Richter to Leave Presidency

BY MARC ELLMAN
Co-Editor in Chief

After eighteen years as president, Richard P. Richter has asked the Board of Directors to begin the process of finding his successor. He told the Board that he will stay in office as long as it takes for them to name a new president. He pledged to continue to lead the College decisively for the duration of his tenure.

In an April 15 letter to William F. Heefner, President of the Board of Directors, Richter stated, "As the completion of my eighteenth year as president of the College looms, Margot and I have assessed our situation and reached some personal decisions. I feel that this is the time to notify the Board that I would like the process of finding and appointing my successor to begin."

"I am satisfied with the progress the College has made but mindful of the high goals on the horizon. By initiating a change in the presidency now, I believe that we can set up conditions that will carry the College forward with renewed vigor and new promise," said Richter.

Although made public only last Monday, Richter's plans have been in the making for quite a while. One of his first steps was the purchase of a house on 6th Avenue last August (since he would no longer live in Ursinus' President's house). He fully intends to continue to be a member of the Collegeville and Ursinus communities.

"Retirement is not a word that I am using. I'm not retiring. I'm open to whatever opportunities come along," stated Richter, who is 63 years old. He shows a strong loyalty to his alma

m a t e r .
"The Board may call on me to do anything after the change in office that, in its judgement, will help champion Ursinus College."

"I plan to work harder in these next few months than I probably have in the last 18 years," Richter stated at a press conference on Wednesday. He is currently working on three major projects which he intends to continue.

The first is the completion of the capital fund-raising program. The college is in the midst of a $39 million fund-raising campaign toward which $28.8 million has been raised. The campaign is scheduled for completion at the end of 1994.

The second is the beginning of work by a Strategic Study Group, authorized and led by the Board. The group will help new president, has retained Academic Search Consultation Services (ASCS) of Washington, D.C. ASCS provides comprehensive support in searches for chancellors, presidents, and chief academic officers, and has worked with over 300 institutions.

"Students will get plenty of involvement with the process," stated Richter in an interview with The Grizzly. ASCS will conduct campus visits to gather information about the character of the College and what sort of leader it requires to take it into the 21st century.

Additionally, Heefner, with the advice of ASCS, will appoint a presidential consisting of four board members, one non-faculty administrative staff member who does not report to the president, and one student. Three faculty members, elected by the faculty themselves, also will serve on the committee.

Richter's decision has nothing to do with the impending challenge of Ursinus' tax exempt status by the Perkiomen Valley school board.

"No one should think that this decision will do anything to affect our fight against PV," stated Richter. "The College is determined to fight the school board to the end. My plans in presidency are completely irrelevant. The Ursinus College Board of Directors is in charge of the tax fight against PV, not the President."

Richter stated that he feels the current time and conditions are very good for a strong transition. "There is no perfect time for this. But there is a right time, and this is it. It is right for the College and right for us personally."

"From this day forward, Ursinus will not be quite the same," Heefner said. "President Richter has molded, guided and defined this institution for the past 18 years. His leadership has developed and transformed this good and unique place into a quality institution increasingly recognized by its peers throughout the land. We must continue to take Ursinus from strength to strength. We must find a new leader to help us do that."

Richter said that he hopes the change could occur by next January. "I like to think that I'm 'driving' the college at 80 mph. I hope that a new president will take the wheel at 100 mph."

International :

- The United States has asked NATO to issue an ultimatum to Bosnian Serbs forcing them to cease attacks on Gorazde and withdraw their heavier weapons. U.S. officials say they expect the NATO alliance to issue the demand unless a diplomatic breakthrough is reached.

- Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the exiled President of Haiti, denounced the Clinton Administration saying its policy toward Haitian refugees was racist and was contributing to a holocaust there. Aristide is also criticizing Clinton for not taking necessary measures to restore him to power.

- The United Nations Security Council has announced another withdrawal of foreign troops, saying they will cut back the peacekeeping force in Rwanda from 1,700 to about 270. This comes after U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali stated he saw "no prospect of a cease-fire" there in the near future.

National :

- Former President Richard M. Nixon passed away last week, four days after suffering a devastating stroke. Due to Mr. Nixon's request in his living will, he received no extraordinary life support measures. Nixon's wife, Pat, died last June of lung cancer.

- Washington moved one step closer to a tougher crime bill as the House voted 285 to 141 for the policy. It would call for an extra $27.9 billion to be spent on things such as new prisons, new local police officers, crime prevention and drug treatment.

- After many unfulfilled promises in the past, astronomers now feel they can prove there is existence of other planets far beyond the solar system. New observations have convinced several scientists that a planetary system has been found about 1,500 light years away in the Virgo constellation.

