The Bermans: From Pennsburg to Vatican In Search of Beauty

BY DEBRA KAMENS
Director of Communications
Special for The Grizzly

Ursinus College has been the recipient of generous gifts from Muriel and Philip I. Berman for many years. Twenty-five years ago, they gave a group of Japanese master wood prints to the College, and they have been adding to the collection ever since. In 1983, the Bermans commissioned Michael Price to execute the sculpture of Zacharias Ursinus for the 400th anniversary of the death of the College's namesake. Upheaval II and the Bearkeeper, both by sculptor Glenn Zweygardt, are gifts from the Bermans, as are many paintings found throughout the campus. Recently, they lent Ursinus over 100 American paintings and sculptures to celebrate the renovation of Fetterolf House. Mary Ann Unger’s “Temple” was a special gift given at that time. Serious planning is currently underway to expand fine art facilities at Ursinus and an art center is under discussion. The Bermans will be instrumental in supporting any such project. The article which follows is a profile of these two remarkable individuals, who have added so much to the lives of many.

He is a man who considers life an adventure. Tall, with wavy white hair and a fresh carnation pinned to his lapel, Philip Berman epitomizes the spirit of “joie de vivre.” When he begins to talk, his eyes twinkle; his smile is contagious, as is his easy laughter. He is a peripatetic man who is always actively engaged in whatever it is he is doing, a man who finds it difficult to sit still for long periods of time, yet will sit through a five-hour Wagnerian opera because of his love of music. His stride is long and fast, whether he is walking through his living room or trekking toward Mount Everest.

“Max Hess met me at a cocktail party and he made a bet with me. I lost and got the store,” he says. He took Hess’s from one flagship store to 41 suburban stores in the Delaware Valley and beyond, an in 1985, sold it to Crown America Corp. As his business career skyrocketed, so did his involvement in community projects, the support of education and philanthropy. He asserts that his generous spirit derives, in large part, from his Jewish ethnic background and, in particular, from members of his family, who frequently welcomed relatives, friends, and strangers to their dinner table and their home.

“Everyone’s personality evolves from their history,” Philip Berman says. “It evolves from their history, their experiences, and in a lot of cases from luck, good fortune, and accidents of fate.”

Some Campuses Venture to Allow Drinking Again

After a few years of prohibition, some Northern Arizona students can drink again on campus. If they go through a training program first.

At Alabama, fraternities will soon be able to serve alcohol at parties again, though only if they build six-foot permanent fences around the party areas and have ID checkers at the entrances.

At Lehigh in Pennsylvania, Greeks adopted a strict new policy of identification checks and “closed party weekends” in order to retain some of their student drinking privileges.

And so it has gone across the country. The pendulum that in 1985-1986 forced hundreds of colleges nationwide to ban student drinking outright has in recent months swung back to allow some limited amounts of drinking.

In Arizona, for example, each of the three state universities “now allows the consumption of alcohol in limited circumstances in dorms, but no sale of liquor on campus,” says Glenn Brockman, associate counsel for the state board of regents.

Worcester State in Massachusetts last winter let the campus dry pub go wet again, providing it can maintain its own liability insurance and liquor license.

The reason is that outright liquor bans have proved too rigid in some cases.

The University of Nebraska at Lincoln, for one, almost had to pull out of hosting Gov. Kay Orr’s January 9 inauguration because it officially banned liquor from the campus.

The regents relaxed the prohibition for the occasion, despite on the regent’s fear the move would “give students a foot in the door” to modify the policy permanently.

“Then you let (students) drink at 19, then suddenly they can’t, it’s difficult for them to adapt,” observes Andrew Smith, director of the Texas Union in Austin, which runs a tavern on the premises.

A new law that pushed the legal Texas drinking age from 19 to 21 as of September 1, 1986, “eliminated a lot of patrons from what is a large tavern,” Smith says.

His solution was to “divide it. Remodeling (of the Tavern) into alcohol and non-alcohol sides will be completed this spring,” he reports.

Though campus drinkers are getting a little more leeway, no one expects the old days of lax drinking policies to return soon.

“Schools are beginning to see a trend among students to be responsible in their drinking behavior and to recognize their drinking problems.”

Individual houses and whole Greek systems at Princeton, Ohio State, Penn State, Missouri, Idaho, Washington, Stanford, Florida and South Carolina, among many others, have adopted dry rushes during the last year.

But Greeks themselves often have no choice. In December, for instance, a federal court said Villanova could be held liable for an off-campus auto accident related to an off-campus frat party at which minors illegally were served alcohol.

“Schools know that presuming no control over Greeks puts them in no better liability position,” Bowman adds. “So Greeks are doing more to safeguard themselves, and colleges are trying to ensure campus-wide adherence to the same set of regulations.”

Nevertheless, he notes “in some schools, there are lots of infractions against drinking policies. At others there are a minimum of problems. It depends on how much time the university and the students spend talking about the changes.”

“Where that isn’t done, there are probably a lot of growing pains.”

I've Been Teaching Creative Writing For Thirty-Five Years, Says Dolman

Dear Editor:

I was rather surprised to read Kevin Adams' article on the front page of The Grizzly (February 27, 1987) in which he states: "considering that course changes will be inevitable due to the incoming professors' backgrounds and special areas of interest, (for example, creative writing will be added to the English curriculum next year and . . .)."

I suggest that the writer check his facts. I have been teaching at least one such course each semester for at least thirty-five years! My rollbooks show that some fool-hardy students even signed up for the courses.

I share the writer's excitement about the addition of new courses in the future. I almost tremble at the thought of adding a course in Shakespeare, for an example, or First Year French, and even (dare I say it?) Freshman Composition!

Sincerely yours,
Geoffrey Dolman

Ashman After Fire Dies Down

Dear Editor,

It is with mixed emotions that I write this letter to say a formal farewell to the students of Ursinus as I depart as Director of Student Activities. I have had the pleasure of working with you for the past four years. We've grown together through tradition, change, challenges, controversy, learning, and fun times. I have learned a great deal from many of you and hope that you have, in return, learned from me.

