Buchanan vs. Bush: The Republican Race Heats Up

BY ERIKA COMPTON
News Editor

Super Tuesday will be held next Tuesday, March 10, with primary elections being held in Delaware, Florida, Hawaii, Louisiana, Missouri, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, and Massachusetts. Today, however, primaries are running in Colorado, Georgia, Maryland, Minnesota, Idaho, Utah, and Washington. Here is a preview of the top contenders for republican nomination, who include Patrick Buchanan and George Bush.

Buchanan is a conservative running with the ideology that the United States needs "new leadership and new direction for our economy." He has an "America First" plan which he would like to see put into action. As far as trade is concerned, Buchanan thinks the U.S. needs to play hardball with foreign countries, especially Japan. The U.S. needs to seek free and fair trade. In order to boost the economy, Buchanan supports capital gains tax cuts, a federal budget freeze, and a $50,000 to $100,000 pay cut for Bush. Buchanan does not have a definite health care plan.

In fact, one of the Bush campaign's major arguments towards Patrick Buchanan is that, while he constantly criticizes the policies of the Bush administration, he offers little or no solutions.

Another major criticism of Buchanan is that he boasts absolutely no hands-on political experience, and has made a living writing and broadcasting his views on political, social, and moral issues.

However, George Bush recently made public his $100 billion health care plan. His main emphasis is this: tax credits or deductions to help families pay for private health insurance. While many believe this is a good policy, it is questionable as to where the money for it will come from. On the tax front, Bush supports a middle class tax cut. Bush's plan for reviving the economy consists of several elements. His plan includes an attack that would stimulate growth by boosting the homebuilding industry and put money into the pockets of consumers. This will create jobs and reduce taxes. It includes a sharp capital gains tax cut, a tax credit and tax break on savings for first time home buyers, as well as new tax breaks for real estate industry and the cost of new business equipment and buildings.

In the republican race, the ads are centered around making the opponent look bad. Buchanan and Bush have waged nasty campaigns against each other which both call false advertising.

Tensions Continue to Run High in Middle East

BY TOM WILUSZ
Features Editor

Last we forget how fragile peace is outside the borders of our United States, the nations of the Middle East have chosen this past week to begin a new round of bloodletting. While Iraq's Saddam Hussein continues his efforts to repulse an Iraqi offensive, there is as yet no official government in Kurdistan. The survival of the region. The survival of Saddam Hussein has thus far kept Hussein at bay, but things are still not easy for the Kurdish tribes.

The high, mountainous region of Kurdistan is bitterly cold and barren, and the economic blockade of the region (established by Hussein in October after the peshmerga repelled an Iraqi offensive) has been taken off. Only through black market trade with Turkey and U.N. aid missions are the Kurdish people surviving. Furthermore, there is as yet no official government in Kurdistan (elections are scheduled for April 3), and law is the sole province of the militias that have taken control of much of the region. The survival of Kurdistan is in serious doubt.

Meanwhile, against the backdrop of the continuing Mideast peace conference, Israelis and Shiite Muslims once more came into active conflict along Israel's northern border. Israeli helicopter gunships attacked the car of Sheik Abbas Musawi, leader of the Shiite Hizbullah "Party of God", killing Musawi along with his wife and son. Later last week, Israeli tanks occupied two Shiite villages in southern Lebanon, firing upon suspected Shiite sympathizers. In retaliation for the attacks, Shites in Lebanon fired rockets into northern Israel. Israeli-Palestinian tensions also flared last week. Palestinian guerrillas opened an Israeli camp and killed three Israelis. In southern Israel, a Palestinian stabbed four Israelis, killing one.

Despite the recent outbreaks of violence, all three groups still plan to attend the next round of Mideast peace talks this week in Washington.

The importance of the upcoming peace talks is self-explanatory. "Nobody can afford not to come," said Judith Kipper, an expert on the Middle East from the Brookings Institution. "No one wants to be blamed for the failure of the talks."

Of The Grizzly

This week's roving reporter question is: If you had to choose a candidate for President, who would you choose, and why?

Michelle Pierless-sophomore
—I’d vote for Tsongas. I agree with his democratic political views and I think it’s time for a democrat in the White House.

