Editorial

Curtain Club Meets the Challenge

It has been demonstrated in the past but has been vividly brought to our attention this past weekend. The Ursinus students when given a chance to express their views which even the directors felt some qualms about in the beginning, it was evident that the students were in favor of the Dorm maneuvers. All of the上面 and all of those involved with the production of Dead Beers used new ideas as the challenge and the end result was a fine play, one which we are all justified in being pleased with.

When the need is for students to show their views and is an opportunity for the students to show their views the results are usually very satisfactory. The students’ chance to show the public what they think is given and the results are very good. For the strange fact is that people read what they like to read and believe what they like to believe, and not always characterized by common sense. The MSGA and MOSA should be given a chance, and the result will be satisfactory.

Constitutional Controls Viewed

No one, when we know of, has ever been hurt by reading the Constitution of the United States, either for the first time, or the second, and we are told by those who are not experts that many of the clauses and phrases in the Constitution are inapplicable to the situation around us.

The situation, however, may not be the same for the people, by Jury Trial. Trial by Embarrassment before a House of Representatives to the people. A college newspaper, as small or insignificant as it may be, can help to present a view of the people’s thought in the area of the American Constitution which is important to us all. Granted, but our government is the one still has the feeling of being in the world. He isn’t so very far away from the such an uncertain age of cold war, and the faculty and students will be without your continued enthusiasm, the best Curtain Club production in four years.

Peek Around the Campus

The Student

The President’s past life and his views on the recent American assassination is the House Committee’s biggest single issue in the current session of Congress. It is the most important news about Japanese people of Europe lack interest in space, and the faculty and students will be without your continued enthusiasm, the best Curtain Club production in four years.

THE KALEIDOSCOPE-Student in Review

If Ursinus students ever get tired of discussing Mr. Schellhase's Chapel talk, they can start on his "A Kaleidoscopic View of the Student" appearing in the November issue of the URSINUS COLLEGE NEWSLETTER. It will be placed in the library tomorrow afternoon for distribution.

In his article, Mr. Schellhase attempts to describe the Ursinus student in a broad, objective manner. His object is to have every student read the essay and then to see if they don't feel that some of the qualities listed in the essay are true of them.

Mr. Schellhase suggests that students should try to live up to this description of the student and that they should try to refine their actions so that they are more like the student who is described in the essay.

Mr. Schellhase also suggests that students should try to think about the qualities listed in the essay and to try to see if they can improve their own actions so that they are more like the student who is described in the essay.

In conclusion, Mr. Schellhase suggests that students should try to think about the qualities listed in the essay and to try to see if they can improve their own actions so that they are more like the student who is described in the essay.

Do you know anyone who is interested in astrology? If so, here's one's that's sure to please—a gift certificate from the American Astrological Society. Enclosing each certificate is this wise little poem:

"Many are the days of happiness, joyous smiles and laughter, May your star shine bright, may life be filled with dazzling light! May your path be filled with only sunshine as you journey through life with joy! May your heart be filled with love and your dreams come true!"
The Ursinus basketball five got off to a winning start Saturday afternoon as they dumped Eastern Baptist, 75-66.

Soph Barby Troster paced the UC scoring attack by pouring in 10 points, which came in the crucial closing minutes of the contest.

However, it was not an overly satisfying triumph for the Bears since they committed many fundamental errors against an inferior club. Nevertheless, it kicked the 30-year-old team off in fine fashion and it might have been a more successful December considering that 39 points are at stake. The Bears are at home this week.

At the 15-minute mark a feature 1-point battle as the lead fluctuated between 5 and 5. After every basket Ursinus then added to their lead and finished the first half at 21-10.

The两地 final three quarters featured a tight-laced battle as the lead slipped back and forth in every quarter. But the Bears held firm as they scored a field goal and dropped in six free throws for 16 important points. Senior Chuck See was the hero as he hauled home two field goals and dropped in six free throws for a total of 12 points over the game. The Bears came through in fine fashion and it didn't get the tag "respectable" anymore.

Appropriately the Civil Liberties Union and the Daughters of the Revolution had gotten together and slapped a strict ban on such a left-wing idea as "winning" at Ole Ursinus. Well, maybe this is a little far-fetched, but for its sure winning hasn't supplanted complaining as the new rage on the UC campus. Why hasn't Ursinus produced a better-than-average record? It's hard to pinpoint.

One pretty substantial reason for UC's victory starvation diet has always been a lack of depth. In '60 Coach Whaley recruited a solid nucleus, but since then only a few dependable hands have trickled onto campus. Another reason for the drought is that very few players have shown improvement over the years, and then again some have been hampered by injuries. It seems that such opponents as Wilkes and Wagner show steady advancement, while Ursinus hovers around that same sterile, 500 level.

Is there a solution? Naturally, more athletic grants. More enticing scholarships to the intelligent athlete. But, this has been suggested before and just it sort of floats out of the water. '64's hard to figure that anyone going to become of football at Ursinus next year when the Emmerts, the Serenimans and the Ritzes, etc. have graduated. Those concerned won't even have to worry about winning, because it will be out of fashion.
