1991 Parents' Day a Great Success

BY JUDD WOYTEK
Associate Editor

Many strange faces appeared on the campus this past Saturday. They were the faces of the many Ursinus parents who turned out for the annual Parents' Day. Students and their parents were invited to take part in various activities throughout the day or they could do things on their own or off campus.

The day began with a continental breakfast in Wismer 103 and the Parents' Lounge. At 10:00 a.m. an Academic and Student Life update session was held in the Olin auditorium. Parents listened to President Richard Richter, Dean of Student Life Houghton Kane, and Dean of the College William Akin tell of what the college is trying to do for their students. Parents were encouraged to ask questions about the college and life on campus.

At 11:30 a.m., an Academic Mixer was held in the Wismer Lower Lounge. Parents had the chance to talk to a number of faculty members and other administrators. Many students also attended this session to speak with professors outside of the classroom. The mixer was followed by an all-campus picnic on the lawn next to Zack's Place. There was a tent set up by the Brainy Club, who was selling chances to win an Ursinus blanket. The fare consisted of the usual picnic foods of hamburgers, hot dogs, and grilled chicken.

Dr. Richard King and Dr. Robert Dawley gave 45 minute presentations to parents and students on their respective Liberal Studies Seminars. At 1:30 p.m., the football game against Swarthmore began. The stands were full of students and their parents enjoying the game.

There was a candlelight dinner served in the Olin Center. Families were spread out in the Faculty Dining Room, the Parents' Lounge, and 103. Stuffed mushrooms were served as an appetizer followed by a spinach salad. Choice of Entrees included broiled sea scallops or boneless chicken breast. Dessert choices included German chocolate cake, apple pie, or vanilla ice cream. The turn out for the dinner was larger than the past few years.

In the evening, parents were invited to join their children in Wismer Lower Lounge for a night of the blues with Saffire - The Uppity Blues Women. Other activities throughout the day included the soccer, field hockey, and volleyball games, two exhibits in the Berman Museum of Art, and a variety of fraternity and sorority activities for parents and students in the houses and Reimert.

Is the Soviet Union Dead?

BY SHARON LONG
Of The Grizzly

According to moderator, Dr. King, and the participants of the Open Dialogue on Oct. 3, it was one of the most successful of its kind.

Open Dialogues, informal discussions on current issues, are open to all students and faculty members. Although a regular time for Dialogues is still being established, they are usually held on Wednesdays from 12:30 to 1:00 pm in Wismer's Parent's Lounge. This particular Dialogue successfully took on the intended nature of an "Open Dialogue" in that students intelligently debated the issue at hand, among themselves and with faculty. In the past, such Dialogues were often dominated by faculty members because of the students' reluctance to express their opinions.

Issues debated at the first Open Dialogue, entitled "The Soviet Union is Dead," did not include the validity of the statement in the title. Instead, moderator Dr. King at that onset posed the question of what the territories which composed the U.S.S.R. will do next weekend, October 18-20. There are many activities planned for both students and alumni, including the football game and the presentation and selection of Homecoming Queen nominees.

The festivities will begin on Saturday with a display of the various clubs and organizations at Ursinus, showing how they have changed and modernized over the years.

The football game, against Gettysburg College, will begin at 1:30 P.M. The first game played between UC and G-Burg was in 1903. Ursinus has won only five of the last thirteen games played against Gettysburg. At half-time, the fraternities and commuter students will present their homecoming queen nominations. There are nine nominees, who will be escorted by members of the organizations in their cars. Alpha Phi Epsilon has nominated Cara Consolid of Phi Alpha Psi, Alison Sedgwick, also of Phi Alpha Psi, was chosen to represent Alpha Phi Omega, Beta Sigma Lambda has chosen Brenn Conner of Omega Chi, and Leigh Dickinson of Tau Sigma. Gamma was picked to represent Delta Mu Sigma. Also, Michele Yost, a commuter, was chosen to represent Delta Phi Sigma, Pi Omega Delta nominated Gina Solender of Alpha Phi Psi, Megan Chmiel was chosen to represent Sigma Kappa Lambda, and Zeta Chi chose Heather Roberts to represent their fraternity. As of publishing date, the commuter students organization had not yet nominated anyone. After the nominees are presented to the student body, alumni, and guests, the 1991 Homecoming Queen will be crowned.

The Grizzly wants you! WRITERS are desperately needed for all sections of the newspaper. Meetings are on Monday nights at 8:30 p.m. in the Berman Publications Room (3rd floor Bomberger, Myrin Library side). ANYONE INTERESTED SHOULD ATTEND THIS WEEK'S MEETING!!

The Red Cross Blood Drive will be held from 12:30 to 5:30 P.M. on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 15 and 16th. It will take place in the Utility's Gym. All Students are encouraged to come out and give. A little blood goes a long way. The drive is being sponsored by campus sororities, Circle K, and APO fraternity.

Dr. Berry of the politics department confidently asserted the inevitability of a new unity among the remnants of the U.S.S.R. Shortly following any disintegration of a political union, the tendency of its states is to seek some kind of unity. Besides citing the inevitability of unity, Dr. Berry cited its necessity to preserve stability in a region with republics possessing nuclear weapons.

Another provocative issue discussed was how the economic situation in the region could be improved. With a collapsed distribution system and the fast-approaching winter months, the need for installing an entirely new economic system was discussed.