Aaron Burgstein-sophomore
—I would choose Buchanan. I think we need a better domestic policy and I hate democrats.

Melissa Rosenstiel-senior
—I’m going to vote democratic but I’m not sure which candidate I will choose. I’m looking for someone who will do more for the economy and the country.

Fred Vogt-freshman
—I would choose Clinton because since he’s young he would be able to do a better job and his economic policies are more realistic than Bush’s.

Eric Tallman-senior
—I would vote for Buchanan. I think that Bush has mishandled the economy and I think Buchanan would do a better job.

Christopher Neary-freshman
—Due to the fact that circumstances put Bush into a wartime era, he was exhausted both mentally and physically. This portrayed him as a neglecting president. His charismatic leadership was unseen and I feel he would do a more than adequate job if re-elected.

John Barbour-freshman
—I would choose Bush because I think he handled the Gulf situation well, and I think he can do the job.

Brent Baldasare-junior
—I’d choose Pat Buchanan because he’s a protectionist which means he would keep American industry in America and bring back any recently lost American industry and regulate trade laws so that Americans are able to utilize their new found industrial strength.

Tri-Lambda
BY MELISSA CHIDO
Of The Grizzly

Dr. Thomas Gallagher, Associate Professor of Anthropology and Sociology, spoke at the Tri-Lambda Life Long Learners group and his Peace Corps experience in Micronesia. He spoke at Berman Art Museum on Wednesday, February 26.

Micronesia is a group of islands in the Pacific Ocean near the equator. Dr. Gallagher spent 2 years (1967-1969) on the island of Nama. The island of Nama is 1/4 mile wide by 1/2 mile long. It is located outside the Truk lagoon, which was a naval base for the Japanese during World War II. Now these islands are U.S. trust territories.

Dr. Gallagher lived with the chief and his family on Nama. His job on Nama was to teach English to the children. By speaking English they gain the opportunity to receive a higher education and eventually a higher paying government job. During his teaching experience, he learned about community development, through which Dr. Gallagher helped build a new school building for the students.

The experiences Dr. Gallagher spoke of are ones he will never forget, such as their food. Most of the dishes mentioned were breadfruit, breadfruit with coconut milk, and preserved breadfruit. Another staple of their diet is fish, usually consisting of mackerel and tuna. Fishing is the main vocation on the island. Dr. Gallagher learned to fish for mackerel. He and the fisherman would tread water for two to three hours with a fishing line and then eventually hook one. When the fish was caught it was attached to the line around the fisherman’s waist. Before that was done the fish had to be killed so as not to attract sharks by the fleeing of the fish. It was killed by biting its head behind the eyes thus crushing its brain.

As much as fishing was important to the islands, so was navigation. Their technology consisted of the use of clouds, currents and stars. From the stars they could predict a typhoon two to three days before the weather forecaster.

During Dr. Gallagher’s two year stay he learned much about our own society by looking at their culture. For him, privacy was rare. His students followed him everywhere he went, except the place where ghosts lived. The islanders were very particular about ghosts; they were considered sacred.

Dr. Gallagher’s trip took place before he became an anthropologist, therefore he did not sympathize with their belief in ghosts. As an anthropologist, he is able to look at different cultures and not instill our cultural values. Many times our society instills its own beliefs on others. After listening to Dr. Gallagher speak of his experiences, a better understanding of our culture is gained and the mind is opened to understand other cultures.

The next Tri-Lambda speaker will be Mr. Reginald Tichell, an instructor in Computer Science. His speech is entitled “Sails on the Chesapeake” on Wednesday, March 18, at 12:00 noon, at Berman Museum.

U.S.G.A. Minutes
February 26, 1992

President Richter was the guest speaker at this meeting. He gave a brief update on the Health Center Proposal and Wismer Renovations. He stated that the Health Center is still under study. He is trying to use much caution in moving towards a decision. He is in the process of having discussions with Montgomery Hospital, and he is making progress.