Vandalism in Olin

BY HOPE RINEHIMER
Of the Grizzly

During the past two weeks numerous acts of vandalism occurred in Olin Hall causing security to change academic building hours. On April 14 a trash can on the first floor was set on fire. Less than a week later on April 21 another garbage can on the second floor was inflamed, and less than an hour later a third was torched on the third floor. These acts caused security to ask all students to leave the building, and now a new policy has been established concerning ALL academic buildings on campus.

The new policy states that all students must exit all academic buildings at the time of their closing. Nobody will be permitted to remain typing a paper, studying in a lab, etc. This includes Pfhaler, Thomas, Olin, Bomberger, Fetterolf, and Wismer. The only way that a student will be permitted on the premises after hours or on weekends is with the written approval of a professor. This authorization must include the student's name, the date, the specified room, and the signature of the professor.

These new rules will remain in effect either through finals or until a different decision is reached by the administration. All suggestions are welcome.

Economics
Conference Held at
UrsinusFROM COLLEGE
COMMUNICATIONS

The Fifth Annual Undergraduate Economics Conference was held at Ursinus College on Saturday, April 23, in Olin Hall. The conference highlighted presentations and discussion from students representing nine area colleges and universities. Serving as the keynote speaker was Ansis M. Helmanis, special counsel to the law firm of Barnes, Richardson, and Colburn in its Washington, D.C. offices.

This year's conference was divided into four sections: Micro I, chaired by Zora Pryor of St. Joseph's University; Micro II, chaired by David Shapiro of Penn State University; Micro III, chaired by Bernard F. Lentz, professor of economics and business administration at Ursinus College, and Macro I, chaired by Heather M. O'Neill, associate professor of economics and business administration at Ursinus College. Kevin Meitzler, a senior economics and business administration at Ursinus, served as student chairperson.

Schools with students participating in the conference were: Albright, Dickinson, Holy Family, Lebanon Valley, Penn State, St. Joseph's, Temple, Ursinus and Villanova.

Mr. Helmanis, this year's conference keynote speaker, spoke on "Health Care Reform: Wither the Debate." Helmanis specializes in food and drug law, with a primary focus on health-related regulatory developments in the United States and the European Union. His earlier public service includes positions as Regulatory Counsel to the Center for Drugs and Biologics, at the Food And Drug Administration in Washington, D.C., and as Legal Advisor to the United Nations International Narcotics Control Board in Vienna, Austria. Helmanis received his B.A. in government from Boston University and his J.D. from New England School of Law.

Richter: Then and Now

BY MARK LEISER
Co-Editor in Chief

Ursinus President Richard P. Richter announced he will relinquish his duties as president once a national search for a replacement has been completed. Richter has held the position for the past eighteen years.

Richter, 63, graduated from Ursinus with a B.A. in English in 1953. After completing his undergraduate work, he entered the United States Army, where he served one and a half years in the Heidelberg area of Germany. After returning home, he moved on to the University of Pennsylvania where he received an M.A. in English.

Richter then spent 8 years working in the Industrial Relations Department of Philadelphia Gas Works. While there, he was Supervisor of Employee Communications and Special Assistant to the General Manager. He ended his term with PGW in 1965, and returned to Ursinus.

He has held several other positions at the College besides president, including Alumni Secretary (1965-67), Assistant to the President (1967-69), Vice President for Administrative Affairs (1969-76), Instructor in English (1965-73), Assistant Professor of English (1973-Present) and Professor of the College (1988-Present).

Richter's professional activities include being on the National Council of Teachers of English, serving as chairman of the Commission for Independent Colleges and Universities of Pennsylvania, and being past chairman of the Delaware Valley Regional Planning Council for Higher Education.

He also has many corporate affiliations, including being a member of the Board of Directors of both Covenant Life Insurance Company and CenterCore, Inc.

Richter is also a very involved member of the community. He has served as President of the Pennsylvania Folklife Society, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission of the borough of Collegeville, and is active in both the Montgomery County Historical Society and the Trinity Reformed Church of Collegeville.

He has received several awards from local, national, and international organizations and institutions, such as the Gold Quill Award for outstanding industrial journalism, the Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Award for excellence in teaching, a Doctor of Humane Letters (Hon.) from Tohoku Gakuin University in Sendai, Japan, and most recently, the Marvin J. Lewis Citizenship Award, given by the Perkiomen Valley Chamber of Commerce.

Richter and his wife, Margot, currently reside in Collegeville. They have two children, Karen and Kurt.

