Airband Sets Its New Fundraising Record

by Laura Hergesell of the Grizzly

The 14th annual Airband was held last Friday night, sponsored by the Residence Life Office and resident assistants. Student co-chairs for the event were Faith Tate and Marie-Patrice Githens. The crowd was won over by the M.C.’s, Denise Velez and Casey Fosbenner, whose dance to “We are the World,” and impressions of Chris Farley kept the crowd laughing. Over 500 tickets were sold, and $8730, the highest amount ever raised by Airband, will benefit senior Brett Gwaltney and freshman James Fielder. The judges for the concert were Lisa Tremp-Barnes, Buddy Hannah, Lynda Manz, Dr. Andrew Price, Carla Rinde, Dr. Jeff Neslen, Adele Boyd, Dean Akin, Nicole Minardi and Gary Hodgson Sr. Ctd. p. 2 as “Airband.”

Women's Health Discussed in Merck Lecture

by Linda Tran
Special to The Grizzly

On March 24, chemist Dr. Diane Hauze and biologist Dr. Susan Fitzpatrick from Wyeth-Ayerst in Radnor, PA, presented a talk on “Recent Advances in Women’s Health Research”. This was the first lecture in a series of lectures partially funded by an award from the Merck Foundation to encourage collaborative research between the two departments.

Women’s health is an exciting area of medicine that was often neglected in the past, but now a great interest in the special health needs of women is becoming more prominent. Women’s health needs require determining healthy lifestyle changes as well as the development of new drugs to treat clinical disorders. The amount of clinical and basic research in academic and corporate communities has risen sharply.

The federal government has initiated the Women’s Health Initiative, a 10 year study to determine the effects of diet, vitamin supplements, and hormones on the health of post-menopausal women. This is the largest study ever done specifically on women.

Currently, the other areas of interest in women’s health include new tissue specific estrogens, hormone replacement therapy, osteoporosis and contraception. Research in these specific areas is interrelated with other disease targets such as stroke, cancer, and Alzheimer’s disease. Drug discovery research involves a collaborative effort of chemists, biologists, and pharmacologists.

Two specific projects currently underway in the Women’s Health Division of Wyeth-Ayerst Research involve estrogen biology and osteoporosis.

President of Belarus, and Russian President Boris Yeltsin signed a charter last week that, if ratified, would pave the way for a union between the neighboring republics. Liberals in the Russian cabinet however are not too keen on the economy. They are trying to push Yeltsin into proposing a “watered-down” version of the pact that will allow both countries to remain sovereign.

Red Cross officials have recently announced that North Korea is in imminent danger of famine. They said that kitchens are empty, children are weak, and cattle is being slaughtered to save grain. The United Nations World Food Program recently released a similar report in which it stated that it planned to double its $41 million aid appeal to North Korea. They believe that there will be “starvation on a massive scale.”

The Zairian Parliament voted to elect Etienne Tshisekedi as the country’s Prime Minister. Mobutu Sese Seko, Zaire’s ailing dictator is expected to approve the decision.

Pakistan’s Parliament unanimously eliminated a law that allowed the appointed president to dismiss elected Governments and appoint chiefs of the armed forces. The law, which has been in effect since 1985, was previously used to dismiss governments led by Mr. Sharif and Benazir Bhutto on charges of corruption and misusing. The current President Farooq Leghari approved the decision.

Over 153 cases of Hepatitis A have been reported by school-teachers and children in Michigan. Federal health officials believe the infection came from frozen strawberries imported from Mexico. It is believed that thousands of other children in AZ, CA, GA, IA, and TN could become infected if they don’t receive a gamma globulin shot to help prevent the liver ailment.

14 Ursinus students recently returned from a trip to New York for the 1997 Model United Nations Program. Model U.N. is a national program in which students from different colleges and universities represent the different countries of the United Nations. The competition, which lasted from Tuesday, March 25 through Saturday, March 29, was the culminating experience of Dr. Berry’s 1 credit Model U.N. course.

Throughout the semester, students researched the social and political views of the Kingdom of Jordan and then enacted upon them at the conference. The issues ranged from fishing and water rights, matters of International Criminal Court, the rights of women, international terrorism, and human rights. During the majority of the week, delegates from each country met in committee to discuss their assigned topics. The competition took place in the actual United Nations Building and the United Nations Model Nations Program. Model U.N. students from Berry’s 1 credit Model U.N. course.

Changes for Summer Classes

The traditional summer school program that has been offered at Ursinus for years will not be around this summer. This summer will offer a new series of nontraditional summer classes, which may involve travel or research prohibited by the fall and spring semesters' workload.

President Strausburger described the ideal summer courses, or education experiments, of this type as "a course that couldn't be done during the normal two semesters." By not offering standard summer classes, professors and students are allowed to do research and preparation over the summer rather than schedule classes year-round.

Author Lee Gutkind will give a reading from his work on Wed., April 9, at 7:30 pm in Olin Auditorium. Gutkind is the author of several books, including Many Sleepless Nights, an in-depth examination of organ transplants—the donors, the doctors, the recipients and their families. He is the editor of the prestigious journal CREATIVE NONFICTION.