According to Dr. Saleh of the economics department, the obvious solution to the economic ills is a general move from command economics to free market systems. The inherent inefficiencies of any bureaucratic central authority would need to be eradicated. Along with free markets, private property and worker incentives — formerly "stifled" by a bureaucracy — are desperately needed in the region. One skeptic of a move toward capitalism was Laura Lecrone, who spent last year in the Soviet Union as a foreign exchange student. After observing the mentality of "mindset" of the people, she concluded that such a system is not feasible to do their overall misunderstanding of capitalism. She saw people in the Soviet Union who admired the abundance of goods available to the public in a market economy but did not acknowledge the long, painful transition to capitalism.

Dr. King also was a skeptic of the feasibility of an immediate move toward capitalism, responding to Lecrone by saying, "These societies are not going to be very receptive to 'Yankee' ways."

Chris Tokar, a senior politics major, posed the frightening prospect of people in the troubled region choosing a totalitarian ruler under desperate economic circumstances. Vladimir Zhirinovsky is now a dangerous demagogue in the Soviet Union, who openly supports the restoration of a Russian "empire" and ruthless totalitarianism. Tokar believes his promise of food and order may become an attractive alternative to hungry people during the upcoming winter.

Teacher Appreciation Dinner a Success

BY JEFF BROWN
Of The Grizzly

On Monday, October 1, Ursinus College held its annual teacher appreciation dinner in the Wismer Parent's Lounge. The purpose of this dinner was to recognize the contributions made by the mentor teachers to Ursinus' student teaching program. The role of the mentor teacher is a difficult one, for it involves surrendering all classes to the student teacher, and then coaching that teacher along to success. Without the knowledge and support the mentor teachers provide, the student teaching program would not work.

The program was opened by Dr. Price, followed by a dinner of vegetables with a side order of beef. Following the meal, Dean Akin and Dr. O'Brien gave short speeches. Finally, Dr. Sally Hilderbrand, Supervisor of Curriculum for Perkiomen Valley School District, gave the student teachers four short maxims for moral support in their teaching.

Many of the student teachers felt the dinner was a success. Jenn Harpel, who teaches Social Studies at Methacton, believes it was good to sit with a mix of student teachers and experienced educators. The conversation was worthwhile, and the dinner itself was fairly good. The student teaching program runs through December 20.

This Week in U.C. History

BY KRISTIN WHITE
Of The Grizzly

Before you read "This Week in Ursinus History," have you read the Opinions section of The Grizzly? Have you seen any controversial issues addressed in this week's paper? Any upper-class student can tell you that The Grizzly often becomes a forum in which the Ursinus body holds debates about the economics, social, moral, and political aspects of life, both on and off campus. Additionally, many debates, discussions, and open dialogues are held on campus for people to express their opinions. For nearly a century, this seems to have been an Ursinus way of life.

This week in 1984 marked the National Campus Alcohol Week. The Ursinus RA’s featured open dialogue sessions entitled "Talk Back," during which students and administration could discuss the campus alcohol policy. One of the major concerns addressed were the amount of weekend drinking that occurred and the poor appearance of the school with so many students carrying open containers. Among other proposals, the notion of a $50 fine for anyone caught with an open container was discussed.

In 1973, this week began a long debate regarding the dorm policies and a request for open dorms. The students argued that not having open men and women’s dorms restricted their rights. They could not be expected to demonstrate their maturity unless given a chance to prove it. The administration replied that the previous year’s trial basis of open dorms had failed due to the lack of responsibility. Thus, the semester’s long debate began.

This week in 1934, meetings of three freshmen discussion groups began. Freshmen signed up for one of three discussion groups, personal problems, world problems, or student religious problems. Some topics discussed were college friendships, the value of prayer in one’s life, and the N.R.A., unjust social systems, the effect of religion on personality, and the value of prayer and public worship.

In the early 1900’s, a campus group, the Schott Society, often held a weekly debate. This week in 1904, they debated the exciting topic, "Our present tariff system is detrimental to public welfare." The judges ruled in favor of the negative team. After the debate, one Herbert chatted with the evening with a vocal solo of "O Pond Dove, O Fair Dove."

These are simply a few issues that have faced the Ursinus campus throughout the years. Students who remember last year’s Quad policy debates will realize that these past debates are not that unfamiliar after all. And so, a tradition of questioning, debating, and discussing continues at Ursinus.

Horoscopes

BY SIOWXIE SMITH
Of The Grizzly

ARIES: Don’t let your work load get you down – take some time at the end of the week to kick back and relax with your friends. The long weekend should be the perfect time to forget the work and get down to some fun.

TAURUS: Where are you going in your life? Figure it out and then feel confident in your decision. You’re the only one that has to live with it.

GEMINI: Stop putting it off and do it! You’ll have a great time!

CANCER: Be supportive of your friends even if you think they may have made the wrong decisions. They don’t always think you’re right either, but they are always there for you.

LEO: Is it time to think with your head instead of your heart? You have to do what feels right to you regardless of the advice you are getting.

VIRGO: Take a look around and start to realize just how lucky you are! You could really have fun if only you’d relax and not worry so much.

LIBRA: The sun is in Libra; let it shine on you.

SCORPIO: Are you moving on or trying to hold on to the past? Evaluate your motives.

SAGITTARIUS: Simply just have fun, and enjoy those people you haven’t seen in a while!

CAPRICORN: The next few weekends will be the best you’ve had in a long time. Don’t hold back.

AQUARIUS: Don’t be fooled by the signs, someone really loves you. But do you love this someone?

PISCES: My crystal ball is fuzzy, and I don’t have enough energy to decipher the message, so be careful!