I feel Ursinus students deserve something better than this. Unfortunately, for the position of Director of Student Activities program, you have made my four years at Ursinus a time I will always remember. Best wishes to all of you for success and happiness always.

Sincerely,

Ashman

Forum Committee Clears Confusion

Dear Editor,

The Forum Committee would like to clear up any confusion currently existing regarding the Forum requirement. Dean William Akin responded to questions by the Forum Committee regarding the Forum requirement as follows:

1. The policy is as stated on page 16 of the Student Handbook.
2. The current policy applies to students who enrolled for the first time in 1986-87. Those who enrolled prior to 86-87 go under the Forum requirement.
3. If the requirement is not fulfilled, it will be noted in the student's permanent record.
4. "Missed" Forums can be made up during other semesters.

I hope that this will clarify any questions students have had regarding the current Forum requirement.

Thank You,
Forum Committee

Death Penalty—The Ultimate Human-Rights Abuse

Dear Editor:

Amnesty International—the international human rights organization—launched a worldwide campaign to stop the death penalty in the United States.

Amnesty International considers the death penalty to be a violation of the fundamental right to life and a cruel and inhuman punishment, brutalizing to all who are involved. Evidence suggests that the use of the death penalty in the USA is arbitrary, racially biased, and unfair. The result is a horrifying "lottery," in which political, financial, and community pressures plus locality play a more decisive role.

Sincerely,

See Rights P3

EDITOR—IN—CHIEF POSITIONS TO BE FILLED: Applications for the position of editor-in-chief for three student publications are being sought by the Student Publications Committee. The committee is composed of faculty and staff members, student representatives, and editors and business managers of the Grizzly, the Lantern, and the Ruby. The committee will meet on March 18, 1987, to elect 1987-88 editors.

Direct questions concerning duties and responsibilities to current editors: Joe Pirro (Grizzly), Angela Salas (Lantern), and Patti Yoder (Ruby). Publication advisors are also available to explain the editorial positions: Dr. Cobbs (Grizzly), Dr. Lianaras (Lantern), and Mr. Jamison (Ruby). A letter stating your qualifications and prospective plans should be received by Dr. Jay K. Miller, Communication Arts Department, by 4:30 p.m., March 17, 1987.

Nacho lovers, I hate ‘em. I hate them all. Of course, I’m the one that usually makes them for you strange people who actually enjoy them. But I work there so I have the inside scoop on what goes onto that cheese you wierdjust love. “Extra cheese” is all I hear and I pump it on with glee because I know that nacho-cheese causes cancer. That’s right, it causes cancer.

Pro Theatre To Present

BY ANDREA POWER
Of The Grizzly

Ursinus ProTheatre has preformed Thorton Wilder’s three act play, Our Town on April 9, 10 and 11 at Ritter Center. Our Town is Grovers Corners, a small New Hampshire village of the early 1900’s. What made Our Town unique from most conventional 20th century plays was that it had virtually no set. The stage is merely a few tables and chairs, while the rest of the scenery is left for the imagination of the viewers. Wilder chose this unstructured path because he was dissatisfied with the plays of his contemporaries, who emphasized place and time.

“Our claim, our hope, our despair are in the mind—not in things, not in ‘scenery’,” wrote Wilder. Convinced that stage settings took away from the believability of plays, Wilder dared to leave his stage bare, so that life portrayed in Our Town was not specifically life in Grovers Corners, but life experienced universally. Wilder wanted his audience to identify with the simple events that took place in Our Town. He wanted his play to be “alive.”

Our Town’s vitality proved itself, bringing Wilder the 1938 Pulitzer Prize for Playwriting, as well as over 50 New York performances. Hailing it as “one of the finest achievements of the current stage,” the New York Times added, “Mr. Wilder has transmuted the simple events of a human life into universal reverie.” Considered an American “classic,” the play has been performed hundreds of times in theatres throughout the country, including the theatre at Ursinus. Nearly thirty years ago Our Town was put on at Ursinus under the direction of English professor H. Lloyd Jones.

In charge of the play’s second appearance at the college is Dr. Joyce Hart, who has worked in professional theatre in New York and Milwaukee. Dr. Henry has directed over 40 ProTheatre plays since settling down at Ursinus fourteen years ago. She began casting for Our Town in January and started rehearsals in early February. All members of the cast include students, faculty, and daughters and sons of faculty. Playing the role of Stage Manager is Dr. Jack Cobb’s, professor of English. The part of George Gibbs is played by Scott Doughty, a junior Biology major, while freshman Monica Neufang plays the role of Emily Webb.

These major characters and other cast members of Our Town will be interviewed in the March 20th issue of The Grizzly.

I’ve read it the National Enquirer. It was headlined! Don’t believe if you don’t want to, but I don’t want to hear it when you’re on your death bed and the doctor says, “It was all that nacho cheese you ate while in college; it just corroded your stomach away.” I’ll send roses to your funeral.

And the slurpees!! Ha! Do you know what we use that for??? Get this...we use it to clean (that’s right CLEAN) the coffee pots. My boss says it’s the ice and salt that are the real cleaners, but I think it’s the ammonia. Why do you think they were on sale last month? To get rid of the evidence! It makes a lot of sense to me! Of course, you could hope that the cleaning solutions in the slurpees could clean the nacho cancer out of your system, but I wouldn’t hold my breath if I were you.

And the chili for nacho granders.

A friend of mine has a sign which reads I have never understood why is it considered necessary to become irrational to prove that you are committed, or even why it should be necessary to prove at all.