S.T.A.R. Raising Awareness

BY VIDYA SETTY
Special to the Grizzly

On April 27, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in Olin 107, S.T.A.R. (Students and Teachers Against Rape) will hold a "Peer Education Program." A peer educator is someone who provides support for the survivors of sexual assault. A speaker from Victims Services Center in Norristown will be presenting information, statistics, commentary, as well as guidance to the campus about rape and how to deal with someone who has been sexually assaulted. A peer educator, in a sense, "educates" the community and his or her friends in such matters.

S.T.A.R. is planning in the near future to change its name in order to make it more inclusive of sexual assault in general and not just rape. People are often unaware that sexual assault includes much more than physical abuse but also verbal and mental. The officers this past year were: President, Kim Schaninger; Vice-President, Vidya Setty; Secretary, Ken Chen; Treasurer, Heidi McMichael. Next years officers are: President, Vidya Setty; Vice President, JoAnne Sickeri; Secretary, Angie Cole; Treasurer, Karen Tyson. The faculty advisors are Jen Shanahan, Dr. Oboler, and Ms. Murphy.

The goals of S.T.A.R. are to promote education and awareness about sexual assault (because it does occur everywhere, even in Collegeville) and to teach methods of prevention. S.T.A.R. will be instituting a program called RAD (Rape Aggressive Defense) that may be offered next semester. RAD is a program aimed toward teaching women how to protect themselves against assault. RAD will be taught by Ursinus security guard, Paul Smith.

Most importantly, S.T.A.R. offers support and counseling to survivors of sexual assault. A support group offering counseling sessions is being formed. It will be located off campus so that people will feel more comfortable using the facilities. These services will most likely be offered to the entire community.

There are about 27 member of S.T.A.R., including officers. It is receiving greater recognition by the school. Dean Lucas, Dean Kane, and security are becoming active in the working of S.T.A.R., although it is the students who are in charge.

In the meeting held Wednesday, S.T.A.R. elected officers and discussed both advertising the Peer Education Program and the formation of a Sexual Assault Policy which Ursinus currently does not have. Further plans include working with Dean Kane to form a program during freshman orientation to educate incoming students about sexual assault and how to prevent it. All are encouraged to become a part of S.T.A.R. and help promote awareness on campus. We need your help.

CAMPUS MEMO

BY RICHARD P. RICHTER
President of the College

In the wake of my decision to ask the Board of Directors to begin the search for my successor, I was surprised by the immediate question asked by many colleagues, friends, and reporters: "What are you going to do?"

My thoughts are focused on the months remaining in my service as president. While Margot and I have imagined alternative futures, we feel comfortable working our way through these next months and allowing the longer term to bring what it brings. I am telling those who ask that I am open to "creative opportunities" in the future and letting it go at that for now.

Meanwhile, the needs of Ursinus remain compelling; I intend to address them as aggressively and constructively as I can. Unlike just about everyone else in the College community, I will be free of the process of searching and finding the next president. While all of you engage actively or passively in that process, I will have the luxury of concentrating on three priorities.

--THE NEXT STEP CAMPAIGN: I will help raise as much money as possible toward the completion of The Next Step campaign. We have some high goals to meet by December, and I should be able to spend time and energy in pursuit of them.

The campaign has done remarkably well in stimulating sharp increases in the Annual Fund. These dollars go directly into the annual operating budget and help alleviate the narrow margin between our revenues and our expenditures.

The campaign also has succeeded in raising a large number of major gifts toward physical plant needs and toward endowments that will enrich our educational programs. But at the highest level of giving, we have not yet brought home all of the really large gifts needed to reach the $39 million goal. Together with key Board members, I will focus on these areas of the campaign.

--STRATEGIC STUDY GROUP: At its February meeting, the Board authorized the creation of a Strategic Study Group to open the way toward a deep-structured analysis of the narrowing margin between the revenues and expenses of the College. This is a systemic problem faced by most colleges and universities, and it requires a new way of thinking strategically about what colleges are doing and how they are doing it.

The Strategic Study Group will be made up of three Board members and chaired by one of them. It will include two faculty members and the president. During my remaining months as president, I expect to contribute to the group's analysis and set the stage for broad-based discussion on campus of the strategic priorities of the College. By the time a new president is in place, this process should have allowed the Board to identify some short-term principles for alleviating the financial tightness of the operation. It also should have begun to identify the longer-term changes that will need to be embraced by the whole College community to assure Ursinus's vitality in the years ahead.

William F. Heefner, president of the Board of Directors, has made it clear that he expects the work of the Strategic Study Group to go on apace even as the presidential search committee does its work through the summer and fall.

--COLLEGE OPERATION: I promised Mr. Heefner that I would work as hard as ever in the management of the College during my remaining months in office. No one should think that I will be coasting to the end of my tenure. A college needs someone to make decisions, and I intend to make them until the day I cease to be president. This is particularly important in the challenging, competitive environment within which Ursinus must operate today. We must maintain the momentum of the enterprise. I will do all I can to assure that.