Movie Review - Misery

BY HARLEY DAVID RUBIN
Assistant Sports Editor

The old saying that "Misery loves company" is usually true, but never more so than in Stephen King's Misery. Not only was this a great book, but Rob Reiner's screen adaptation captures all of the horror of the novel with a certain comic touch that sometimes at the same time.

Basically, the movie is about Paul Sheldon (James Caan), the well-known author of the "Misery Chastain" romance novels, and his car accident in the mountains of Colorado. His broken body is found by Annie Wilkes (Oscar-nominee Kathy Bates), a former nurse and "number-one fan," who helps him recuperate after bringing him to her home. But little by little, Paul begins to notice strange little quirks in Annie's personality, such as violent mood swings and her obsession to swear-words. So it is quite a scene when Annie reads Paul's latest book, an attempt at escaping the world of romance novels dealing with scummy car salesmen. And just wait until Annie gets a load of the latest "Misery" novel, in which he kills off the character of Misery Chastain.

Rob Reiner does a great job in slowly unravelling the plot of this movie and Annie's psychopathic side, which leads to a climactic confrontation at the end. I highly recommend this movie, as it appeals to both the humorous and horrific sides of all of us. The "horror" part isn't that scary—it's the humor, and I'm sure none of us will forget it. Go see "Misery"—it's a good time even if you walk out feeling "oggie".

The Aggressive Couple

BY PEPE BYRMON
Of The Grizzly

Just off the men's lacrosse field lies a startling red statue known as the Aggressive Couple. One wonders—why is this important work of art called the Aggressive Couple when it really resembles a boxer of a train or a tackling dummy for the football team? Artistically, the title is obvious, but the final placement of the statue gives it true meaning.

While the word aggressive is no doubt due to the lustful bright red color (which blinks in so well because bright red matches everything), 'couple' probably refers to the joining of the train part to the tackling dummy part. Perhaps it is considered aggressive due to its location next to the place where lacrosse, a slightly aggressive sport, is played. If this is true, then there is no doubt that the Aggressive Couple can be explained by the other Ursinus landmark that the statue sits beside - Reimert.1 No one ever sees an aggressive 'couples' there. Ok, ok, actually no one knows why the thing is called the Aggressive Couple AND no one knows why it is bright red. Maybe they should have just called it the tackling dummy on train tracks. Then at least people would know why it had its name.

What does this oddly named statue say to you? With this type of complex work, an individual interpretation is appropriate. What to me is a stark representation of evil consequences from a mismatched couple venting their aggressions by practicing their blocking for football while riding a train bound for nowhere, may to just be "that red thing with the funny name near the lacrosse field." No one will ever know the true intent of the artist without knowing inside his head, and I'm sure none of us wants to do that. Sometimes with modern art as zany as this, it is better not to know.

One thing should be kept in mind when viewing the Aggressive Couple or any of the lovely artwork for the Winter issue. Boxes for submissions are in the first floor current periodicals section of the Myrin Library and outside the English department offices, third floor of Olin Hall. $50.00 first prizes for best short story and best artwork. Deadline for submissions is October 17, so hurry!

Jane Powell Returns

BY MELISSA MILLER
Of The Grizzly

On Wednesday, October 3rd, Jane Powell and Company returned to Ursinus for another brilliant performance. Powell has performed with the likes of Ray Charles and won Campus Entertainer Award in the Jazz Music Category as well as the Campus Entertainer of the year for 1990. Powell has a five octave range and is an incredible performer interacting with her band and the audience. Some of her songs included personal experiences such as the song "Bill Collector," which was about working in a factory, and from performers such as Bette Midler or Aretha Franklin whom she admires greatly. Jane and her band also do many performances on cruise ships working on the S.S. Norway last year.

Saffire: Uppity Blues Women

This past Saturday, October 5, the Wissner Lower Lounge was dazzled by the funk and blues of Saffire—the Uppity Blues Women. Following the success of their second album "Hot Flash," the trio has been touring the nation serving up their version of rocking blues. They met a warm welcome from the Ursinus Students who seemed to enjoy the event and a half show. Patti Bunt, a senior, said of the show, "The lyrics were so entertaining, and they all seemed to be talented musicians comfortable with each other and their music."

Tortorelli at NASA

BY NAIMISH PANDYA
Science Editor

During the past summer, Dr. Tortorelli worked at the NASA Langley Research Center in Hampton, VA. As one of the premier places for research, NASA constantly engages in improving space technology. However, not only are aeronautical engineers needed, but also chemists, who need to identify and prevent dangerous chemical reactions that occur in space.

Dr. Tortorelli was selected to participate in a summer fellowship program sponsored by the American Society for Engineering Education (ASEE). He worked for the polymeric materials division for ten weeks. The goal for his research was to modify some polymers that would not disintegrate in space.

Satellites and other long-term space objects (such as the future space station) orbit the Earth fairly close and remain in contact with some of the atmospheric elements. Due to the lengthy duration in space, these spacecrafts are subject to degradation from highly reactive molecules, one of which is atomic oxygen. Usually atomic oxygen attacks the structural components and adhesives on satellites enabling them to function improperly. Therefore, they must be brought back to Earth and repaired. However, to prevent these constant costly repair jobs, NASA is researching to make polymers that prevent breakdown by atomic oxygen or any other highly reactive molecules in space. Dr. Tortorelli was making monomers to synthesize these polymers. The chemistry of these polymers, called Polyphenylquinoxalines (PPQ's), is to modify these polymers by attaching silicon groups. Then atomic oxygen would attack these silicon groups and form stable compounds, preventing the destruction of the entire polymer. This also provides additional benefits that in the new silicon oxide complex can also provide a layer of protection to the spacecraft and prevent further degradation.