The Wismer Center is under a more rigorous study. The President is looking into pre-architectural program needs. He is currently in the process of inviting architects to put the plan in physical terms. The President is hoping for a 10-11,000 ft squared addition, which would incorporate the Book Store, Post Office, and U.S.G.A. office. Right now there is no prediction of when the project will begin. Fundraising must be completed first. A campaign of approximately $20 is underway along with other capital projects. Wismer permanent endowment funds would also be invested.

Old Business:
Recycling has been going very well, and it’s very organized. Collections are every Monday afternoon.

There are still problems with the computers in the Library. The staff has not met yet to discuss this problem.

New Business:
Ellen suggested putting more lights down on the track. It’s too dark for those who run at night. She also suggested that a timer could be installed to reduce the cost for powering and not waste electricity.

The Room Selection Committee will be holding their first meeting on Wednesday, March 5, at 4 P.M. in the first floor Conference Room in Corson Hall. Any interested students are welcome to attend.

"The Influence" and "Mother’s Garden" are the two groups coming to Ursinus on April 30, 1992. U.S.G.A. is sponsoring $100, and the rest will be provided by AFAC. Organizers are still needed to prepare for the event.

The Campus Planning Group approved the Committee on Committees. The Committee will hold its first meeting after Spring Break. One representative from U.S.G.A. is still needed.

Stoane Gibb and the Residence Hall Association is looking into purchasing new stackable washers and dryers. A suggestion was also made to install change machines in the laundry rooms on campus. There is a possibility that AFAC could use whatever money it has left at the end of the year to purchase the change machines.

Class Reports:
Last week, the Senior Class nominated student speakers for graduation. Graduation Committees should be meeting soon to update graduation plans.

The Freshman Class and WVOU would like to host Jim Carroll Casino Night. They are also thinking about incorporating other schools in the event to reduce the cost.

The next U.S.G.A. meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, March 4, 1992, at 7:30 P.M. in the U.S.G.A. office. Hope to see you there.

Respectfully submitted,
Gina Solensky.
Environmental Notes

BY KRISTIN WHITE

Of The Grizzly

With Spring Break in less than a week and warm weather every other day or so, people's minds are turning toward spring and summer activities. Here are a few environmental tips for those who are considering fishing.

The most important thing is to not litter. Do not discard fishing line or cigarette butts in the water; old fishing line can entangle animals while the filters of cigarettes do not degrade and are often eaten by birds and fish. Also, avoid using disposable plastics. Most of these are not biodegradable, littering the waters for years and causing harm to animals by entanglement and ingestion.

When fishing, take care of the surrounding habitat wherever you happen to be. Stay on designated paths and stay off fragile areas such as sand dunes and sod banks.

Additionally, you can help preserve future stocks of fish by releasing small fish and those you cannot immediately use; all species play an important role in the ecosystem. Enjoy the fishing and remember to think of the environment.

On Thursday February 27th, Tony and Dave Phillips performed their hysterical show of comedy, magic, and juggling for Ursinus in the Wismer Lower Lounge. The Phillips Brothers have performed for five years on the college circuit, on cruise ships, have been seen on all the major comedy networks, and are popular in Atlantic City.

Tony and Dave first started doing magic fifteen years ago, which is something their grandfather used to teach them. Tony then started juggling, and from there they incorporated comedy into their act. Their act included juggling a chainsaw, cleavers, and to end their show, fire.

Mark Rust also appeared in the Wismer Lower Lounge on Saturday to entertain a small but energetic crowd. Mark Rust has been performing on the college circuit for twelve years and some of his credits include: performing with Pete Seger, Peter, Paul, and Mary, and Tom Chapin. Mark’s show was different because of the wide variety of instruments that he played. He started his show on the guitar singing some of his original music and then moved to the piano where he sang “We are Patriots All.” This song was about the Persian Gulf War and was a favorite among the audience, being requested again at the end of the show. He then moved to the hammered dulcimer and then the mountain dulcimer. The hammered dulcimer especially sparked the audience’s interest and Mark explained that the instrument was stretching piano strings over a board and then hitting them with the light-weight wood hammers.

To end his show, Mark played two songs on the banjo and then several more on the guitar. The small audience that attended all enjoyed themselves. Junior Robin Stankiewicz remarked, “Mark was different and very soothing to listen to. The hammered dulcimer had a very relaxing effect on me, and he expressed himself very deeply in his music.”