President Richter's column appears weekly.

A Necessary Tension: Greeks and Administration

BY THOMAS EPLER
Opinions Editor

Many young people need the campus experience to function as a buffer—between childhood dependency and the anticipation of self-sufficiency in their adult lives. Ursinus College balances regulating childish behaviors with permitting adult freedoms, and the most evident manifestation of this balance is the tension between the college's administration and its social Greek organizations. This tension is good, and ensures ongoing debate, a vital and active form of learning. Examining both perspectives is vital to understanding the debate over the students' freedom to run these organizations.

The administration's prime concerns involve student safety and stable academic performance. Its proven assertion is that rigorous pledging jeopardizes both of those goals. As the legislators and executors of school policy, administrators are constantly working toward decreasing the detrimental effects of pledging. Teachers witness pledges' exhaustion, inability to concentrate and participate, and tasteless costuming within their classrooms. Out-of-class assignments often become incomplete or lacking, as nights are spent performing various initiation rites. Evaluations indicate poorer performance, and in turn, the administration is presented with poorer indications of student performance. Lower achievement in the existing student body hampers the administrative effort to recruit academically concerned students. On the other hand, Greek organizations profess to exist on the principles of unity, loyalty, and tradition, and changing their pledging practices may sacrifice one or all of those institutions. These organizations are made up of students learning the values of freedom, and the members are interested in exercising the freedom that is being taught to them. Each side seems to be vindicated by a moral absolute, and that is why issues concerning policy change often stall.

A critical point of contention between the camps is the enforcement of an alcohol policy. The administration can suffer serious consequences from law enforcement agencies if it is found to be negligent in preventing alcohol-related incidents, and it is also accountable to the parents who, many times, sacrifice in order to send their children here. The administration must see to it that the integrity of the campus community is retained, and points to a proven link between alcohol and "incidents" such as illness, loss of judgment, and violence. Greek organizations, however, have traditionally argued for a policy that allows for "trial and error" that will develop a personal responsibility. Further, they theorize that harsh policies will only incite rebellion, that alcohol consumption is "inevitable," and that the possibility of students leaving the campus to do their drinking (and driving home) ultimately rests on the administration. Again, each side seems to be supported by a concern over student welfare, and that makes the debate an ongoing one.

This argument is important, because as long as two sides on the issues are being voiced, one perspective will not control the events and policy of campus life. The purpose of debate is to reach an educated goal—compromise. And even if a satisfactory medium is never struck between the two, students involved in the effort to protect their viewpoint will become prepared for that need later in their lives. Several years ago, Greek alumni threatened to cut off financial support of the school if the administration banned pledging from the campus. Many years ago, when kegs and open containers were a way of life on campus, the administration successfully effected a ban on both. Each side can wield this kind of power in the debate over Greek activity. Negotiative mechanisms help to work out these tensions. A current effort to reform pledging is being founded on the recommendations of a council consisting of Greek students, independent students, faculty, and administration. Each group is preparing its perspective to influence the course of pledging reformation; effectively, these recommendations are position statements on the value of a Greek experience at the Ursinus campus, and begin discussions about where safety ends and freedom begins. Like the two-party system of the United States government, both sides check on and ultimately balance each other. The working-world buffer that is Ursinus will continue to balance the interests of administrative concerns about safety and Greek concerns over administrative interference.

This tension is good, and ensures debate, and active and vital form of learning.

Good Luck on Finals!

It's Alive, It's Alive

BY GAYLEN GAWLOWSKI
Of The Grizzly

For quite some time now, the Pre-legal Society has been seemingly non-existent. Lack of interest and participation have caused the untimely death of what could be one of Ursinus' most fulfilling clubs. In recent years, a small group of students and faculty members have attempted to breathe some life into the Pre-legal Society. In order to revive any hint of potential, interested students must come forward to participate.

If you are interested in a career in law, you must attend an important meeting in Wismer Parents' Lounge on April 27 at 6:00 p.m. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the Law School Admissions Test, as well as make plans for next year's Pre-legal Society. Your input is needed to decide on speakers, law school visits, and other areas of interest.

Fitness Forum

BY ELAINE ZELLEY
Of The Grizzly

We're quickly approaching the home stretch as the semester winds down to a close, and the pressure is on. With books to read, papers to write and exams to study for, who has time to exercise?

When burning the midnight oil during finals, we may not have the time or the energy to maintain our fitness schedule. However, it is especially important at this time, in particular, that we not completely abandon all exercise. This is because exercise is one of the best and most natural forms of stress relief. So as the stress builds when you think about all the work you still have left to do, working out can help relieve this tension.