It was a very prestigious position for Dr. Tortorelli, who made a contribution to modern space technology. Although the research is far from complete, his results are currently being tested by NASA. He worked with approximately 41 faculty members and 120 students from all over the United States. NASA chose him because of his background in organosilicon chemistry. He believes he was fortunate to be selected to work alongside the prominent and reputable NASA scientists. He plans to pursue some of that research here at Ursinus and possibly go back to Langley next summer. Overall, it was a tremendous once-in-a-lifetime experience for him.

What About Recycled Paper?

BY ERIC BLEICKARDET
Science Editor

Is the paper you use recycled? Chances are that a small percentage of the paper you use is recycled. Although Ursinus has increased its effort to recycle paper such as with the weekly Gazette, there are many items such as flyers at Winter that are not printed on recycled paper. Why not?

The recycled paper issue is not about saving trees. Some forests do need preservation due to unique ecological characteristics yet there is no shortage of trees. Today there are more trees than 70 years ago. Annual growth exceeds harvest by 31% a year.

The major reason to recycle is to reduce the volume of garbage sent to landfills. Since 1960, garbage produced in the U.S. increased 80% and another 20% growth is expected by 2000, when the solid waste is expected to reach 216 million tons a year. Paper comprises about 40% of the volume of landfills with newspapers alone comprising 16% of the total. Each American uses 600 pounds of paper annually, 70% of which goes to landfills. Landfill sites are declining. There are 5,500 landfills in the country today and less than 2,200 sites are expected to remain at the end of the century.

Much of what is marked "recycled paper" contains very little waste. The Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) definition for high grade printing and writing paper is 50% waste content. Newspapers go through a process called deinking to remove the print. The present North American deinking capacity is 2.7 million tons per year. This number is expected to rise to 7.3 million tons by the end of 1991.

These encouraging figures should not cause one to overlook the individual responsibility for recycling and the need for education on this subject.

Ethnic Degradation

BY STEVEN GRUBB
Opinions Editor

I was sitting on my living room couch this past Saturday afternoon watching the Atlanta Braves clinch the National League's Western Division. My thoughts are about what a great story these Braves are. In one season, they have gone from last place to first. Towards the end of the game, I began to hear this steady din arise from the Atlanta crowd. They began to chant some absurd,_logically_incorrect song. My thoughts turned to something different. I began to wonder how I would feel if I were a Native American and I heard this stadium full of Atlantans degrade my ethnic traditions. The question of Native American degradation in sports is not a new one, yet this issue is a surprising one in a society which is beginning to emphasize political correctness. No one can deny that Native Americans have played an important part in American history. They were the first to inhabit our nation. And our battle to herd them into reservations has sparked wide-ranging sentiments in all Americans. Yet what we are currently doing is this: The world of sports is satirizing a culture that once was dominant on the continent. Native Americans deserve more recognition than what they are given.

What if a group of Caucasians gathered in a stadium to watch the Detroit Tigers play? Would their cry be a human beatbox? Perhaps. But a crowd at the Boston Caucasians game might do an uncoordinated version of the "White-man's overbite" to cheer their team on. How about going down to the Vet to watch the Philadelphia Nips play. Maybe chop-stick giveaway night or pre-game Samurai battles could be an attraction. If these absurd examples were reality, I am sure most people would be offended. Native Americans must put up with this ridiculous year-round. They watch crazed Washington Redskin fans dress up in their war paint as if war paint meant nothing. And worse yet, they must sit in the face of a tootie, smiling, Cleveland Indian. The question is, what does the Indian have to smile about, the Tomahawk Chop? maybe? This type of treatment of Native American customs is degrading and inhumane.

I realize it will be a lot to ask the age-old Washington Redskins to change their team name. The same could be said of the Braves, Indians, and Chicago Black Hawks. But it is important that we realize what we are doing when we put long-haired девушек and buckskin breeches on ourselves. We unfairly degrade a proud tradition that still exists.

Instead of constantly satirizing Native Americans in the sports arena, maybe we should pick up a book of native American art or history and try to learn a bit more of what this culture really stands for. As it is today, popular society portrays the Native American culture as an un-important object of satire.

Unsafe City

BY DAN GREENE
Of the Grizzly

As I am headed toward the heart of Philly, I have the distinct pleasure to travel down Broad Street. For those of you who have not been on Broad Street, imagine a high intensity, bright-light drive with big buildings, including the Albert Einstein Medical Center and Temple University. Not to mention, you should also see the drug dealers, drug dealers, and gangs of the inner city. Well, you might say...just drive on by and ignore the spectacle.

That's fine. However, if you were to (hypothetically speaking) go to school at Temple, not only would you see this inner-city filth, something else would be evident. It is called VIOLENCE! Last week, a friend of mine, simply opening his trunk in this area, was accosted by a pack of young kids demanding from him thirteen dollars. One kid pulled out a gun and another one said, "shoot him in the heart." My friend quickly handed over the money and knew that it was not worth dying over.

My intentions here are not to scare you out of the city, for I highly recommend a visit to the Art Museum and the Franklin Institute. What I intend to show you is that it is difficult, if not impossible, to fully concentrate on your education with the kind of environment around you. Two events during the summer make my point clear. At 1:00 a.m., a college couple who attend the Temple summer school program were approached by a man with a gun. The man asked for all of their money. The couple turned over their money, but the man was not satisfied. He proceeded to shot the woman in the head and killed him in front of his girlfriend. On his way home for the weekend, a young college student waited for an early-morning bus. He was mugged and killed in the broad daylight at 7 a.m.