Gutkind is one of the leading proponents of the emerging genre that encompasses the personal essay, memoir, immersion journalism, and many other types of nonfiction writing. There is a workshop at 2:50 the day of the reading in Olin 302. For more information contact Professor Volkmer, ext. 2355.

A Letter Of Thanks

To the College Community:

After almost ten years as part of the Ursinus family, it is very difficult to say good-bye. We arrived as newlyweds with no idea what our future would hold. The years seemed to fly by ... friendships blossomed, children were born, and roots were planted. I eventually overcame the “January jitters”—the fear that strikes the heart of most football coaches’ wives during firing/hiring season. Then the “Opportunity” reared its head, and the rest is recent history.

I would like to collectively thank all of our friends, colleagues and acquaintances within the Ursinus community for the many years of support and friendship. To the players, past and present, who were such great role models for our children. Thank you to Gary, Sean and Ben for being real-life heroes to Kyle, and always making time for him. I know my husband enjoyed absolutely every minute coaching the bright, enthusiastic players at Ursinus. Thank you to the parents for the endless support, win or lose. Thank you to the many students who touched our lives as friends, tutors and baby-sitters.

It is difficult to leave. While the warm weather beckons, and my Southern roots respond, a very significant part of home will always remain at Ursinus. Thanks for ten unforgettable years. GO BEARS!

Sincerely,
Jo Ellen Gilbert
Wife of former Ursinus football coach, Steve Gilbert

Faculty Member Remembered

To the College Community:

I would like to thank all of you who were so kind as to call me, e-mail me, and even send me “virtual flowers” via the Internet on the passing of my dear friend, Mick O’Brien.

I worked with Mick (not “for,” as he would always say) for nearly ten years in the Education Department. Mick was one of the finest, most sincere, sensitive, bright human beings that I was fortunate enough to have a bond with. In this life we are not always given the opportunity to share in another person’s life and have it mean so much. Mick was the kind of person you were always laughing with and learning from.

During the last six months his struggle to recover from his transplant surgery was like a roller coaster ride for his family and those who loved him. At Christmas it looked as though he was not going to pull through, but he fought back. Up until the week before his death he steadily progressed and that light at the end of the tunnel was becoming very bright. There was talk of moving him to a rehabilitation center and then his heart gave out and the struggle was more than his body could bear.

Those of you who knew Mick, but were unable to attend his memorial service, would have thoroughly enjoyed it...so would have Mick! It was so uplifting and truly befitting him. His best friend and his sister eulogized him in such a manner that it sounded as if Mick had penned it himself. Anyone that knew Mick O’Brien knew that the most important things in his life were his wife and three children. They are left with loving memories of a man that put his family second to none and himself always last on the list.

It is difficult for me when I am here on campus because there are so many memories of my friend, but even at home I expect to hear a knock on the door and Mick saying, “What are you doing? Let’s go have a cuppa.” I have lost a very dear friend and the world has lost an incredible human being. I only hope God did not break the mold when he created Mick O’Brien.

Thank you,
Sue Calvin

Make Your Own Girlfriend!

Late at night, in the labs of Thomas, you discover a way for creating a being from the finest attributes of others. Now you could create someone with the wisdom of Toni Morrison, the humor of Rosie O'Donnell, the warmth of Mother Theresa, the artistic skills of Georgia O'Keeffe, and the political strength of Sandra Day O'Connor. And of course the superficial qualities of beauty like anything in a skirt, but she should have a big breasts.

"She should be as close to any model as possible."
— Bob McGuckin, Freshman

"Wow, if you asked for the ideal man I would say just clone me. I'm 100% US steel, 100% sex appeal, I'm the sexiest man alive. But my perfect woman should have Trish's storytelling ability, should be as sweet as Taneille Smith, and should be as cute as Meg Ryan."

"She should have the personality of Anne Alleger."

by Teresa Green
of The Grizzly

On April 11th from 8-9:30 p.m., there will be an open house in Pfahler Hall observatory to view Comet Hale-Bopp. Demonstrations of CCD imaging of Hale-Bopp and other objects will be available. Anyone who brings a preformatted disk will be able to take home a digital image of the comet. Although the comet made its closest approach to earth a couple weeks ago, because of its competition with the full moon the best time to view the comet will be mid-to-late April. The comet is visible to the naked eye, but Dr. Nagy, associate professor of physics, said the use of telescopes will enhance the details of the comet.

April 12th is the backup date for the Open House if the weather does not cooperate. The viewing is free and open to the public.

What's Up In Wellness

by Tricia Murname
of The Grizzly

Before we know it, it will be time to pull off the layers of clothing and put on the bathing suit. For some people this is harder to do than taking an Anatomy exam. I know that it can be hard to slim down to fit into those suits, but if it is done the right way it can be easy, healthy, and fun.

The best way to get into the swing of things is to try and find other people that have the same goal. These people will become your support group. All of you will motivate one another and monitor the modifications that you make to your everyday behaviors.

