The Proper Use of a Student's Time

The following is an excerpt from a letter sent to a student from their professor:

"The proper use of a student's time is a matter of great importance. In order to make the best use of your time, it is necessary to plan your work in advance and to stick to it. Do not waste your time on unimportant matters. Study diligently and make the most of your opportunities."

Letter from New Orleans

New Orleans, May 21, 1863

My dear [Name],

I am writing to you from New Orleans. The city is very busy and the weather is pleasant. I have been spending a lot of time exploring the city and visiting friends.

The levee is always crowded with people and the street scenes are quite lively. I have been hearing a lot about the war and the latest news is that the Confederate forces have been pushed back. The Union soldiers are making good progress.

I have decided to stay here for a while longer and to see as much of the city as possible. I will write to you again soon.

Yours truly,