In the Temple University area, the crime and violence has escalated to the point where no one is safe. In fact, if you watch the 11 O'Clock news every night there is almost no chance that you would hear of several murders in the area. The three majorities of victims? It is people like you and me, young people and often innocent bystanders. With the increasing need of a formal education, why would you want to subject yourself to a place where you might not live to see it through?

Appreciate Today

BY ELAINE ZELLEY
Of The Grizzly

All too often it seems as though we rush through our days, weeks, and lives without giving a second thought to the environment around us. We live absorbed in our own little worlds of friends, classes, parties, sports and activities; yet how many of us really notice those slight changes around us? No, I am not thinking in terms of recycling or pollution, although these are things to consider. Instead, I speak of those small, seemingly insignificant changes in nature that occur daily, yet rarely receive any attention -- those things many of us take for granted.

Allow me to present some examples in case I have caused any confusion. How many of us paid any attention to the beautiful sunset two Fridays ago? How many have noticed the leaves changing colors? How many more took in the crisp morning air of a smell of a wood burning stove? How many of us ever pondered the meaning of that? If not, maybe we need to step outside a little more often. Naturally, those lazy days of summer that allowed us time to relax and enjoy our lives without the pressures of research papers and exams are gone. However, that does not change the natural beauty of this campus so many of us pass by.

Now some of you may be thinking, "Who is she kidding? I don't have time to watch the sun set." However, perhaps if we all took ten minutes to appreciate the scenery around us, we would have a little less stress in our lives. Maybe your thoughts are more along the lines of "I don't want to watch the sun set." So take a walk, go on a picnic, or take in a friendly game of football. In fact, only several days ago a friend brought up the subject that very few students take the time to be outdoors, even on those warm afternoons we have had so many of late.

We are paying for a gorgeous campus in semi-rural setting so let's make use of it. Call it corry, romantic, or just plain stupid, but with the ozone layer as thin as it is, smog choking our cities, and a nuclear reactor spewing what knows, what wouldn't it be a good idea to take advantage of what we have today rather than always cramming for tomorrow?
What I'm Trying to Say...

BY KATIE JONES
Of The Grizzly

"Just get to the point!" "Stop beating around the bush!" "Say what you mean." "Going behind someone's back." ... How do you feel when you either tell or are told these phrases? I'm sure most of us have had experiences where these exclamations have come up. What did you do in the situation?

The purpose of this article is to show the importance of BEING DIRECT. Clearly, we all would like to be told the truth. It is frustrating when you want a straight answer and none is produced. Being direct is probably one of the hardest things for an individual to do. Being direct is crucial when building any sort of relationship among two people. What is so scary about being completely open with a family member, friend, or boy/girlfriend?

Most people tell only part of the whole picture because they are hurting the feelings of someone they care about. Many find security in speaking the truth in the presence of others instead of confronting that one particular person directly. And yet, there are those who prefer to remain silent, but expressing what is bothering them. Why do we resort to these "cop-outs" when we should insist on being direct?

Sometimes, the truth hurts. But then again, a distorted version of the truth can do more harm in the long run. I like to place confidence in the average person's ability to discern between "stuff" and "fluff." Stuff is the direct problem or point you're trying to say. Fluff is the garbage which stuff is transformed into. What could take one minute to say in stuff, lasts an hour in fluffy time. Remember that a fluffy-job is easy to detect. It hurts to think that your friend, family member or partner does not have the decency to be up front. I have given many fluffy-jobs in my time. I always carry pants of guilt towards those who I have given an honest version of the truth. Have you ever tried to avoid the eyes, of someone who knows of your shame?

Although we may not always want to hear the truth, respect must be given to those who are able to do it. This is not to say that you should walk up to your best friend and say, "You know, your outfit makes you look like a fat pig." There's a difference between honesty, and cruelty. Instead, go to your friend and say, "Your outfit does not fit your figure. Try wearing it this way..." You will not be faulted for your sincerity.

I look around and sometimes I become sad and sick at the same time. I see unfaithfulness to a relationship, friends talking about friends, and groups talking about other groups. Rumors are begun by this very fashion. If I leave this piece with any one line of advice, it is this — the world would be a more tolerable place to live if we all communicated properly.

Come On, Harley!

Dear Harley,

Come on Harley, what are you doing? First of all, who puts a trivia question about Cheers in your self-proclaimed sports column. Granite (sic), I love Cheers also, but let's not mix Cheers with football.

Besides (sic) not being able to distinguish sports from a television show, I think you need to check out some of your prized predictions. First, let's look at the Eagles and the Redskins game on Monday night. The Eagles lost by 23 and did not score once. Harley's prediction: Eagles by 3.

"I should have taken that one to the bank, right Harley? Not! Oh, by the way Harley, your no-name, this guy's name is Mark Rypien passed effectively against the Eagles. He also beat Eric Allen, proving to the citizens of the black and red corners in the league. I am not a big Mark Rypien supporter, but let's give credit where credit is due. He is 5 and 0. Enough about Harley's prized predictions, they speak for themselves. (We will not even mention Harley's key prediction in the Eagles and Skins game about Rypien getting pumped, he was not even sacked once buddy). It would not be fair to rip Harley's predictions without making some of my own, so here I go: The Eagles will finish 9 and 7 and make the play-offs through the wildcard. They will win the first playoff game under McMahon's old, but reliable arm. The Sixers will finish second (that's right Harley!) and the Celtics. The Sixers will make it to the conference finals though, but the air show is (sic) much for the Sixers again. In fact, for the Sixers to beat the Bulls, they need to acquire a strong guard to cover Michael. (Where are you Derek Smith?). Lastly, the owner of the Sixers, Harold Katz, decided to sellout to the Sixers, but only have 7 (count them 7) games on free T.V. My prediction: Mr. Katz will die a slow painful death.