The Grizzly
The Gung-ho Guardians

If you were a statue, what would be the ideal place to be located? In a large open space so many could easily see your beauty? No, such visibility could just as easily lead to problems that do not understand your form and purpose making fun of you. Perhaps a sculpture would prefer to stand near the Berman Art Museum as an unwavering sign of its commitment to the arts. Then again, this could lead to objections of brown-nosing ones benefactor and resentment of this special orientation? Add to these an unwavering sign of its beauty? No, I always thought that jazz music was a nice change from the usual racket I listen to. I liked the fact that jazz always seemed so upbeat and alive.

Well, on Wednesday, February 26, I finally got a chance to hear a live jazz band perform—the Clifford Jordan Quintet. Born and raised in Chicago, Jordan has performed with such jazz greats as Charlie Mingus, Al Foster, Art Farmer, and Grady Tate. He has also recorded various albums on the Columbia, Blue Note, Jazland, and Contemporary labels. Jordan has been featured in an article in Time magazine, composing scores theater productions and numerous films, and has presented master classes and workshops at the New England Conservatory of Music, Yale, Harvard, and the University of California.

I am happy to report that the audience was packed—mostly a middle aged crowd, but there were quite a few members of the Ursinus student body in attendance as well. The quartet opened its performance with a segment called "The Con Man," a 10 minute long composition in which each member managed to dazzle the crowd with an individual solo interspersed throughout the piece.

This piece was then followed by a number entitled "Evidence" by Thelonious Monk, and its was not hard to miss the majority of the audience tapping their feet or bobbing their heads in time with the music. The remainder of the pieces were equally as powerful and impressive, conveying a strong sense of energy and emotion. "I thought it was pretty good," offered sophomore Joy O'Grady.

"Granted, jazz isn't really my thing, but I enjoyed it, especially that drum player—he always looked so happy!"

What is the ideal location for sculpture placement?

Movie Review

Naked Gun ★ 2 1/2 ★

BY ERIK MOORE
and GAR DONECKER
Of The Grizzly

When they made their sequel to "The Naked Gun," the Zucker Brothers (David and Jerry) decided to make their movie title stand out from such summer sequels as "Return to the Blue Lagoon" and "Problem Child 2." As the previews boasted, "The Naked Gun 2 1/2: The Smell of Fear" was so big that it needed another 1/2. Lieutenant Frank Drebin (Leslie Nielsen) and his Police Squad are back, this time Lt. Drebin must save his girlfriend from the criminal Quentin Hapsburg (Robert Goulet) in Washington, D.C. from a nuclear explosion, and save the United States from a conspiracy of oil and coal tycoons.

Also returning is the continuous stream of sight gags, slapstick, and any other joke that the Zucker Brothers can muster. The classic Police Squad car opening also returns with a slap in the face at Beverly Hills Police from a cameo by Ms. Gabor. As in the original movie, "Smell of Fear"s comedy is tailored to both high and low tastes. O.J. Simpson's being dragged underneath a car and a bus all the way to Detroit is in-your-face slapstick that even fans of "Problem Child 2" will understand. The movie also has a higher, satiric (and even politically correct) edge as it cuts on the Exxon Valdez incident.

Occasionally, the overabundance of slapstick gets in the way of the film's better jokes. Just as Simpson's continuing tribulations are drawn out, so are the scenes with Barbara Bush and the wheel chair "dance." Mostly, though, the high density of comedic elements allows viewers to pick and laugh at whatever jokes appeal to them.

Nielsen delivers with precision his expected deadpan performance, and Priscilla Presley, as Jane Spencer, matches Nielsen one-liner for one-liner. The "Ghost" spoof in their love scene is a highlight of the movie. As a villain, Goulet seems to enjoy making fun of his role and himself.

We should mention that the movie, albeit funny, does not quite live up to the high standards set by the first movie. The percentage of slapstick in the second film seemed to have decreased at the expense of diminishing the effectiveness of the other more biting comedy. The movie, though, is certainly not mundane and deserves the extra ½★.