Walking is one easy and effective way to maintain your fitness level during these hectic two weeks. Walking several hours each week is enough to provide health benefits and to reduce anxiety and stress.

Researchers at the Cooper Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas recently discovered that subjects who walked at a pace of 12-minutes-per-mile showed the same improvement in cardiovascular benefits as did subjects jogging at a pace of nine-minutes-per-mile.

Additionally, while the walking subjects receive the same fitness benefits as the joggers, the walkers are at a lower risk of musculoskeletal injury. Unlike jogging, for example, which is notoriously damaging to the joints, walking is a safer alternative.

How does this walking stuff help when you don't have time to exercise, you ask? Stanford University researchers found that three 10-minute walks spread out during the day can result in the same fitness benefits as a continuous 30-minute walk. So as you study in the library, take a 10 or 15-minute brisk walk every few hours as a study break.

Even though you may not have the time to do a 30-minute or hour workout, these shorter sessions can provide fitness benefits as well as needed stress relief.

Moshing, Bodysurfing, and The Gin Blossoms

BY JENNIFER DIAMOND
Of The Grizzly

ALBRIGHT COLLEGE - On Wednesday, April 20 Spring Fever Weekend at Albright was kicked off by the Gin Blossoms who, after tough negotiations, agreed to appear at the college for one night only. The concert was held in Bollman Center, the college's gymnasium, and began at 9 P.M. as the Screamin' Cheetah Wheelies took the stage to warm up the crowd.

At this time, Bollman was fairly full, but would not be packed until later when the Gin Blossoms would take the stage.

The crowd was comprised of an interesting mix of people, both young and old. I could tell by the two 40 year-old men wearing the leather jackets, flannel shirts and black combat boots who were standing in front of me and by the girl with a tattoo on her cheek, pigtails and bell-bottoms who was next to me, that I was among a diverse group of individuals, literally from all walks of life. I stood casually in my Levi's and floral print bodysuit wondering what these people were thinking of me.

Nonetheless, all differences were set aside for a night as we waited in anticipation of the show.

The Screamin' Cheetah Wheelies did a decent job of warming the crowd-especially considering most people there had never heard of them before. Although the band was just a little out of it, they seemed to be having a good time on stage. The crowd gave the Wheelies a chance and by the end of their set, everyone was beginning to get into it.

When the Gin Blossoms took the stage around 10 P.M., the crowd went crazy. The energy level of the people picked right up and everyone was on their feet. As the music began, a mosh pit formed before my very eyes. Dozens of enthusiastic and slightly inebriated individuals slammed continuously into one another to the beat of the throbbing music. I was terrified. Well, maybe not terrified, but there were moments when I truly feared for my life. Luckily, I was standing on the bleachers, just before the floor and was protected by a wall of AXP brothers. The moshers began to wear down and I was just beginning to feel safe when I witnessed another new concert trend - body surfing.

People were being picked up and passed (the lighter ones were tossed), above the crowd. If they were lucky, they were dropped before they reached the pit by the stage, but those who made it to the front were either dropped in the pit, crushing the unsuspecting people in the front row, or they were met by very large security people who grabbed them and whisked them to the side and out of the way. Whatever happened to beach balls?

The concert was almost as much fun as watching the crowd.

As for the band, they were great! Now, I enjoy the Gin Blossoms' music, but I only know the words to their two hits, "Hey Jealousy," and "Found Out About You." Nevertheless, I had a great time dancing and watching them play.

Moshing and bodysurfing weren't the only new things I witnessed at the concert. There was one other aspect of the show that I thought was really cool.

The lead vocalist brought a Polaroid camera and ran around the stage taking pictures of himself and other band members and threw them into the crowd.

I thought this was a great idea because not only does it give a few people mementos of the night, but it proves that this band from Arizona is made up of a bunch of really cool and down to earth guys.

When a band or an artist personalizes the show in some way, it enables the crowd to get to know them a little better than they could if they just came out, played, and left. I felt that because they let a little of their personality show through, they were all the more likeable as people rather than as celebrities.

The craziness of the concert was the perfect start for Albright's Spring Fever '94 which began on Wednesday and continued throughout the weekend.

 Movie Mania *****

BY COLIN TUCKER
Arts and Entertainment Editor

If you want to take a break from studying for those finals, go check out these movies in Wismer...

