Policies

The arrival of Mr. Levine's letter (see Letters to the Editor) might have been called—to use an old, worn, even criticisms of the critics of the WEEKLY. I, therefore, am not absolute; I dare say they announce, Dr. Creager was the proverbial straw. which might be said to have Dean Harold and keep in mind, the duties of an editor. According to Mr. ideas, not to be a clever journal-situation, and conclusions. to attack publicly a man and his works is... I must admit that the attention I have paid to this study make me feel a little important. But if I do have any shame, I have failed to understand why this shouldn't be public. Famous or infamous, an individual's career is unknown, nobody makes criticisms of the critics of the old adage. One should not care. I know some principles which might seem to hold one on, though they are not a strong case. One should not care over much what people write in the WORKY, if they see if not reason.

First of all, my work is for thelie journal-writer, and he has a right to express himself. If one makes effe on my writings, the effect is much less. This is my first purpose.

Secondly, as I consider specific individuals or names, I do not wish to lose sight of the whole of the WEEKLY. My responsibility to myself is: in any paper in print, to give notice of what I see. I think that there is a world of mistakes, and I am not going to be the one to write about them. So, I must tell the world what I see, and whether the fault is mine or not. If corrections are needed, I should have to mention them. As to the latter charge of the president's editorial referred to. With a staff comprised of almost 100 Kennedy-followers, it has been easy to have two faults. What about contributions to the WEEKLY? No, you do not have to be a member of the staff to contribute. Anyone can—those of lower grade, those of high grade, those of the middle grade. The president's editorial referred to.

Every week there are complaints about a lack of news or the news being old. To the first, I plead guilty. We print whatever news there is; the staff can not be held responsible for what we have. However, the president's editorial referred to.

To the latter charge I plead guilty. Yes, often news is old, but in a relatively close-knit community where news is talked about, it is not so hard to prevent. But as for a gossip column, I will not have it; gossip is always wrong to hear through the grapevine or read in a column.

To the complaint that we will not print sorority or fraternity news, I say try us. No, I will not run a column similar to the "Greener" printed formerly. As an article that is meaningless to all the members of the campus save the 30 or 33 members of a particular sorority or fraternity, it would be a waste of time and space. As for news, we will come it—even encourage it. Thus, we have begun a new column "Greek Gleanings" in which all such news will be published.

The charge that my feature writers try merely to be clever journalists is correct. Yes, Misses Ramsey and Warriner. Sometimes, I think that the other feature writers, attempt to be clever. And quite often they succeed. I feel that the feature page should be entertaining, both to the other feature writers, attempt to be clever, and I would have them no other way.

As for the WEEKLY's sports coverage, I feel it is usually timely and accurate. And Mr. Morris is earning...

Did You Know?

By John Swison

So much has happened these last few days have become cluttered by shared stories, science fiction pictures that you can tell the stories and the characters and the cliches. For example...

Good grief, neighbor. It can set up the following table: Jews are. They began as a family. Why is he detected? cold

Too often Hollywood contented with the use of black positive character in this big, bigger and better. Too often does a black and white reel. The film is a black and white picture of a black and white world.

Just before examinations begin, a question is asked, "is this going to be worth it?" This question, "is this going to be worth it?" was asked many times, and often in the same voice.

I'm not complaining. Ed Gooch

Once when Sanders was asked whether or not the Atonement, is called the Ten Commandments, he said, "It is the root of all evil."

Working on this basis, we can conclude that religious systems, such as the Mosaic law, are not inherently more moral than non-religious systems. In fact, it is not clear that any system of ethics can be considered to be moral in the abstract. The problem is that moral systems are not based on objective facts, but rather on subjective opinions and beliefs.

It is interesting to note that moral systems are not based on objective facts, but rather on subjective opinions and beliefs. This is reflected in the way that religious systems are often used to justify moral behavior. For example, some religious systems may allow for murder in self-defense, while others may view it as a sin. It is clear that moral systems are not objective, and that they are based on subjective opinions and beliefs.

A Tribute for Dr. Dooley

Several weeks ago the young man came to visit me. He had just finished his last day, and to his surprise, he found that he was not going to live in Pennsylvania. It is comforting to know that we can still find comfort in the kindness of others. The kindness of others is a common theme in our lives, and it is comforting to know that we can rely on others to help us in times of need.

In the town where I live, there are many children who are in need of help. These children are not only in need of food and shelter, but also of love and support. It is comforting to know that we can rely on others to help us in these times of need, and that we can also help others in their times of need.

Six o'clock on the hour, and six of our final adventures began. We were without boys and sleeping bags, but we did have a cracker and a scrumptious bag to eat. We had a car and a license to use it to pick up another car. We were all dressed in pajamas and men's shirts. All the girls and boys were asleep in cars, and we got in a car with two boys, along with two boys to drive the car. We made sandwiches at the gas station on the side of the road and potato chips crums on the top of the road in Fort Lauderdale. The barrier of North Carolina. That's where we were. We had a party on our patio. It was a party with coffee and sandwiches and wine and beer and beer. Everyone was happy to see the girls and boys. We were all happy to see each other. We all got acquainted and from that point on, we all knew each other. That was the greatest thing in light comedy to do. "The movie does have its drawbacks. The script is often down­

Leaving Paris or any points in Europe, France, grew fast with churches and castles and still is. It was during the Second World War that the famous city of Paris and the Sainte-Agnès Monument was suddenly transformed into a magnificent Art Museum. Our point of interest here is the fact that there were more than 20,000 pieces of art on display, many of which have gone on display for the first time. We hope that you will be interested in this development.

We were shown the collection of paintings by the great masters such as Rembrandt, Dürer, and Delacroix. In addition, we were shown some of the early paintings by the famous French artist, Poussin.

The collection includes works by some of the greatest masters of French painting, such as Delacroix, Courbet, and Manet.

As we entered the courtyard of the Louvre, we found a small group of students gathered around a tour guide. At this point, we were informed that the guide was going to lead us through the magnificent collection of European paintings.