Walk A Mile For Understanding

BY ELLEN SYLVESTER
Opinions Editor

Last weekend many people turned out for the 9th Annual Airband Festival which raised money for the Trinity Church’s Head Start Program. One incident which occurred during the show has caused a good deal of controversy among the college community and is an issue which needs to be addressed. During the show, one group performed a lip-synch which was intended to humorously criticize the singing group Milli Vanilli, but which instead offended members of the campus community. As a member of the audience, it seemed fairly obvious to me that the group was not intending to mock African-Americans, but rather the misdoings of the singing group itself. Still, offense was taken and many are struggling to understand and evaluate the situation.

Education is often a good way to start in attempts to come to terms with things we don’t understand. In this situation, understanding why the Airband act might offend someone is crucial to coming to terms with racism and degradation.

Blackface has been associated in the last century with the racial degradation of African-Americans. It began in the 19th Century as a means of comic imitation of White stereotypes of African-Americans in minstrel shows. It has been recognized as a racist practice in the theater for many years, and is not thought to be acceptable for portrayal of African-Americans any longer. The NAACP has struggled for decades to make blackface and other forms of racial degradation illegal in this country.

Although the Airband group did not mean to cause offense to any member of the community it is evident that this type of costuming closely reflects the ritual of blackfacing which is found degrading to African-Americans. The group in attempts to make sure they did not offend members of the Minority Student Union (MSU) supposedly asked a few members if the costuming of their act offended them. Apparently, no one thought they were told it would not.

In this way, even some of the MSU members were able to recognize that the group’s intent was not a malicious one. However, because the act did not attempt to offend members does not mean that the implementations of the costuming do not bring pain or will come to terms of degradation of people in their minds. My high school Anthropology teacher frequently quoted a phrase which I keep in the forefront of my brain which I feel applies to this situation. He said, "Walk a mile in someone else’s shoes." I’m sure we’ve all heard the phrase at one time in our lives, but some of us may have forgotten the importance of it. To walk a mile in someone else’s shoes is to put yourself in their place and to understand how certain actions affect that person. When we have the benefit of understanding other’s feelings we aren’t always apt to repeat our actions toward them.

In a different, perhaps more ideal society, people would all be equally regarded and blind to skin color. However, if people were colorblind we would not be able to recognize and appreciate the differences we have among us and the ways in which these differences make us special. Though we are born colorblind we quickly adopt the beliefs of the people around us. Therefore, it takes work to be able to recognize differences and it also takes awareness. The incident which occurred last week shall hopefully help the campus community to remember the importance of working for understanding and awareness of others.

Campus Memo

BY RICHARD P. RICHTER
President of the College

SENSITIVITIES: An act in the recent Airband show has provoked reactions about the seriousness of racial and ethnic sensitivities. At an open meeting of the Ursinus Student Government Association, I heard directly from those who felt offended. It is regrettable that an event intended to be fun-oriented should be found objectional by any members of the Ursinus community. All of us can hope that, through good-willed discussion, better understanding will result and that the whole College community will be assisted in living more harmoniously together.

The principles and traditions of Ursinus College are operating when we seek such understanding. The fundamental value of all human beings and the mutual obligation to respect another are basic in the life of Ursinus. In our college catalog we point to those tenets when we talk of searching “for an understanding of peace, justice, and the need for human cooperation.”

As Ursinus intentionally becomes a more diverse place, our opportunities for learning form each other are growing. So are our opportunities for celebrating another person’s ethnic and racial heritage as much as our own. These growing opportunities are also our growing responsibilities.

SMOKE: The Wellness Committee continues to foster a smoke-free atmosphere on campus. With the good-natured but persistent encouragement of the committee members, led by Dr. Laura Borsdorff of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, a number of campus buildings have officially gone smoke-free. They are: Hellert House, Martin Library, Fahl Hall, and Studio College. Dr. Borsdorff reports that the committee is talking with those in several other buildings about going to “smoke-free” status, including Berman Museum, the Book Store, and Ritter Center.

Smoking-restricted conditions have been declared in Conson Hall, Wismer Center, and Olin Hall. In residence halls, smoking is restricted to student rooms.