The Program-(Fri. 4/29, 8pm; Sun. 5/1, 8pm) This movie basically shows you the ugly side of top ten college football, taking place at the fictional Eastern State University. This realistic movie begins with the recruiting process, and takes you through the season. Many problems are encountered along the way such as steroid use, drunk driving, fighting, grades of the players (which the team always manages to get around), and, of course, the injuries. It focuses on some characters, such as the quarterback who likes to live on the edge, a freshman runningback who is being introduced to the program, and the head coach (James Caan), who has to motivate the team while having to deal with all the problems that arise. This movie is disturbingly realistic, with scenes such as a member of the team struggling with his history tutor, then perfectly identifying patterns out of the playbook, and another scene in which a player says "School means nothing. All you need to know is how to sign an NFL contract." There was even a scene cut from the movie not long after it was released in which the players laid on the yellow line in the middle of the road as the cars drove by to prove they had no fear. This was cut after a bunch of nincompoops in Northwestern Pennsylvania actually tried it and got flattened. The gridiron action is top-notch in this movie, using such techniques as the "helmet cam" when you see the game from the player's point of view. The acting is good, especially from James Caan. This is a good movie because it realistically shows how even some of the best college football programs have major problems, and has some great action sequences out on the "battlefield." Rating- 7 (Good)

Look Who's Talking (Sat. 4/30, 3pm) Kirstie Alley's character has a baby. Bruce Willis is the voice of the baby, making many wisecracks throughout the movie. Alley's character meets a taxi driver played by John Travolta. The baby has many things to say as Alley's character tries to find a "daddy" for Mikey, and Travolta's character is the baby-sitter. Frankly, I don't see the point of this movie. I guess we are supposed to think this is all cute. I thought that most of the "baby's" humor was crass and tasteless. If this baby actually has these thoughts, I would hate to see him when he grows up. Apparently many people did think this was cute, since this movie made a lot of money. However, this movie was not a total loss, because there were some funny jokes and lines, and the acting wasn't bad. Olympia Dukakis, who plays the mother of Alley's character, was especially entertaining. This movie was not the least bit cute to me, and was only somewhat funny. You'd be better off studying for finals on Saturday afternoon. Rating- 5 (So-so)

NBA PLAYOFF PREVIEW

Seattle Predicted Winner

BY BRAD GEIGER
Assistant Sports Editor

As the regular season comes to an end, the second (and most important) season gets underway as the NBA playoffs start up this week. A different flavor is upon us, for there is no #23 to carry destiny in his own hands. And when was the last time that the Lakers, Celtics, Sixers, and Pistons were all out of the playoffs, hoping for that one lucky ping-pong ball to show up in the lottery? I don't think it's ever happened before.

Looking at the teams who did make the playoffs, there is clearly no runaway favorite to win it all. Out in the West, Seattle has to be the favorite, for no other team is as deep or as talented as they are. A healthy Ricky Pierce is a must, for without him the Supersonics can struggle at times in their half-court set. They should not have much trouble getting by Denver in the first round, as the Nuggets are still a few years away from contending.

Houston is as well-balanced as anyone, with a strong inside game (Hakeem Olajuwon and the underrated Otis Thorpe) and strong three-point shooting (Vernon Maxwell, Kenny Smith, Scottie Brooks). Maxwell must remain focussed and stay out of trouble if this team wants to be playing in June. They swept Portland 4-0 in the regular season. Time to seriously rebuild Portland--head coach Rick Adelman may not be around much longer.

All year long, Phoenix has been saying the best record and home court advantage mean nothing (ex: last year vs. Chicago). We'll see if they can turn it on against Golden State, as this should be the best first-round matchup. Will rookie of the year Chris Webber slam it down on Sir Charles' head (anyone catch Webber's dunk on Barkley in the regular season?), or will Charles duplicate his MVP form of last year?

Utah handled San Antonio throughout the regular season, but like Portland, has watched the window of opportunity pass by. The Spurs will need a healthy Dale Ellis and his outside shooting to keep defenses from collapsing on the Admiral if they want to advance. This team still needs a point guard, as the combination of Vinny Del Negro, Negele Knight, and Sleepy Floyd cannot lead a team to the Finals.

In the East, Atlanta is the #1 seed and owns home court advantage. Many people are still not believers in the Hawks, but Lenny Wilkins has this team playing as fine on defense as any other team in the league. The trade for Danny Manning has helped their half-court offense and is making Kevin Willis into an All-Star. Miami will need some explosive performances from Glen Rice if they want to advance. Realistically, Rony Seikaly is not 100% and this team doesn't have the chemistry to go anywhere--head coach Kevin Loughery may be out on the beach pretty soon.

After winning 15 games in a row, New York has gone on a late-season tailspin. They should get John Starks back for the playoffs and need his production along with some points from Charles Smith to take some of the load off of Ewing. Hubert Davis and Charles Oakley (who is quietly having his best season) must continue to excel.