The matter of proof in questions of commitment is interesting, since if you take the question of why commitment should have to be proved at all to the extreme, you can end up arguing that you need never externalize your commitments, or ever act upon them since commitment need not be proven. Then you end up with the question of what a commitment accomplishes if you never act upon it, which leads to a whole slew of questions concerning what “commitment” actually is. I keep thinking about Falstaff in Henry IV, trying to define “honour”, becoming disgusted, and giving up.

I trust you’ll forgive me if i’m more abstract than usual this week. What is becoming more and more obvious to me is that any search for a truth or an ordering principle which is at bottom completely and continuously appropriate is doomed to failure once you look beneath the most superficial interpretation of the language which forms it. Words are only approximations of larger concepts and are generally manipulated rather clumsily. Certain words, such as “honor” and “commitment”, approximate concepts so broadly that one can use them with no idea of what they mean. Try explaining “honor” in 500 words or less. Falstaff couldn’t.

And in addition to the problem of language, you have the fact that every answer one gets to a question spawns other questions. As with the Hydra, if you cut off one head, two more take its place. So answers really aren’t, and language is never completely accurate. We are left with the knowledge that truth is not only illusion; it is constantly out of reach. The process then, is more important than any temporary answer we might seize.

And on it goes.

Swimming’s Sieracki Steps Out

Dear Editor,

Bob Sieracki, after seven years as the Men’s and Women’s Swimming Coach, resigned this past Monday, March 2.

He will be sorely missed. Bob had a deep interest in swimming and gave 200 percent to every team he coached. But more importantly, he cared about each individual. He never turned away anyone, but rather fought for each member of the team. His greatest concern was that each person would improve individually. He was always there to fight for what he felt was only fair for the team. Bob was not alone, his wife took an active part in the swimming teams over the past seven years. Cindy also resigned as Assistant Swimming Coach after her “first official year with that title.” (We knew she was always there.)

To sum up his career, it is only fitting to say that Bob you’ve been a friend to everyone you have coached. You’ve done so much for this team, coached us through many hard times (we hope no one ever hears of Time Ranges), but the best times always standout. You’ve been there every step of the way and you’ve brought this team to grow together so that we are a unit that is always supportive of each other.

Sincerely,
Eric C. Wilson

Sue Ashman Says So Long

By TRICIA WALKER
For The Grizzly
March 13, 1987 will be a transition day for the Student Life department. Sue Ashman, director of Student Activities, will be leaving Ursinus to begin her new position as Counselor/Coordinator of Student Services of the Penn State Graduate Center in King of Prussia.

She said the new reconstructed programs serve the needs of the students better — needs that were not dealt with before. Sue’s most enjoyable moments have been spent working the Campus Activities Board (CAB) and watching the Union grow to the state it has reached today.

As Ashman moves to Penn State, her responsibilities will be increased. She will help build a program to accommodate students working for their master's degrees to plans for a building that will triple the accommodations and double the enrollment in the long run. The opportunity appeals to Ashman in hopes of her own growth and advancement. Her future responsibilities will include academic and career counseling, financial aid, and the overall planning of student activities.

Ashman’s responsibilities at Ursinus included managing the Union, acting as head of orientation procedures, chairing the Forum Committee, and directing student activities — but her contributions extended much farther than these.

Ashman was responsible for reconstructing the entire Student Activities program. During her four-year stay at U.C., she has made changes in the orientation program (the most popular being “Playfair”), originated Spring Weekend, Wimser dances, and also coordinating the “Greaseband” concert.

Urnsin’s Twister record breaker... an Ashman event.

at the Ursinus community, a part of it that runs down the hill, and politics. She said it has contributed a great deal to her knowledge of people, management, and politics. She said it has enhanced her ability to deal with diverse situations. She has gained experience in Student Life which she plans to apply to the organization and counseling in her new program at Penn State.

Ashman said that the move of the Student Center out of the Union will prove positive. The plans are in the works, and she said the challenging transition will be difficult, but worth the effort. She said she hopes the move will help change the previous image of the Student Activities Office from “all fun and games” to what it really is — a group of educated counselors.

Sue Ashman will be missed by the Ursinus community. We would like to wish her luck in her new position and thank her for touching our lives, whether directly through counseling or indirectly through the many entertainment events she has organized. She has “reorganized, strengthened, and expanded” Student Activities at Ursinus.

Self-Esteem Workshop

Self-esteem is critical to growth. At every stage of life our self-esteem determines how we act, how we relate, how we learn, how we feel, and how we work, yet research shows that most people don’t feel good enough about themselves. People with low self-esteem often feel inadequate in handling life’s challenges and may escape into overeating, television, drinking, or drugs.

In this seminar specific information and strategies for building self-confidence will be presented as well as six conditions that have to be met if a person is to feel a consistent sense of self-esteem. Participants will learn to value themselves more and to help others to have a more positive self-image.

Janieta Twarogowski, a local family and individual therapist, will conduct this workshop. Mrs. Twarogowski holds a Master’s in Education in counseling and is a certified trainer and counselor. She has over 10 years of experience in counseling and training and over 15 years in business.

The Self-Esteem Workshop is scheduled on Saturday, March 21, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. The cost is $42.00.

For more information or to register call Ursinus College Continuing Education office at 489-4111 (days) or 489-4250 (evenings).

Women's B-Ball Team Holds Heads High

By Bridget Algeo
Of The Grizzly

The Ursinus women's basketball team wrapped up its season last week, losing to Glassboro State, in a close-but-no-cigar fashion that typified their 1986-87 season.

The Lady Bears put forth a gallant effort in their final week of play, losing two close ones down the stretch, as they seemed to do so many times before against Montclair State and Spring Garden College.

This time, however, their losses came at the hands of MAC Conference winner Moravian College and Glassboro State. Against Moravian, the 8 surviving members of the Lady Bears took the 17-member Moravian Collegiate on a close-but-no-cigar fashion that typified their 1986-87 play, losing two close ones down the stretch, as they seemed to do so many times before against Montclair State, in a close-but-no-cigar fashion that typified their 1986-87 season. Men's Indoor Track Goes To Maine

By Jill Theurer
Grizzly Sports Editor

Last Tuesday night, the Ursinus Grizzlies ended their season on a disappointing note suffering an 83-66 loss from Washington College in a special elimination contest.

