"The Old Violin."

COLLEGEVILLE, PENNA., APRIL 3, 1862.

VOLUME XI.

WHOLE NUMBER, 592.

PROVIDENCE INDEPENDENT.

President in the Rights, Opposing Wrong.

THE OLD VIOLIN.

It was a legacy from the father who died before Reuben was ten years old. He could not have been more than four when his father died. Reuben resided with his uncle, the brother of his father, who was a quiet, kindly worth. The old man of the family, respected and loved by all. Reuben remained with him until his mother died before Reuben was ten years old. He was feeling his way in the world, trying to support himself, when his wife deserted him. He was left with a daughter, Sue, and a son, Reuben.

The daughter, Sue, was a sweet, gentle child, with eyes like violets, and a smile that could charm anyone. Reuben was fond of her, and would go to great lengths to please her. He would do anything for her, even if it meant giving up his own happiness. He loved her more than anything in the world.

The son, Reuben, was a good-natured boy, with a kind heart and a ready smile. He was always thinking of others, and would do anything to help them. He was a good student, and always worked hard to get good grades. He was a popular boy, and had many friends.

One day, Reuben was walking through the woods, when he saw a stranger approaching. The stranger was carrying a violin, and Reuben was immediately attracted by its beauty. He asked the stranger if he could play the violin, and the stranger agreed. Reuben was amazed by the sound of the violin, and he knew that he wanted to learn how to play it.

Reuben asked the stranger if he could have the violin, and the stranger agreed. Reuben was overjoyed, and he took the violin home with him. He played it every chance he got, and he soon became very skilled at playing it.

Reuben was a hardworking boy, and he worked very hard to support himself and his family. He would often go out and busk to earn money, playing the violin for passing cars and trains.

Reuben was a popular boy, and he had many friends. He was always ready to help them, and he was a very good friend. He was always there for them, no matter what happened.

Reuben was a very kind hearted boy, and he always thought of others. He would do anything to help them, even if it meant giving up his own happiness. He was a very good friend, and he was loved by all.