The Knicks are praying that they won't have to face New Jersey, who has given them trouble all year long. Besides a 45-point outburst, Kenny Anderson has struggled with his shot the second half of the year, and Derrick Coleman's fourth-grade mental capacity doesn't show up for some games.

Rounding out the East, Chicago has played great all year, thanks to coach Phil Jackson and Scottie Pippen. But come playoff time, they will realize the greatness of Michael Jordan. In the regular season, you can replace Jordan (somewhat). Come game 7 of the Eastern Conference Finals, score tied, two minutes to play, they will all at once realize that Air Jordan is irreplaceable.

Shaq will try to prove that he belongs in the running for MVP, but this team lacks the power forward you need to match up against Oakley/Grant/Willis and is still too young. Indiana always plays great the second half of the season, only to lose in the first round and get another mediocre draft pick. Cleveland is too banged up to make any noise.

Prediction: Seattle over New York in six games. Pat Riley's coaching and their defense and experience will take them to the Finals, but their inability to score will catch up to them against Seattle.

CHUCK'S WAGON

BY CHARLIE WEINGROFF
Assistant Sports Editor

Before I get to the important stuff that I actually want to talk about, there is something that I need to address. Last week I referred to the Blue Jays' pitching staff as being "bearesque." Well, if any BULLheaded idiot(s) thought that I meant the Ursinus Bears, get a life. If you remember, the Bad News Bears did not have much pitching after that Amanda chick. Think before you speak next time. And a hardy congratulations to the team that is still on a roll. Keep up those clutch hits.

Now for that important stuff. Hi, my name is Paul O'Neill, but you can call me Babe Ruth. Maybe O'Neill should really be making that comment with the April he is having: .475 avg., 6HR, 19RBI. Until this guy returns to Earth, he is the best player in the game. Stats never lie. Speaking of the Yankees, they are indeed in the best division in baseball, the AL East. The top four teams, Boston, Toronto, Baltimore, and the Yanks, are a combined 44-22.

Staying in that AL, two Hall of Famers-to-be, Oakland P Dennis Eckersley and Cleveland 1B/DH Eddie Murray, are headed in different directions. Sloth Murray hit a HR from both sides of the plate for the 11th time, and just keeps knocking in runs. But if anyone's got a fork maybe you can stick in it the Eck because I think he's done. A sub-par Eck season and a brutal start means he will be pumping gas more often than he pumps his fist after saves in the near future.

Wednesday night-- John Smoltz-- "We will not lose two in a row all year." Sunday morning-- Braves are on a four-game losing streak. Hey John, leave the trash talking to me.

No amount of talking was going to keep Dodger Korean pitcher/sideshow Chan Ho Park in the majors. It may be sometime before he is back. Can someone say gimmick?

And now a question to Phil's pitcher Shawn Boskie: How much longer until you become the best pitcher in the National League?

There were two big defections by star linebackers in the NFL last week. Ken Norton Jr. went from Dallas to San Francisco and Seth Joyner left the Eagles for the Cardinals. I believe Joyner brings the list to 15 former Eagles that would be contributors this year that were not resigned. Oh, Boo Hoo. You don't see that problem with real teams like the Dolphins.

There simply aren't any Eagles left to ask a question to. Maybe that's why this draft is so important.

About that draft which includes only two blue-chippers, DL Dan Wilkinson and RB Marshall Faulk. Maybe only seven other players will come in and make an impact, and that makes this draft rather weak. Finally, show me a team that drafts Div. I-AA Alcorn St. LB John Thierry in the top 12, I'll show you a 6-10 team next January.

The NBA regular season ended on Sunday, but in the East, all of the matchups are not set yet. As of now, the Knicks will play the Nets. Yes, the Nets who have not shut up about taking four of five from the the Knicks during the season. Yes, those same Knicks who have SuperClown Anthony Mason on their roster. Mason, who was recently found to have an IQ of 4, bashed fellow foward Charles Smith's lack of skills earlier in the week. If the Knicks lose in the opening round because of internal strife and a poor finish, they should all be lined up, blindfolded and shot (like they did to the A-Team).

Now for a question to Sixers coach Fast Freddie Carter: It's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game, right?

The NHL playoffs are in full swing. The St. Louis Blues' Brett Hull claimed his team was ready for the playoffs. Down 3-0 to Dallas, they are toast, so I guess they weren't ready. How did San Jose win a game, you ask. I'll tell you how, the Wings' goalies are Flyers at heart. The Blackhawks scored two goals in the first 2 games of their series with Toronto. Felix Potvin is God.

Finally, I hope the Rangers can stay clear of cheap-shot artists as they roll through the playoffs. The Capitals are beating up on the Rangers' competition the Penguins, and it's only a matter of who from the West will play the Rangers for the Cup.

