Right to Punch

To punch or not to punch can be a difficult question. In Pennsylvania, teachers have the right to punch students who fail to comply with educational standards. This includes the right to punch students who fail to complete assignments or work that is not up to standard. If a teacher suspects that a student is not doing their work, they may be justified in punching the student.

They've Done the Impossible

Congratulations to the new Whitians, announced at the Loridel last Friday night. Selection to the Society is an honor which ranks them among the stand-outs in their class. For anyone familiar with the criteria for admission, must realize that they have done the impossible: attained a remarkable academic average and yet managed to participate in extra-curricular activities. They are a credit to their class.

An Un sensational Apology

Last week we received a note from Mr. Dolman, which read as follows:

"Dear Mr. Editor,

I would like to apologize if you could print this note as an official apology to the student body for a slight error in the calendar which appears on Page 7 of the new catalogue. The calendar states that Christmas recess next year begins at 3:30 p.m. on Friday, December 20. After special consideration, we decided that it would be somewhat unfair of us to ask the student body to leave the campus at such a crucial hour of the morning. Therefore, we should like to change the hour to 5:30 p.m. to give the student body the advantage of an extra day of study before they leave for the holidays.

Sincerely yours,

Geoffrey Dolman
Director of Admissions"

Goldman's Novel "Tempel of Gold"

Traces Disillusionment of Personality by Carlton Diugman

If you know the story of Gunga Din, the significance of this novel's title becomes immediately apparent, for it is upon the tower of a temple of gold that the ship's water carrier blows those triumphant blasts on his trumpet in an attempt to save the lives of a British army detachment.

Gunga Din, by Ralph McInerny, who now sits in the top of the tower only to be ridded with bullets by the enemy in an attempt to silence his lone voice.

Peek Around the Campus

by Carl Perk

I'm tired of listening to people who win Adrian at the seats. Those who wear fancy shoes and then sit back and watch the others do all the evaluating themselves before they try to do anything else. Don't accomplish anything or convince an old and by simply looking, talking, and doing nothing.

An Out and Out Lie

It is said, most commonly, that nothing ever happens at Ursinus College. This is left as an out and out lie. There is enough, perhaps too much, happening on this campus to keep the interested well entertained.

"Temple of Gold" of College Algebra

The Temple of Gold of College Algebra, both in its student and professor versions, is a puzzle that plagues students in junior college as well as in colleges of higher education. Often the meaning of the word "gold." It's true for everyone, and you'll find this "test of all times" is also true for many others.