Campus Memo

BY RICHARD P. RICHTER
President of the College

Successful students at Ursinus weave two basic threads of educational experience as they anticipate a fulfilling adult life.

One thread is the preparation for a professional career. About three out of four Ursinus students take grade-related, and do some kind of graduate work related to the professional work they will do. Our broad liberal education, capped by study of a major field in depth, gives them multiple options sometimes critical for our students for being too much focused on themselves and too little committed to the welfare of humankind.

The second thread is the heightening of sensitivity to the ethical and moral responsibilities of adult life — a sense of service. In many courses and in the social and organizational experiences on campus, students acquire a better understanding of the compelling idea of community. They leave here with a greater desire to give something to the society that nurtures and educates them.

These two threads in the most successful adult lives are not separate. They interweave and reinforce one another.

Professionals in the long run will be better as professionals if they bring to their work a sense of service; service to the society will be more effective if it is delivered by a person who is knowledgeable in a field and who knows how to perform.

Critics of higher education often lament that college students do not appear to care as much as they should about ethical and moral responsibilities. We at Ursinus sometimes criticize our students for being too much focused on themselves and too little committed to the welfare of humankind.

There is evidence on campus of a lively student commitment to service. The October 1 issue of The Grizzly reported the following:

"Members of Ursinus Students' Environmental Action Coalition were involved in learning about future threats to Amazon rain forests.

"A group of student leaders took part in a "leadership" designed to make them more effective in their roles as organizers and implementers of constructive campus activities.

"The College Tutorial project, which turns Ursinus students into tutors of area high school students, is functioning again this year.

"Ursinus students have been spending Saturday mornings helping to make decent shelters for the poor through a "Habitat for Humanity" project.

"An op-ed piece by Ellen Sylvester gave a compelling argument for "volunteerism." Ellen said that it "teaches people to put their problems aside for a time in order to work for a greater cause."

In a single week, that adds up to a pretty good evidence that a good many students are sensitizing themselves to the ethical and moral responsibilities of adult life. The Ursinus community has far more to do toward that end. It is encouraging that students already are doing so much.

Construction Blues

BY MEGAN MENDE
News Editor

I thought the Construction was over. With Olin finally standing in all its glory, and the entire campus and trees are being peaceful fall.

Construction news dominates the Ursinus campus. The Life Sciences Building is a shambles. Biology lab is a physical impossibility. Teachers are forced to scream at the top of their lungs over the noise and students go without necessary equipment that has been lost in the confusion. Parking lots are popping up all over campus and trees are being trimmed at every corner. The racket is very annoying.

But even more annoying than all the noise, dust and confusion are the rude construction workers busily making the noise. Not only do they spit, belch and curse in front of students, but they've taken to cat-calls and obnoxious comments. Hanging out on the grass in front of Reimert Hall, they point and openly discuss female students. Whistling and yelling is a favorite lunch-break pastime.

I can understand this happening in downtown Philadelphia, but when I'm paying nearly $18,000 a year I'd like to be free of this annoyance when on campus.

The other day, my friend and I were walking back to Reimert in the rain. A group of Construction workers was behind us. My friend dropped her umbrella and it broke. Instead of helping her pick it up, they laughed.

One of the more "considerate" of the group said, "Don't honey. Just call Mommy and Daddy. They'll buy you a whole mess of umbrellas.

Obviously, these men are too narrow-minded to realize that not everyone at Ursinus is fabulously wealthy. In fact, 70% of all Ursinus Students are receiving financial aid. To treat students like rich brats is immature and rude, especially since the "rich brats" are paying their salaries. We deserve a lot more respect than that.

So where was everyone for the Jane Powell Concert? She is a tremendous singer and she has a great band travelling with her. You cannot be telling me that the $1.00 admission charge was the only reason you stayed away from this phenomenal entertainer. I heard this as the number one reason from a few people though. Think about it. One dollar. That isn't that much money. Certainly those of you who were here two years ago remembered how good Jane was. Were you really turned off by the $1.00 admission?

You are off credit to CAP. They spend a lot of time planning entertainment for the campus and then they get a poor turnout. Remember that you are paying for this entertainment. I seriously doubt that you will ever get to see such quality entertainment again in your life for a $1.00 admission fee, and most of the entertainers on campus are free!

Take advantage of the programs that CAP puts on. They are worth your time and money. So splurge a little and contribute a dollar.
Bears Maul Swarthmore

The Bears avenged last year's loss to Swarthmore and ended a two game losing streak by soundly defeating Swarthmore, 28-7. The Bears dominated offensively as well as defensively. Ursinus out rushed Swarthmore 255 yards to 155 yards. Sophomore running back Bill Sedgwick was the team's leading rusher, with 84 yards in 12 carries. Sophomore quarterback Matt Kennedy had a good day. Despite an interception, he completed 6 out of 11 passes. The Bears successfully stopped Swarthmore's offense. Due to the Bears' tough defense, Swarthmore's quarterbacks only completed 9 out of 28 passes. The defense also forced 3 fumbles and registered 8 tackles for 35 yards in losses. The Bears' main problem was penalties. Ursinus had 12 penalties for a total loss of 99 yards.

