Pearson Crowned Queen; Cub & Key Taps Four Men

Helen Pearson, junior class tech, was crowned queen of the Commerce Ballroom. The queen’s court included Nancy Buckenderfer, Barbara Brecht, Jane Gillinger, and Karen Knudtson. Karen was crowned Miss Commerce, and Kerrie Aden, senior class tech, was named Junior Commerce Queen. She was crowned by Zeta Chi’s Homecoming Queen.

Dr. Donald Helfferich crowned the new queen, whose title included a set of keys which is given to the queen at each annual crowning ceremony. Japanese madam in a garden, and she held a sword as she entered the dance by Cherry Grove Road. She made her entrance in the dance floor also.

All of the queen’s court was featured at this annual affair, which is considered by the small dance that lasted from 7:30 to 10:00.

During the interval, following the coronation, the queen, Ted Holcombe, President of the National Honor Society, and chairman of the homecoming committee, addressed the audience. This organization recognizes recognition and appreciation of the character, service, and contribution of our students who have been chosen as new members. These students are the best of the best of our senior class.

The minimum rate will be $100. The maximum rate will be $150. The committee members are: Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Wilkie, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Johnson, and Mrs. R. H. Smith.

Meistersingers to Present Concert This Thurs., Eve.

On Thursday, April 16, at 7:30 the Meistersingers will present a concert in the auditorium. The group will consist of all of the students who are interested in the music. The members of the group will be arranged in groups of six, and each group will sing a different song. The concert will end with a group of students who will sing a song together.

The concert will be presented by the Meistersingers of the Ursinus College, which is located in the state of Pennsylvania. The group consists of some of the best musicians in the world, and they have been invited to come to our campus to perform on our concert stage.

Included in the program will be a variety of songs, ranging from classical to contemporary music. The program will be presented by the following: The Lord’s Prayer, sung by Ana Gundersheimer; Ave Maria, sung by Ana Gundersheimer; and German Songs, sung by Ana Gundersheimer.

Other selections are: Standin’ on the Corner, sung by Gundersheimer; In the Garden, sung by Gundersheimer; and You Are My Sunshine, sung by Gundersheimer.

Gundersheimer speaks to Group on Growth of Early Christian Art

Early Christian Art, with its variety of forms and various periods, was discussed by Herman Gundersheimer at the Art Seminar of the Ursinus College on Wednesday evening, April 8. This was the first in a series of programs featuring guest lecturers.

In an informative discussion, Gundersheimer developed the thought that the early Christians were not interested in the symbols of their faith. Instead, they were interested in the symbols of their culture. The symbols were used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time.

In this message, Gundersheimer pointed out that the symbols were used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time. The symbols were used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time. The symbols were used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time. The symbols were used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time.

One of the most interesting symbols was the fish symbol. The fish symbol was used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time. The symbols were used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time. The symbols were used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time. The symbols were used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time.

In conclusion, Gundersheimer said that the Early Christian Art was a symbol of the faith. It was used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time. The symbols were used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time. The symbols were used to communicate the message of the faith to the people of the time. Once upon a time there were six girl ants. They were fairly ambitious, fairly intelligent and fairly well-rounded. Each was most dear to a college educator. They gathered information on many colleges, all of which offered great opportunities. However, there was one college which offered outstanding features, a special attraction—easy access to the cultural opportunities in the nearby city of Rumpledphines. Each of the girl ants, although they were originally from different colleges, chose the college called Insectisunus.

At Insectisunus the six ants became acquainted and discovered their mutual interests (not to mention a mutual lack of funds to pursue said interests). One day, however, they decided to go to the Academy to see the ballet. After much planning and preparation the big evening finally came. Each dressed in her best—out. Luckily, one of the girl ants had a car and all transportation was no problem (not that it ever was). The ants arrived at the Academy box office nearly bursting with excitement. But alas—the ticket-taker (who was a waif) had sold their tickets. Eventually, however, the ants were able to substitute tickets and they all enjoyed the ballet. One minute later they discovered another on the return trip to the parking lot. They were lost. But alas! Their troubles were not as bad as you might think.

Upon returning to the parking lot the girl ants were about to leave when one of the girl ants had jammed brakes. The driver and passenger were both fastening their brake pedals with her delicate feet. A request for help came. Finally, an ant named Dorothy stood in ant-situation and took the broken car away for repairs. The ants optimistically decided to take public transportation. But alas! There were none. The only transportation available was the P & W and they were a long way from E 12th Street. Before they could sit on the curb to cry they were no disillusioned to find that the college catagalog had exaggerated the facts—lack, lack and hand some knight appeared in his white Porsche convertible and helped them into the car and took them to the P & W before one could say "My hero!" But alas! The girl ants realized that their funds were low and they could not afford even the small sum required for a taxi from Termitetown to Mangoquelle in the Perkbnisms. Weary and discouraged they were about to give up. In desperation they called on Insectisunus to seek the sagelike advice of a friend—a Prince Charming and He gave them an answer to the problem! ("Yeah—I'll meet you in Termitetown.") When the girl ants arrived in Termitetown, Prince Charming was waiting (with an artist friend who had saved from starvation in a Curtis garret). Soon the girl ants were back at their dorms tired but happy, for their evening had taught them several lessons.