To the Flyers GM Russ Farwell: When the Florida Panthers draft Radek Bonk #1 and can't sign him, will you trade the whole team for him too?

Again UC freshman Jon Oliver shows his wits by knowing that Bobby Heenan traded The Missing Link and Adorable Adrian Adonis for the services of King Kong Bundy. Now this week's Michael Moorer/WWF Trivia Question of the Week: Name the two members of the Powers of Pain, and after they split up, who managed each one? I always tell it like it is, and the pleasure was all yours.

MEN'S TENNIS LOOKS FOR "STRONG" FINISH

BY SUE BOYER
Grizzly Sportswriter

The Ursinus men's tennis team has compiled a 3-9 record (3-6 in the regular season; 0-3 in Hilton Head pre-season) against sturdy competition upon entering the new Centennial Conference.

The Bears suffered three losses at the hands of powerful opponents Albright with a score of 3-5 and Gettysburg and Haverford with scores of 0-9.

However, of the four matches last week, they were able to manage a victory against Muhlenberg with a score of 5-4. This was due to the hard-fought victory earned by the combined doubles team of junior Frank Quigley and sophomore Matt Ciesinski which finished with a score of 6-3, 6-3.

Other winners included: senior Dave Washburn at first singles (6-0, 6-1); junior Frank Quigley at third singles (6-3, 6-0); sophomore Matt Ciesinski at fourth singles (6-2, 6-1); and sophomore Mike Gamble at fifth singles (6-3, 6-1).

The remaining matches feature tough opponents such as Dickinson, Widener, and Johns Hopkins. But the team hopes to end their season with a strong showing.

Well hey there, fans! Welcome to the penultimate (I love using big words) Haven--a cornucopia of sports opinion that ends the moment I step off of campus for the last time on May 15. So keep your arms, legs, and other appendages inside the vehicle at all times--here we go...

The Phillies can't even beat the lowly San Diego Padres. The only explanation I can think of is that maybe Darren Daulton and Co. have been partying it up with leftovers from the MTV Spring Break Jam in San Diego and are playing with a consistent hangover. After all, the Padres have some of the worst pitching in the league, which could possibly be set off by the fact that they have some solid hitters (Phil Plantier, Derek Bell, Bip Roberts).

But it's still inexcusable for the defending National League Champions to be losing games they need to win in order to compete. After all, Les Expos aren't going to simply lay down and die. And we all know about the Atlanta Braves...

The Flyers have quietly finished a pathetic season. If GM Russ Farwell doesn't go out and get some serious defensive help without disrupting the good young nucleus of offensive talent, he should be fired. 'Nuff said...

The Sixers are quietly finishing a pathetic season. If GM Jimmy Lynam doesn't go out and get some serious offensive and defensive help without disrupting the good young nucleus of Clarence Weatherspoon, he should be fired so he can go get a coaching job. Hey, this paragraph looks strangely like the last one--maybe we're experiencing technical difficulties...

Nope. We're good. It was just a case of two teams sucking at almost the same level in the same city in the same stadium. Their ineptitude is appalling. (Am I rolling with these big words or what?)

The Eagles had the draft on Sunday. Of course, I'm writing this early Sunday afternoon, so I have no way of knowing what's going down. But I'll tell you this--if they don't concentrate on shoring up the defensive and offensive lines, they're going to struggle to reach .500 again. Hopefully, new owner Jeffrey Lurie is taking a crash course in "How to Draft Well" from the Atlanta Braves or Montreal Expos organizations...

All in all, the Philly sports teams are looking kind of fahklempt recently. In next week's finale, the Haven will take a look at the most important people and events in Philly sports over the past four years (has it been that long?) and even prognosticate as to their future...

But before I bail, kudos to Tom Sim" kiss Me, You Fool", the first man to get last week's "Cheers" Trivia Answer: Norm was known as "Moonglow" Peterson in his high school days, when he was a star on the wrestling team. Congratulations also to Dick "Smoked" Salmon who came in a close second...

Here's this week's (and the last EVER!!!) C.H.O.C.R./ "Cheers" Trivia Question: Like Cheers, the Haven has a spinoff (Chuck's Wagon). Name the character who stars, and the inconsistencies in the new show's plot as pertaining to the Cheers plot. In other words, there are a few things about the new show that don't quite mesh with the old show. Name as many as possible (at least two to get your name in the Final Haven next week!).

As we close, I am reminded of the wise man who said: "Tis a far, far better thing I do/ than write a sports opinion column."

Harley David Rubin has been voted "Most Likely to Earn a Small Wage" by the 1994 graduating class of Ursinus College. He was also in the running for "Most Likely to Marry a Woman Named Big Bertha."