Matt Kennedy had a good day.

Swarthmore retaliated by scoring early in the 2nd quarter to make the score 14-7. Late in the 2nd quarter, the Bears increased their lead to 21-7, with Kennedy throwing a 9 yard pass to Tony Barber. Swarthmore fumbled the punt return on its own 2 yard line. Junior running back Dave Billito took the ball into the endzone from 2 yards out with 3:03 left in the 3rd quarter. Defensively, the Bears were strong holding Swarthmore scoreless in the entire 2nd half. In the 4th quarter it was 1st and goal with Swarthmore on the Bears' 4 yard line, but the Bears' defense prevented Swarthmore from scoring a touchdown.

With this win, Ursinus even its record to 2-2. Next week the Bears travel to Johns Hopkins then come home to play Gettysburg on Homecoming.

Throughout the game, the Bears' defense stopped numerous scoring attempts by Swarthmore. With 50 seconds left in the 1st half, Swarthmore was on the Bears' 15 yard line. The Bears made several good defensive plays, which successfully foiled Swarthmore's attempt to score.

In the 3rd quarter, Kennedy's pass was intercepted at Ursinus' 42 yard line. Swarthmore was unable to drive the ball into the end zone, due to the Bears' outstanding defense. Junior defensive lineman Brent Baldaaser recovered a fumble on Ursinus' 14 yard line.

The Bears were also unable to convert the fumble recovery into points, but Swarthmore fumbled the punt return on its own 2 yard line. Junior running back Dave Billito took the ball into the endzone from 2 yards out with 3:03 left in the 3rd quarter.

This past weekend, the women's cross-country team travelled to the first annual Philadelphia Bible College Invitational where they competed against 11 other schools. The Bears demonstrated an outstanding effort by placing second, with a score of 57 points, while Lincoln University scored 52 points to take first place. Cedar Crest was third with 64 points. The closeness in team scores were at similar ability levels. It was a great meet!

For the second week in a row, Kris Wagner and Jen Orechowski crossed the finish line together to tie for first place! They completed the course in a time of 20:24. Dawn Warner, improving her time from last week, ran 23:23 for a 15th place finish. Stephanie Horling, continuing to run strong with every race, completed the course in 24:15 for a 26th place finish. Rebecca Beacher also ran a strong race placing 29th despite not feeling up to par.

The Lady Bears hope to keep improving with each meet by closing the gaps between the runners. This week, the Bears will travel to Drew University in Morristown, New Jersey.

Field Hockey Drives for Victory

Last Tuesday October 1, the hockey team faced Penn here at Ursinus. Despite the advantage on their own field rather than Penn’s astroturf, the girls did not prevail. The first goal of the game was scored by Senior Toni Wenger, but her goal was quickly matched by a Penn player who scored and tied game 1-1 at the half. Near the end of the game it looked as if it might go into overtime, when another girl from Penn shot the winning goal. Goalie Hope Arroliga did all she could to save this high shot to the left corner. The shot was not above Arroliga’s shoulder, but probably should have been questioned for no shots except for ticks are allowed above a player’s waist. The final score was Penn 2, Ursinus 1.

Coach Vonnie Gros found a few things that had gone wrong. She explained that because of the heavy pressure executed by Penn, the Lady Bears temporarily lost their poise and the defense lost possession. Both offense and defense seemed to have an "inability to field the ball."

Harley, I’m crushed. I didn’t even get so much as a mention in this week’s Haven. Anyway, as promised:

After enjoying the past six weeks of bliss, I am finally ready to end my silence. Those who know me have undoubtedly heard me mumble on this year, and the time has come to let the rest of you in on this little secret. The Washington Redskins are going to the Super Bowl.

Before you grunt and use this section to help paper-train your illegal campus pet, let’s take a look at the facts:

• After dismantling the Chicago Bears on Sunday, Washington remains perfect with a 6-0 record.

The obvious choice, one I am not looking at the second perfect season in NFL history. In my humble, unbiased opinion, I’d say that it’s a lot less impossible than you might think.

The next question is: who will stand in the way of Joe Gibbs’ third Super Bowl victory? The obvious choice, one I am not willing to argue against, is the Buffalo Bills – who, barring a Monday night fluke, remain perfect this season as well. Wouldn’t that be something? A battle of unbeaten conference champions to claim the rights of the NFL’s best team. Who knows? It may make last year’s Super Bowl victory in the game’s final seconds look like a blowout.

Last Saturday, the Mens Cross Country team traveled to Philadelphia for the Philadelphia Bible Invitational, which featured seven teams. Ursinus hoped to bounce back after suffering its first defeat of the season when it placed 3rd to Philadelphia College of Bible and champions Trenton State at the Philadelphia Metropolitan Meet.

The race took place at Philadelphia College of Bible, a fast and challenging course. Unfortunately, the competition proved to be a bit too stiff for the Bears to claw and avenge their previous week’s loss. Philadelphia College of Bible was the champion of the meet with 34 points followed closely by Ursinus with a team effort of 47 points.

Once again senior Joe Kerahner led the field of runners from the beginning and finished in 1st place. He completed 26:28, a full 20 seconds ahead of the 2nd finisher from Philadelphia College of Bible.

Mike McMullin and Dave Weiss finished in 5th and 6th place respectively. Dan Bubb finished in 10th place for the Bears.

Freshman Ryan Savits competed in his first meet of the season and finished in 25th place. Savitz was closely followed by teammate Brian Havrilla, who took 26th place.