Meanwhile, the committee is eager to advise and assist any other major areas that have not yet addressed the “smoke-free” question directly.

I concur with the committee that the College should continue working toward a completely smoke-free campus at some point in the foreseeable future—say, May 1993. I am a member of the generation encouraged by our society to smoke tobacco at a young age and can appreciate the magnitude of a change to a totally smoke-free campus. But it makes sense, and the gradual but persistent approach of our Wellness Committee deserves our gratitude and cooperation.
Responses To Airband Controversy

American student if he would be offended (sic) and the reply was no. But his reply is not necessarily the reply of the other African-American students on campus. The two students had doubt about the act and therefore should not have done it.

Also, regarding incidents of the past, some fraternities putting maps on their heads and painting their faces black as to portray Rastafarians. Rastafarianism is a religion, not a fashion trend and many people are uneducated about this fact. Therefore, for the fraternities that do, do this: there is no need for the faces to be painted black, because the first Amendment grants the freedom of religion. Hispanics, African-Americans, Asians or Whites can be Rastafarians, because this right has been guaranteed by the first Amendment.

Sincerely,
Nicola E. Wills, '95

To The Editor:
I was stunned and very upset to learn that our Air Band performance had provoked such anger and outrage. Our goal was to bring a little laughter and irony to the lip-synching contest by imitating a band which had itself lip-synched all of its songs. Perhaps we were naive, but we thought that in order to convey to the audience that band which we were supposed to be, our lead singers should look like Milli Vanilli. We did not think that there could be any harm in poking fun at the band, which had been ridiculed by Saturday Night Live, In Living Color, and even various commercials.

Comedian Paul Rodriguez has become famous imitating all stereotypes through the use of voices and facial expressions as well as make up to emphasize his impersonations. Perhaps we should question Eddie Murphy's role in "Coming to America" as a white, Jewish man. I realize that generations ago people used make up as a means of mockery. This is not our case.

To those who apparently did take offense, we truly apologize. We may have been insensitive and unthinking, but certainly racism was the furthest thing from our minds.

What's Up Zack's?

To The Editor:
I'll be the first one to admit that since I moved to a Main Street house I find it just as easy to walk to 7-11 as I do to walk over to Zack's to grab a bite to eat. Recently, however, when I've attended campus functions in the Wimber Lower Lounge I've found myself looking to Zack's to provide me with refreshments and to my surprise have often found them closed early, despite signs posted around the room which state Zack's hours. I can see how this might seem a trite concern and perhaps if I was a Zack's regular I would be informed about these inconsistencies. The way I see it though is that if Zack's is going to attempt to serve the college community, they ought to stick to the hours posted or change their signs. Until then I'll continue to be 7-11 bound.

Flannery Going To Nationals

BY LAURA ZOBEL

Every season, Coach Racich has a wish, to create a team of champions and take a trip to nationals. This year his wish came true as Ursinus placed 5th out of 18 teams in the MAC championships and Scott Flannery, the 1992 MAC heavyweight champion, earned a trip to Trenton State, sight of the 1992 NCAA Division III National wrestling championships.

Last year Ursinus placed 4th and had another fine performance this year finishing 5th behind Muhlenburg, Lycoming last year’s champions, Moravian, and Delaware Valley, winning the 1992 MAC team championship for the 5th time since 1982.

For the two seniors, the MAC championships were a fine way to end a collegiate career. Todd Klinedinst, who dropped to 142 halfway through the season, and had another fine performance this year finishing 5th at 142 weight class. Last year he came in 5th place at 150. Klinedinst the 2nd seed, swept through the brackets to advance to the finals. In his first match, Klinedinst pinned Shawn Dolg from Messiah in 1:33. Klinedinst advanced to the semifinals by defeating Elizabethtown’s John Teoli by a 3-0 decision. In the semifinals, he faced Ferris Crilly of Juniata for the second time this year. Klinedinst won 8-5 in their first meeting and he earned a chance at the MAC 142 title by defeating Crilly for a second time 12-5. In the finals, Klinedinst faced the number 1 seed Tony Gump of Delaware Valley. Klinedinst wrestled well, but Gump proved why he was the number 1 seed by defeating Klinedinst 11-5.