After losing to Widener on February 21, the team traveled to Chesterstown, Maryland three days later in order to break a second place tie with Washington in the MAC Southeast Division. The Bears soared back from an eleven point deficit at the half to bring the score to 65-63 in Washington's favor. However, with just four and a half minutes left in the game, the Shoremen outshot Ursinus 8-1, making it 73-64, and secured their lead at the foul line.

Senior John Ginley, who went 0-1 in the first half of the game, poured in 17 points and eight rebounds for the hoopers. Junior Paul Udovich also helped out with three assists in front of the hostile Washington fans.

At the earlier Widener game, Ginley once again was top scorer with a career-high 20 points while he and teammate John Maddox each recorded five rebounds and three assists. But Widener's Lou Stevens connected for 19 points and 13 rebounds to lead his team to a 17-5 spurt in the opening of the second half. This turned a 33-28 halftime edge into a 50-33 lead with 8:45 to play.

Widener (23-3) has gone on to beat Gettysburg for the South MAC title while Scranton has captured the North. Both of these teams will play tonight in the NCAA tournament.

On a brighter note for Ursinus, two of the squad's members have been named to the All MAC Southeast team. Udovich and Maddox join Widener's Stevens, Chris Gardier and Tom Barr, Delaware Valley's John Zamichieli and John Boyle.

Men Hoopsters Suffer Tough Loss to Washington to End '86-'87

By Joseph P. Pirro
Grizzly Senior Editor

Three possible Middle Atlantic Conference champions from Ursinus College strolled confidently toward a corner of Western Maryland's gym to prepare for their final bouts in the 49th annual MAC championships Saturday.

When the three matches had concluded, each of the three Bears, Steve Lauterbach (126), Dan Donahoe (142) and Ron Matthew (heavyweight) had failed to capture the prestigious title of MAC champion, a lofty honor considering MAC is the largest Division III conference in the nation.

But failed isn't an appropriate word for the three Bears. Make the champions — in their own right.

And those three weren't the only Bear grapplers to brighten coach Bill Racich's weekend. Ursinus had seven of its 10 grapplers place as it took third in the tournament of 20 teams with 94.25 points behind Lycoming's second-place total of 100.50 and Delaware Valley's 173.75.

All 10 Bear grapplers scored points in the tournament.

The Bears had taken fourth the last two years in the February classic, but have never won the crown. The closest they've come was a second-place finish in 1938 and 1949.

Ursinus entered action Saturday in second place (39.5 points) behind Delaware Valley (55.5) after sending five men to semifinals following Friday's intense bouts.

"It's what the whole year is about," said Racich, now in his seventh season as Bears' head man.

This year he led his wrestlers to a 20-3 record, the best ever in 58 years of wrestling in Collegeville.

It wasn't that the Bears lost, it was just that the other teams — Delaware Valley and Lycoming, the only squads the Bears dropped dual matches to this season — won.

Delaware Valley sent seven men to the final rounds and was not denied in taking seven championships and the majority of special tournament awards. Sophomore Laudermilch (28-5) had to settle for a silver after dropping a heartbreaker to Meschie.

Runner Mike Griffin Rises Early to Set Records

BY VINCE LESKUSKY
Grizzly Assistant Sports Editor

Sunrises and sunsets occur every day with almost unwavering consistency. Few people stop to notice them, but that does not alter the unassuimg potential of a lavender sunrise nor lessen the quiet intensity in an ember-red sunset. Mike Griffin is one of the few.

By 6:30 a.m. four days a week, Mike Griffin begins his three-to-eight mile morning jog at a pace which most people would classify as a run. At week's end Mike has invested at least thirty-five hours into his cross-country training.

What has this routine yielded for Mike? Two trips to the NCAA National Championships. Two appearances on the All-Mideast Region Team. Two appearances on the All-MAC Team. Five course records. Enough medals (over 20) to start his own Reserve Bank.

Nevertheless, for those slightly less familiar with the sport, it appears to be an unusual regimen. Mike promises he is only like the sunrise—Few take the time to appreciate him, but those who do are somehow enriched or inspired.

Mike designed it that way—"I put pressure on myself to let my actions speak. I try to lead by example. Too much talking leads to contradictions which make you look like a hypocrite."

His actions have not spoken, they have shouted. "His dedication is inspiring," says freshman Rob Hacker, "I've never seen him quit in a meet or even a work out._

Senior co-captain Dean Lent proclaims, "Everyone respects Mike: coaches, teammates, and opponents. I have yet to hear him complain about a workout and he has ground out some grueling ones."

Coach Bob Shoutd agrees, "Mike's very influential to everyone just by being Mike. His attitude—he's someone people can relate to."

"He's one of the best runners I've ever coached. That's because he's very coachable—he listens. Hey, to get his picture on my office wall, he had to be great."

Yet, if not for a shoulder injury as a sophomore at Springfield (Muscot), the 6'1" raven-haired athlete who dropped a smile would have been hurling rawhide or gliding through a breaststroke. "I loved baseball, but was most successful at swimming," the twice All-Bicen­centennial Leaguer explains, "After that shoulder damage, I could no longer quarterback or throw a ball and swimming was difficult. I decided to try cross-country my junior year."

While most freshmen experience nervousness and pressure that first year, Mike was treated to a double serving. As one of only two freshmen on a team defending its 1981 MAC Championship, uncertainty plagued Mike, "I kept asking myself, 'Can you measure up? The adjustment to college-level training was tremendous, and yet the thrill of racing for a super college program was exhilarating."