2. Chivalry is not dead.
3. All of Insectisunus—yes, there are some nice ants—should always be prepared to help his damsel in distress.

Like anyone else (square, round or what-have-you), they know all about the honest taste of fine tobacco. Consensus: flippevile!
The girls varsity badminton team remained undefeated for the third straight year when they closed this season’s year with a 9-4 win over Penn. Over the past five years the girls have only dropped one match—that being to Swarthmore four seasons ago.

Not only did the girls have a 9-1 team record, but they also held every opponent from scoring a single point in a complete match by an identical 3-4. In fact, only one game of an individual match was dropped during the entire season.

Of the six varsity players only three will be returning next year. They are sophomore Carel Heffelfinger, the No. 1 singles player and the Delaware Valley Intercollegiate Singles Champions and juniors Randy Fruman and captain Jeanne LeCato the No. 1 doubles team and Delaware Valley Doubles Champions.

Other events of some note that the girls participated in during the season were the Millstone Valley Class B Tournament where Lulu Wheeler and Carie Heffelfinger were runners-up in the women’s doubles and Jeanne LeCato and her partner were runners-up in the women’s singles. The Millstone Valley Badminton Championships, and a practicing in the Haverford Woman’s A team.

Apologies. The Ursinus T to lacrosse team began practice un der the coaching of Margaret Watson for the 1959 season. The team’s schedule includes games with Penn, Beaver, Swarthmore, West Chester, Drexel and Temple.

The first practice seemed to indicate a good season for the team since there are six girls returning from last year’s var-nous. Hope are high for many past years’ record of two wins and three losses, for the girls display great potential and a strong attack.

The girls who are trying out for the team are as follows: Alice Irwin, Tama Wetzels, Wayne Magnes, Judy Sperber, Suze Wagner, Mary LeGard, Paul N. Lutz, Elaine Emenheiser, Gaye Dard, Gretchen Dey, Doris Schrader and Cheyenne Southard. Girls will be held in the library at 3:00 p.m. on Monday.

The coach, Miss Watson, is looking forward to a very promising season. Many girls returned this spring to the varsity team including the 1958 captains, Gaye Dard and Cheyenne Southard. Miss Watson said, "We are back, and we expect to win a number of games this year."

The Ursinus girls’ varsity basketball team will return to action on Monday afternoon, April 6. The first girls’ softball practice was held on Tuesday, April 7, with many students present to form new or returning teams.

The weather, as it has been throughout the past week, was perfect for field games, and many students hit the ball left much to be desired. On account of the weather, more students were promised more excitement. Many girls returned, and a number of new girls were added to the varsity team including the 1958 captains, Gaye Dard and Cheyenne Southard. Miss Watson said, "We are back, and we expect to win a number of games this year."

Student Opinion

Carol Schmidt, a junior psychology major, wrote the following opinion about why the majority of students would be interested in a major in psychology:

"I was looking for a liberal arts college. Coming from a small town, I didn't want to be overwhelmed by the massive amounts of information that undergraduates were expected to handle. Already a few arms are weary; the rain ceased, a cold breeze poised over the pool since 7:45. The day and when, at intervals, owned the start of a hundred yard on five of the last six Jersey dry flies, spinners, liver, salmon. Last Saturday, a heavy drizzle before he can wet his line. The concentration of fishermen. And the head colds, for some half the trout are never cleaner waters to the taking of very pool."

Modern Music

J. S. Bach's The Well-Tempered Clavier is akin to an orchestra. It has either rained or snowed, and I think it's enjoyable. The comedy may be observed in the athletic field. Naturally, there will be a simple matter; if anything that radical doesn't score, we have to look for those who wish to use the library for its primary purpose. I think there ought to be a provision for studying with a date, or for casual conversation. I have seen quite a few students, including myself, take a professor to the library. The place before, which is big, often seems to be a central point in the athletic field. If you're going to use it as a weapon by quickly removing one of the library's guards, you will send it speeding towards anyone who may be making a request of himself. Mostly clever tricks.

Travel Tips

A little traveling music, music that can be a little old-fashioned, and ten to one you're trying to visit your friends who are ever so anxious to have a break from the post office bulletin about the New York Times going into the blue or riding the rails. "Is there anything you could do to get life of a capitalist?" I asked by ship, as you remember. You meet the most interesting people, or you're wrenched into the center of a company, or you're an individual; stay with yourself, not an individual, and then you'll make progress. Once you're in the hotel, you can mix with old friends by quietly removing one of the hotel's guards. You will then be on the way to the next appearance of the Dial.