The Bears will travel to Drew University, where they will meet a contingent of teams that will give the men’s team a run for their money.

On Wednesday, October 2, the Ursinus Soccer team played the ranked six Div. III team from Scranton University. The Bears were playing unbelievably well from the start. During the first half, Ursinus scored off an excellent attack that started from the backfield. The goal was scored by Freshman Walter Zelley. Much credit should be given to Erik Boergesson and Scott Gormley for their excellent performances on defense. Jay Jackson, Victor Gil, and Blake Herv, should be applauded for their efforts on offense, as should Chris Heinzinger for his job in the net. The Bears led 1-0 until about 20 minutes into the second half when the Scranton Team managed to score off a deflected shot. The score remained tied 1-1, and the teams went on to play two 15 minute overtime. In the first overtime Scranton scored off a well-executed corner kick and also outside penalty shot. Ursinus did not mount much due to exhaustion and a lack of substitutions. The game ended with a score of 1-1, but the team was pleased with their playing, as was coach Dr. Walter Manning.

This Saturday, Ursinus faced Johns Hopkins. A large crowd came out to see the Bears play this conference game. Johns Hopkins dominated most of the first half, playing most of it in Ursinus' 1/3 of the field. Eric Boergesson and Dennis Short were once again playing excellent defense, and Chris Heinzinger had a superb first half, making some key saves to keep the Bears in the game. On defense, Jay Jackson got off several shots, and Walter Zelley had a breakaway, but failed to put the ball in the net. So due to the Ursinus defense, the score was 0-0 at the half.

But at the end of the game the Ursinus team would be broken down. The final score was 5-0 Johns Hopkins. There were also 3 red cards given and 2 yellows given to Ursinus' players. The goals came from 2 penalty kicks that were highly disputed, 1 breakaway, and two other powerful shots. The red cards came from one instance of fighting, and one from arguing and cursing at the referee, and the third which was given to Ursinus' coach was given because of constant yelling at the referee. Ursinus' coach was talking to the referee that the Johns Hopkins coach was threatening one of his players, and Walter Manning was insisting that the Hopkins Coach be given a card. However, the referee turned around and gave Coach Manning the card. Ursinus lacked offense this half and the defense crumbled under Hopkins, but most of all Ursinus suffered from several poor, disputable calls by the referees which resulted in two penalty kicks that were converted into goals.

Ursinus' soccer record is now 2-5, and the team goes on the road next week to play Lebanon Valley on Thursday and Delaware Valley on Saturday.

You know it is fall at Ursinus when girl's pledging begins, midterm terms are rapidly approaching, and intermural flag football is in full swing.

This year 10 teams are competing. In the Red League the Betty Ford Clinic is currently undefeated and leads the league with 3 wins. Beta Sigma Lambda-Team A and 69ners are tied for 2nd place, both with a record of 1-1. Delta Pi Sigma-A and a Beta Sigma Lambda-Team B, with a record of 0-1 and Blues Brothers is in last place with a record of 0-2.

In the Gold League Unbridled Violence and Alpha Phi Omega are tied for 1st place each with a 2-0 record. Alpha Pi Sigma-B is in 3rd place with a 2-1 record and Rollin' Fat and Moldy Watermelons round out the standings.

This week the Beta Sigma Alpha Team A beat the 69ners 20-0. Alpha Phi Omega posted its 2nd win by soundly defeating the Moldy Watermelons 44-0. The Moldy Watermelons also lost to Delta Pi Epsilon-B 4-0, The Betty Ford Clinic got its 3rd victory by crushing the Blues Brothers 30-0.

On Thursday Delta Pi Epsilon-A plays the 69ners at 4:00 P.M. Delta Pi Epsilon-B meets Rollin' Fat at 5:00 P.M. Friday's games will be announced at a later date.

Backup quarterback Chris Chandler completed a 5-yard pass to Bruce Hill for the game-winning touchdown as the Tampa Bay Buccaneers came back to upset the Philadelphia Eagles 14-13 Sunday in National Football League action.

The turning point of the game was when Eagles punter Jeff Feagles dropped the football inside his own 20-yard line with the Eagles leading 13-0 and five minutes remaining in the game. The Bucs took over and three plays later, Chandler found running back Rob Wilson for a short touchdown.

Chandler replaced starter Vinny Testaverde, who went down with a chip fracture on his right thumb. The four-year veteran led Tampa Bay on a 49-yard drive which resulted in the winning score with 1:09 to play. The Eagles last hopes went up in smoke when returner Rod Harris fumbled on the ensuing kickoff.

Kicker Roger Ruzek hit two field goals in the third quarter for the Eagles defense. Byron Evans intercepted a pass and ran it back to the Bucs' one yard-line before fumbling it back to Tampa Bay. For Tampa Bay, which recorded its first victory of the season, kicker Steve Christie came the closest to scoring but missed a 32-yard field goal attempt late in the second quarter.

Brad Goebel, a rookie freeagent, started at quarterback for Philadelphia. Due to a rash of injuries, he is the fourth different quarterback to play for the Eagles this season and the third different starter in six games, behind Randall Cunningham and Jim McMahon. He was not impressive — his longest completion went for 19 yards to Keith Jackson and he threw two interceptions at a dreary Tampa Stadium.

The Eagles fell to 3-3 and three games behind the division-leading Washington Redskins, who defeated the Chicago Bears 20-7 to keep their perfect record intact at 6-0. Philadelphia will play at home this coming Sunday against the New Orleans Saints.