Mike didn't measure up, he set the standard. As a sophomore recovering from torn ankle ligaments, he placed 27th in the MAC's. The following year saw him land a fifth in the same race and an eleventh in the Mideast Regional contest, earning him the right to run in finish school, but engineering didn't seem right for me." He decided to come back to Ursinus to study to become a Physics teacher. "After a year off, my confidence was definitely shaky. To come back and still be good was important to me. While good running is not everything, it sets up other things." Like the Physics major that he is, Mike constructed an analogy. "The physical, social, mental, and spiritual aspects of life are like spokes in a wheel. All the spokes must be balanced if the wheel is to roll well."

Once he started that wheel rolling, it could not be stopped. The momentum began the first meet. On the sun-baked hills of Belmont Plateau, the site of Phila­delphia Mets, Griffin discovered that he not only had lost nothing, but had improved. "That race demanded intense mental preparation. After a year off, on a tough course, and in that heat—I just didn't know how I'd do." In a tight race for first, Mike settled for third; but he was back.

Against an outstanding field at Lebanon Valley the next week, Griffin dashed to a fourth, a position he would finish no worse until he placed 50th at Nationals over two months later.

"It was a hard road, now that I think about it," Griffin recalls. "When I was a junior, I had four other guys to run the especially tough workouts with. This past season it was only me and sometimes Dean. But that toughened me mentally. It forced me to con­centrate continually and just be swept along."

The confidence recaptured on the cross-country course carried over into the classroom, as a student and as a teacher. Student-teaching at Norristown High School ran as smoothly as he does, and that further helped his mind-set.

"Academic and career worries stopped being distractions, instead they were confidence boosters," explains Griffin.

After medalling in every race in which he participated, he ran in the Middle Atlantic Coast Championships. Through the storm-wrecked bog of a course in Gettys­burg, Griffin scorched a path to a silver medal. In a battle for the gold that was resolved in the final one-hundred yards, Mike finished more than twenty seconds ahead of the bronze medalist.

It has been said that the toughest task in sports is to repeat as a winner. At Allentown College, a common uncomfortable to Mike in the past, he removed any doubts with an impressive fourth and another shot at Nationals. "I'll never forget my last race (at Nationals). Running over the frozen, snowy wastes of Fredonia. It was desolate."

Desolation should have come as no shock to Mike, as Coach Symonds relates, "Griff had this for three years and never missed a practice. He'd be down there on the track by himself doing intervals in the dark."

Despite the successes, content­ment has not set in. A berth in the 5K Nationals looms as the next goal on the horizon. "You should always set your goals a little higher and a little over so that you have to reach for them. I did want to be All-American, but I'm only 22 seconds short."

When asked what he will look back on, Griffin responded slowly, "The success of competing and the antics and the craziness. It's like being in your own frat, the cross­country team. I had a blast."

His legacy is the example he set for the pre-dominately freshman team. In his quiet way, he demonstrates that hard work and class pay off; that dreams-coming-true are not restricted to fairy tales.

After running into and out of many sunrises and sunsets, Griffin has come to bask in them. "Sunrises—I love 'em. Sunsets—I enjoy them. Not many people see the sun rise and set in the same day."

siah's Brent Whislet, 5-4, on last­minute riding time. Whislet led the MAC in points scored for '86-'87.

"Whislet took Steve's best stuff away from him and Steve was never really in command of the match," said Rachic. The Bear Academic All-America nominee, who was seeded third for the tourney, reached the finals after defeating Eric Swank of Kings College, 5-3.

Junior Donohoe (26-7) moved up a weight class and wrestled at 142 pounds to help the Bears score a remarkable 218 points in winning the team points, but he didn't do poorly as an individual either in claiming the second MAC silver medal of his Ursinus career — a mere slot machine for his sort-of­partner in the finals.

Donohoe defeated the bout, 11- 5, to Shaun Smith of Delaware Valley — the two-time MAC and Nationals champion, who has amassed a 71-0 record in his career against Division III challengers.

"He just rises for the big oc­casions," said Rachic about Don­ahoe, who received a wildcard bid to nationals next weekend in Buffalo, N.Y.

The Danville native beat Ly­coming's Matt Miller, seeded third, on a pin at 4:05 in the semifinals.

Tric­captain Matthew went the distance, a long way for a heavyweight, but couldn't handle the likes of number one seed Mike fourth in the 55 meter dash (6.63), Co-Captain Mike Griffin, running in a strong 3000 meter race, fin­ished eighth in 8:58. Sophomore Milton Silva-Craig ran impressively in the 400 meter, winning his heat in 53.1. Junior Steve Grims cleared 11'0" in the pole vault and freshmen Trevor Hughes threw 41' in the shot put.

Qualifiers for tomorrow's ECAC championships are: Dale and Dean Lent, Mike Griffin, Rich Dunlap, Rick Lowe, Rob Cordes, John Wood, John Melody and Jim Doyle.

Participants included O'Sullivan, who holds the National 800 meter record for Ireland. Senior Dean Lent ran his best race of the year, taking second overall in a new indoor school record of 1:54.2, breaking his old record of 1:57.2, set last year at this meet. This qualified him for tomorrow's ECAC Championship. O'Sullivan won the race in a sensational time of 1:49.

Senior Dale Lent and Freshman John Melody turned in two of the best 1500 meters in the conference. Running neck and neck for the entire race, they finished second and third in their heat. Lent's time of 4:01.2 and Mel­ody's 4:01.5 were both personal bests and are the second and third best 1500 meters indoor ever by Ursinus runners.

Senior Zack Robinson finished fourth in the 55 meter dash (6.63), Co-Captain Mike Griffin, running in a strong 3000 meter race, fin­ished eighth in 8:58. Sophomore Milton Silva-Craig ran impressively in the 400 meter, winning his heat in 53.1. Junior Steve Grims cleared 11'0" in the pole vault and Mike Griffin rose to set records.
Danville's Donahoe Take's Bid To Nationals and Athlete of the Week

Ursinus College wrestler Dan Donahoe won a silver medal at the Middle Atlantic Conference (MAC) championship on Feb. 28 and a berth in the NCAA Division III nationals this weekend, earning Ursinus' Athlete of the Week Award as well.