Flannery, the 1991 MAC heavyweight runner up, reached the finals for the second year in a row. Seeded 1st, Flannery had no difficulty in eliminating his opponents. Flannery began the journey to the finals with a quick decision over Richard Fouch of Gettysburg in 1:40. In the quarterfinals, Flannery encountered Juan Teaman of Scranton, whom he defeated in 4:13 a week earlier, had no problem of beating him again, this time by a 14-7 decision. Flannery then faced Tom Dodd of Susquehanna, who upset the 4th and 5th seeds to reach the semifinals. Flannery advanced to the finals by defeating Dodd 11-5. In this year’s final, Flannery met a different opponent, 2nd seed John Mitchell of Messiah, who finished 4th at 190 at the 1991 MAC Championships and has a season record of 20-1. The heavyweight final was the last match of the day and certainly the most exciting and suspenseful match at the tournament. Despite being outweighed by 40 pounds, Flannery used quick footwork and fast takedowns to wrestle to a 4-4 tie at the end of 3 periods.

In overtime after several attempts, Flannery earned a takedown to win 6-4 and became the 1992 Heavyweight champion. This Thursday, Flannery will travel to Trenton State to take a shot at the National Heavyweight title.

The seniors weren’t the only ones who did well. Terry Gallagher, no stranger to the MAC’s where he placed 4th at 142 last year, finished 6th this year at 150. In his first match Gallagher, seeded 4th, pinned John Russo of Albright in 1:10. He lost in a close 3-1 match to 5th seed Shane Rippy of Messiah. Gallagher breezed through the consolation brackets, defeating James Gill of Scranton in 3:10 and defeated 8th seed Randy Swank of Kings by a 12-7 decision.

In the consolation semifinals, Gallagher lost to eventual 3rd place winner Delaware Valley’s Michael Reichard 3-8. In the match to determine 5th place, Gallagher lost to Steven Hayes of Lycoming in a close 4-5 match.

Brian Edens, who has a 11-2-1 record at 190, dropped to 177 for MAC’s. Seeded 6th, Edens took 5th place. Edens pinned John Hopkins’ Tony Stratton in 1:34 to advance to the quarterfinals, where he lost to 3rd seed Tony Fabrl of Kings, who went on to the finals, in a close 3-5 decision. Edens reached the consolation semifinals by decisioning Aaron Crilly of Juniata 17-3 and Jason Bleech of Moravian 12-5. Edens lost to Delaware Valley’s Kurt Handel, who eventually took 4th place, 7-11. Edens took 5th place over Race Roth of Muhlenburg.

Coach Racich has every reason to be proud of his wrestlers. Most of them posted winning records and with fine performances from Klinedinst, Edens, Gallagher, and other underclassmen, he certainly can expect winning seasons in years to come. But for now, Racich gets to go to nationals with Flannery, one of the champions he created.

Derstine, Swimmers Strong at MACs

Jen Derstine swims her way into the record books and the Div. III Championships.

Bridget Cauley also earned a gold medal in the 400-yard individual medley. Cauley’s time of 4:47.07 was less than .7 seconds off of the national qualifying time. The Lady Bears entered the day solidly in second place behind Gettysburg. The Ursinus men didn’t fare as well. The Bears’ Steve Grubb was fourth in the 200-yard freestyle and Mike Baganski was sixth in the 100-yard breaststroke. The Bears’ 200-yard freestyle relay team was third.

EDITORS’ NOTE: The MACs concluded on Sunday, but all of the final statistics were not available at time of print.

Lady Hoopsters Lose Tough One

BY KRISTEN BALDINI
Of The Grizzly

Ursinus’ Lady Bears travelled to Franklin and Marshall on February 25 to play their first MAC playoff game. The Bears kept the first half exciting, but a second-half surge by F&M left Ursinus disappointed. Despite the strong efforts of Ellen Coogrove (11 points) and Heather Colvin (10 points), F&M held the Bears to 44 points. The final score ended up 82-44. The Lady Bears are now looking forward to the ECAC Tournament. Good luck!
