 26-1 going in and was winning 1-0 in my second match, got pinned, wrestled back in another match to be up 3-1, but got cradled twice and lost 5-3."

"He is still hungry," said Racich, who directed the Rams to the Ches-Mont title in 1980 before he jumped to the college ranks. "In high school, Tim didn't really reach the ultimate goal of winning the big championships."

"Hard work pays off, and Tim's a hard worker. He loves the sport and the sport's been good to him."

"I try to keep the same level of intensity all through practice and hope it carries over into my matches," said Seislove.

"He's a team player all the way," added Racich, "and he's coachable because he's willing to learn."

Racich said he would like his 118-pounder to become a better technical wrestler on the bottom. "I'm concerned with his technical skill from the bottom, which he needs to acquire to assure guaranteed points."

"All that can be done to improve technically is drill and practice, and then it becomes second nature to you."

Seislove is most effective when he is wrestling on his feet. "I don't give up points on the bottom, but I don't score any either," he said.

The Bears squared off against Baptist Bible and Rutgers-Camden Saturday and are continuing their assault on the Middle Atlantic Conference.

"I think if everyone gets down to weight, we have a good chance at winning the MAC," Seislove said.

Seislove pointed to his team's support. "Everyone cares if you win or lose. They're not just cheering blindly from the bench."

"Tim is just another excellent 118-pounder in a line of outstanding wrestlers we've had here at Ursinus," said Racich.

we don't conform. Dr. Berry implies that students do not have to conform to succeed in employment or graduate school. I wonder how many people who were well-suited for graduate, law, or medical school were rejected because they didn't score high on placement tests. They probably refused to conform and spend several hundred dollars for preparation courses. I wonder how many students were told by an official that they could get a certain job or get into a certain school if they "pulled up their math/science average by two points." Should an MCAT decide who is a better public or private to the community? The system deems it so.

My only other problem with Dr. Berry's editorial concerns his negative opinion of security. Frankly, I fail to see the inappropriateness of wanting to be comfortable. Perhaps our ideas of security differ, but I consider the desire to be happy in one's natural status and have a stable economy is healthy, as well as sensible.

Dr. Berry's editorial was a valiant effort, a cry for a cause that I fear is unable to be attained. Before those of us without careers or "security" can be converted to this belief in "values over status," the entire nation must change its view of success and happiness.