Donahoe, a junior 142-pounder from Danville (Pa.), High, earned his second silver medal in three years and received the coaches' vote for the MAC wild card berth in the NCAA nationals, beginning Friday at SUNY-Buffalo.

The conference is entitled to send 11 wrestlers to nationals, the 10 weight-class champions and the man judged the best of the silver medalists.

That man was Donahoe, a former sectional champion at Danville, who ran up a 26-9 record with 12 pins this year and led Ursinus to third place among 20 teams at the conference championship, its highest finish in 38 years.

The Bears, led by coach Bill Racich, turned in their best showing since 1949, with seven of their 10 wrestlers (none a senior) winning medals. They went 20-3 in dual meets, breaking the previous school record of 17 victories set last year.

At the MAC championship, Donahoe pinned two opponents and decisioned two others before meeting Shaun Smith of Delaware Valley College for the 142-title. Smith wasn't just a two-time conference champ, he was a two-time defending NCAA champ as well.

No Division III opponent had ever put Smith on his back, but Donahoe did. No Division III opponent had ever scored more than two points against Smith, but Donahoe did. He wound up losing, 11-5, but the coaches were impressed enough to vote him into the nationals.

Donahoe came close to making it as a freshman in 1985, when he settled for the silver medal at 126 after dislocating his shoulder early in the title bout. He wrestled at 134 most of this season, his comeback the year after sophomore season wiped out by illness and injury.

In both high school and college, bad luck has given Donahoe's career an up-and-down character. As a junior at Danville, he took fourth place at 112 pounds at the PIAA Class AA state championships. Along the way he placed first in sectionals, second in District 4 and third in the Northeast Regionals. But after going 35-8 as a senior, he saw his tournament hopes obliterated by a broken ankle.

Donahoe scaled the heights again at Ursinus, becoming one of only two freshman to reach the MAC finals in 1985. But last year he hurt his leg, hurt his elbow and battled mononucleosis, tonsillitis and the flu.

"He was a mess," coach Racich recalled. "Physically he didn't have a prayer, and he started to question whether wrestling was worth the effort. He was down at 126 without having to shed any weight."

Racich continued, "Before this season, Dan had to find himself and push himself over the edge. He made that breakthrough to where he could tell himself, 'Hey, I'm totally committed to wrestling.' He went around telling his friends, 'This is my year.'

"Now, it's just like his freshman year. When he walks out on the mat, you know he's going to win. He's got it."

Healthy again, Donahoe built up a 15-2 record in dual meets, including a pin that helped launch Ursinus to a 26-14 upset Jan. 21 over host Moravian, its first victory over the powerful Greyhounds since 1982.

For Ursinus, a Division III team, the season also included three big wins over Division I programs—a 26-21 shocker over Lafayette on Jan. 13, a 36-9 win over LaSalle on Feb. 11 and a 51-0 destruction of Villanova Feb. 19.

Donahoe, a junior 142-pounder, won its 10th straight conference title, leading Ursinus to fourth place in a nine-team field that included five schools from Divisions I and II.

Athletics and Academics: Far From the Odd Couple at U.C.

"The great end of education is to discipline rather than to furnish the mind; to train it to the use of its own powers, rather than fill it with the accumulation of others." Tyrone Edwards spoke these words in a commencement address hoping to those about to enter the working world.

College athletes have been taking abuse recently from the SMU "death penalty" to UNL's graduation scandal to an article in April's Playboy. Somehow the preparation offered by athletics has been twisted into a sort of shamefulness. But, the discipline, poise, and self-motivation of sports has not disappeared here at Ursinus.

"The great end of education is to discipline rather than to furnish the mind; to train it to the use of its own powers, rather than fill it with the accumulation of others." Tyrone Edwards spoke these words in a commencement address hoping to those about to enter the working world.

"The great end of education is to discipline rather than to furnish the mind; to train it to the use of its own powers, rather than fill it with the accumulation of others." Tyrone Edwards spoke these words in a commencement address hoping to those about to enter the working world.

As a Division III school (except in women's field hockey), Ursinus' athletes must be students in the truest sense of the word.

Lois Groff, a senior History major, is a prime example. As a member of the nationally ranked lacrosse teams, she still sports a 94.2 average. While admitting that study requires an extra effort the day of a game, Groff does not believe athletics have hurt her grades in any way. "Eight hours of studying are sometimes exhausting, but it gives me a break from studying which I need," she remarked.

Sophomore soccer player Robert Carmignani agrees. He added, "I feel it (sports) helps. I vent my frustration and stay in shape. It's great." As evidenced by his 89.6 average, Carmignani's academics do not suffer from his release of tension. "I have no trouble combining sports and school. There's plenty of time. Anyway, I can't imagine hitting the books hour after hour," he stated.

Many athletes here equate sports and school as one learning experience. College challenges the student-athlete to keep it all in perspective.

"Both college sports and the college classroom were new to me," said freshman Sue Haux, a Biology major with a 90.14 average. "I wasn't sure how I'd handle the two, but I adjusted in a couple of weeks."

As second runner on the girls runner-up MAC cross-country team, Haux is one of those that treats the classroom and athletic field equally. "Trying to keep them even is challenging. To me they are equally as important. Without sports I'd go crazy."

Athletics of Ursinus, by excellence in competition on and off the field, give credit to the saying, "Never let an education interfere with your learning."
Swimmers from P7 had qualified for the Eastern Championships despite chronic tendinitis. "Usually Bob [coach Bob Sieracki] has to lift me out of the pool after a race. I don't have enough left to climb out myself," this is the guy who won Ursinus' Greg Louganis—he picked up another nickname, the Flying Log—but nearby Perkiomen Valley High hired him to coach its female divers part-time.

"The problem with Dave is trying to keep him from working too hard," Bob Sieracki said.

The Swarthmore episode would have come as no surprise to anyone who saw him back at Wood, when he set a mileage record at the annual fund-raising swimathon in June 1984.

At Ursinus the records have kept on falling. McDevitt owns school marks in the 50-, 100-, and 200-yard butterfly, 400 individual medley and 1,650 freestyle. He shares the 800 freestyle relay mark.

"Dave came here out of high school," Sieracki recalled, "and he told everybody he was going to set the record book on fire. They more or less laughed at him. It was good they did, because he worked a little harder to make them eat their words."

Against arch-rival Franklin & Marshall he earned 13 points in those three events, points that proved crucial in a 53-50 Ursinus victory.

Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday this winter, McDevitt climbed out of the pool at 5:45 a.m. after a two-and-a-half hour workout and raced up the road to Perkiomen Valley, where he coached the divers from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

"I like helping the kids out," he said, "showing them the things I learned. My first meet at PV, I wanted so badly to jump in there and compete. It was tough to sit there and watch."

Berman from P1

But never felt daunted.

"My father was an eye doctor and he encouraged me—he encouraged me to do many things," she says. "I've always been in an atmosphere where women were just as much appreciated as men—both my husband and my father were very supportive. It never occurred to me that I couldn't do something because I was a woman."

Dr. Berman practiced optometry and raised three children: Nancy, Nina and Steven. She became an active partner with her husband in the operation of Hess's, serving as vice president.

Although never discriminated against herself, she feels strongly about women and women's opportunities. She is currently serving on the Pennsylvania Commission for Women. Muriel Berman was appointed a United States delegate to the United Nations International Women's Year Conference in Mexico City in 1975 by Gerald Ford and has served in many capacities to support its programs. She is also extremely active in and committed to the goals of UNICEF and has served on its executive board for a number of years, traveling to Thailand, Ethiopia and Latin America on the agency's behalf.

Muriel Berman's energy is as unbridled as her husband's. She is active in her support of education and was recently reappointed by Governor Thornburgh to the Board of Governors of Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education. She was the founding member of the board of Lehigh County Community College and serves on the boards of many area colleges. She is also a member of the Apseen Institute of Humanistic Studies and the International Center for University Teaching of Jewish Civilization—the latter an appointment made by former Israeli President Yitzhak Navon.

She also serves on the boards of over 18 cultural institutions, including the Pennsylvania Ballet, the Jewish Publication Society of America, the Allentown Symphony, and the Smithsonian Art Institute. For five years she produced and moderated an Allentown television program, "Guest Spot."

Dr. Berman lectures on a variety of topics, including her travels throughout the world, art, and the United Nations. She has lectured about art at Ursinus and in May of this year will receive an honorary degree from the College.

Who is Philip Berman? He is a man who grew up on a farm in Pennsburg, Pa., one of seven children. After graduating from high school as valedictorian, he enrolled at Ursinus College.

"Ursinus was a ticket to the outside world," he says. "I was born and raised on a farm. My world was very limited. And Ursinus gave me a sense of a larger and more sophisticated world—one with much more potential."

He left college after one year because, in spite of the depression, his family's Harvester dealership was beginning to thrive.

"I found the economy was starting to churn and it was so exciting," he says. "It was going to be a good business to get into."
Rabble-Rousing Remembrances

BY JOHN McCURG
For The Grizzly

What was it like to be a student at Ursinus in 1977? Where to begin? The classes? The parties? The professors?

Bob Sieracki, class of '78 and out in the real world for a decade, said, "Let's start with the people."

"They were a different lot, I tell you. A lot of freedom, a lot of free spirits, and a lot less concern about what would happen once you graduated." Sieracki, in his early thirties but looking a lot older, ran his hands through his thinning black hair. "I remember when there was a work-hard, play-harder type of attitude; combine that with a relatively liberal alcohol policy and you've got a truly wild experience."

Sieracki talks about the old days with a gleam in his eye, like a soldier remembering a battle he helped win in a war long past. Asked about the U.C. students of the thirties but looking a lot older, ran his hands through his thinning black hair. "I remember when there was a work-hard, play-harder type of attitude; combine that with a relatively liberal alcohol policy and you've got a truly wild experience."

Another question you may have is "Why implement such a restrictive policy?" Due to rising costs and levels of need displayed by you, the students, the college administration decided to reinforce our commitment to students on financial aid to assure ample job opportunity for those who most need the earnings. An important point to highlight is that there will continue to be jobs open to the general student body without the CWS stipulation. The Financial Aid Office can tell you whether you fit this category if you file a Financial Aid Form (FAF) each year. The hiring procedure for all jobs except those listed above will be different. In the spring when student selection for next year begins, any vacant position will be held for freshmen college work-study students. After the first two weeks of classes, the jobs may be opened to any student if not filled by CWS employees at that time. New jobs that open up during the year will have the same two week period reserved for CWS students and may then be available to all students.

The current jobs approved for general hiring include:
- Athletic Trainers
- Biology, Chemistry, and Physics Lab Assistants
- Career Peer Educators
- Computer Lab Assistants
- Foreign Language Lab Aids
- Graders
- House Managers - Union Library
- Lifeguards
- Resident Assistants
- Tutors
- Wismer Dining Hall Assistants
- Wiser Dining Hall Assistants
- Grizzly Page

Alumnus Bob Sieracki but it also has to do with the trustees' obsession for improving admissions standards. And, above all, making the almighty dollar without checking the rule book to see if it's allowed." This school has lost some of its color and personality. Physically it hasn't really changed much--except for the scattered 'skylab wreckage' in front of Wismer and the Union--but the people that occupy the halls have changed a great deal. It has a lot to do with the changes our society has gone through since I was here. (Editor's note -- Bob Sieracki was the swimming coach at UC for 7 years until resigning Tuesday)

Ursinus Alumnus Publishes Cat Guide

The Complete Medical Guide to Cats, a book co-authored by Dr. Edward S. Kepner, an Ursinus alumnus from Pottstown, was released in paperback last month by New American Library of New York and Ontario.

The book was written for cat owners and covers every problem a cat might have “from nose to tail.” It has been praised by reviewers as being easy-to-use because it is “concisely and clearly written.” The 420-page guide was penned by Kepner and his former veterinary partner, Dr. Robert J. Perper, between 1980 and 1984, while the two were owners of Feline Health, a cats-only practice in Manhattan. NAL originally published the book in hardcover in November 1985. Kepner and another veterinarian currently own the clinic.

“The book,” wrote a reviewer for Cat Fancy magazine, “is complete...well-organized, thoroughly up-to-date and cross referenced. The reference system works well whether you use the index of the book or the table of common symptoms.” The Chicago Tribune said the book is “uncommonly well-organized” and called it “a comprehensive resource.” The book also received favorable reviews from such publications as the Seattle Times and Library Journal. The hardcover edition sells for $19.95, and the paperback, for $9.95.

An estimated 50 million cats live in the United States today, and an increasing number of households—now about 28 percent—include felines. Cats have grown in popularity, Kepner said, because they can adapt to a confined indoor life and pretty much take care of themselves.

Kepner graduated from Ursinus in 1971 with a B.S. in Biology, and went on to earn his V.M.D. at the University of Pennsylvania in 1974. After four years of working in a general small-animal clinic in New York City, he bought into Perper’s feline practice. Since 1979, Feline Health’s clientele has grown from fewer than 1,000 to 5,000 cats, and numbers among its patients Liz Taylor’s aging Siamese, Cleopatra. But the vast majority of its patients are ordinary cats owned by ordinary people.

The Complete Medical Guide to Cats has 24 chapters covering everything from diseases to infestations to geriatrics. A section on feline first aid explains such things as what to do in the event of a snakebite, how to rescue a cat from drowning, how to give mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, and how to stop bleeding, all with the proviso, “see a veterinarian as soon as possible.” The book is dedicated, among others, to Kepner’s four cats, and “all the other cats that make our existence complete.”

Berman From P8

I thought that going back to school would keep me from this exciting experience," Mr. Berman reflects.

The International Harvester dealership eventually became Berman Leasing. Then, after becoming one of the world's largest suppliers of rental equipment for long-haul use, the firm went public. In 1961, Mr. Berman left the company to travel and work in the public service for a number of years. He was chairman of the Allentown Redevelopment Authority, a U.N. delegate to the 43rd Economic and Social Council meetings in Geneva in 1967, and a member of the Pennsylvania Arts Commission, the Lehigh County Boy Scout Council, and the Allentown Symphony Association Executive Board, among other things. Then in 1968, he bought Hess's department store in Allentown.

"My mind is always open to experiences," he says. "I never put a box around what I didn't want to do. And that's the thread that's gone through all my life. I never knew what I didn't want to do, see or create. I did whatever presented itself. You know, why not?"

Together the couple has traveled extensively—from Nepal to Bangkok, then to the Middle East, to Siam, to Leningrad, to Yugoslavia, to New Zealand, to Fiji—the list goes on and on and on. Together they began to collect art.

It all started with a magazine. "I saw a picture in a magazine and I said to Phil, 'I would love a house that looked like that,'" says Mrs. Berman.

They located the designer, T.H. Rhodes John Gibbings, who had just designed the home of Edward G. Robinson, who was renowned for his extensive art collection.

"Gibbings had always designed homes around art collections, and yet here we were, a couple of kids just married," she smiles. "He designed our house and after he did I said, 'But this doesn't look like the magazine.' He said 'that's because I've designed it so that it's all neutral. Now, he said, you can go out and get paintings and do anything you want—you'll have the background.'"

"And then as our tastes and interests and abilities changed, we could change our own environment," notes Mr. Berman. "It would then be a reflection of our interests, our lifestyle. Gibbings was so interesting. His philosophy was so simple. In fact, it was so simple that we couldn't understand it at first."

So the Bermans started visiting galleries and museums and "one thing led to another," says Mrs. Berman. "We began acquiring some art—and it never ended—it's still going on today."

Their home is a veritable museum, with a sculpture garden covering five acres around the house.

"We move art frequently from one place to another," says Mr. Berman, pointing to a painting in their rotunda room. "We move it not because we like it less or more; it's just that change is exciting—it helps to create interesting things, an interesting life."

I'm surrounded by beautiful things, which I appreciate tremendously," says Mrs. Berman. "I feel very lucky. Lucky to have them—because I admire them and they touch something very deep inside of me."

We found that art was an integral part of our personal interest and our community interest," says Mr. Berman.

The gifts of art—including paintings and sculpture—are prominent at Ursinus and on college campuses throughout the Delaware and Lehigh valleys, in the cities of Allentown and Philadelphia, and elsewhere across the country, as well as in Israel.

Recently, the Bermans made a gift of 45,245 15th- to 19th-century drawings and prints to the Philadelphia Museum of Art. Art collecting is only one of the Bermans' passions. Their philanthropic support is directed in many other directions, including opera and the symphony, Girl and Boy Scout programs, and scholarships for college students.

Currently, the Bermans are very involved with art projects on the Ursinus campus. In January, the College received a work by Israeli Tamar Kalif until "Aggressive Couple." But the project they are most excited about is the art center or museum, which will house numerous works from their collection.

"Educational institutions are a fabulous setting for art, in that they serve to both educate and provide culture for students," says Mr. Berman. "It makes the environment more attractive—itbrightens and livens up their lives—it makes them think.

"This is what I find so nice about the Ursinus experience," he continues, "It's that we can make a difference. Ursinus is great the way it is now, but perhaps with our interest and enthusiasm, we can help it be even better, as we watch the College and its students embark on a new dimension in the humanities."