The first modification that needs to be made is exercise. If you are not involved in a good cardiovascular program, start one. It really is not that hard. You don't even have to leave the campus. The intramural department offers a great aerobics program. This is a fun activity for anyone, and it is an easy way to lose weight. If aerobics is not your thing, our school also has a cardiovascular room complete with treadmills, bikes, stairmasters, and rowing machines.

Once you have started an exercise program the next step is to check your eating habits. Cutting calories is not the answer. You need to continue eating the right amount of calories that your body needs while making sure these calories are coming from the right sources. Eating from a balanced diet, three times a week is a good start. Also, only eat when you are hungry and eat your meals slowly.

These are just two strategies to get you started. They are the healthiest way to try starting a weight loss program. Don't be fooled by the quick-fix diets and weight loss supplements that are out on the market. Remember, nothing can replace hard work!
Another Look at the Ursinus Gymnastics Team

by Kerrie McKinney
of The Grizzly

Last weekend, I traveled, along with my teammates, to the Division III Nationals Gymnastics Championships, held at the University of Wisconsin, La-Crosse. Proudly, our team was the first in Ursinus history to qualify to the Championships. Due to the fact that "The Grizzly" article did not do our team justice, I felt it necessary to inform readers about this big event.

I get to write this article from the spectator's standpoint, due to my injured knees sustained at a meet prior to Nationals. Our team goal throughout the season was to qualify for the National Championships. We had nothing to lose entering the competition. I believe our goal for this meet was to do our best, enjoy the experience of the meet, and, most importantly, enjoy our last meet with our beloved seniors and co-captains, Jen Courtney and Carrie Luka.

Our team entered this competition ranked eighth and finished the competition eighth. But, in my eyes, the Ursinus Gymnastics Team triumphed. Junior, Megan Brown, kicked off the meet with a great floor routine and landed her with a smile. Her fellow classmate, Courtney Gilbert, performed a graceful floor routine and landed her difficult mount on the balance beam.

Their classmate Molly Jennings, who has been injured all season, continued to key up the floor music just right and helped us laugh throughout the entire evening. Sophomore Angela Mullen, also successfully competed all-around. Their classmate Najah Dippola-Brown, injured, cheered us on with her big smile and signature laugh. Our seniors, Jen and Carrie, topped off the night by doing a great job competing all-around and qualifying for the individual event finals the next day. I cannot forget our trainers, Scott Calbert and Sean Leahy, who were also such a part of this team. They held our injured bodies together throughout the year and kept us laughing throughout every meet.

Finally, our coach, Ray McMahon, captured the Coach of the Year award.

Throughout this five hour meet, the Ursinus Gymnastics Team showed the entire building what it means to be a team, representing our school with class and style unmatched by the seven other teams present. Hugs celebrated the great performances and comforted the tears of frustration. I believe our finest moment came upon us when both our seniors qualified for one final round of competition in their gymnastics careers. They competed the next day with power and grace, equaling four spectacular vaults to end their careers with a smile and a few tears, knowing what had become their playground for almost all of their lives will now be wonderful memories to reflect upon.

Ursinus College should be extremely proud of their 1996-97 gymnastics team for setting a new school record with our team score at Penn State and for qualifying for the first time to the National Championships. Congratulations to Jen and Carrie for all their great years at Ursinus and on their all-American honors. The team will miss you greatly in the years to come.

Jushchyshyn, also a junior, competed vault, bars, and beam with power and style. She ended her junior year, by successfully landing her difficult mount on beam with a smile. Allyson Smith, injured just before this championship, managed to crack a smile and cheered with all her might, despite the disappointment of not being able to compete. Freshman, Cindy Leahy, in her first Collegiate National Championships, competed all-around successfully. While fighting a shoulder injury and a severely bruised leg, freshman Sarah Lavigne made us proud with a performance on the balance beam.

It is almost real as fond of each other as their mothers are, and Lora is more interested in her career than being a mother. After months of struggling to find a job in the theater, Lora is catapulted into stardom. Twelve years later, Lora's daughter, Susie (Sandra Dee) is sixteen and sorely neglected by her mother, and finds companionship in her mother's love interest, Steve Archer (John Gavin).

Meanwhile, Annie has her own problems with her daughter, who is light enough to pass as white. However, living in a small town where everyone knows who she is makes it difficult for her in both the white and black communities. Eventually, Sara Jane runs away. When Annie finds her, Sarah Jane says: "I'm gonna pass as white mama!" Heartbroken, Annie grows ill and dies. Meanwhile, Lora tries to resolve her problems with her daughter. At Annie's elaborate funeral, Sarah Jane returns and begs for her mother's forgiveness.

One of the most interesting things about this movie is the controversy behind the scenes. When the script was being written many of the studio executives had a problem with Sarah Jane's lines. Originally she was supposed to say "I'm gonna marry white," but many felt that this phrase would hurt ticket sales so they changed it to "I'm gonna pass as white." Despite the phrasing, the film addresses important issues that still ring true today. Look for a cameo appearance from the Legendary Mahalia Jackson singing "Trouble of the World."

The Dangers of Halogen Lamps

The United States Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) in Washington, D.C., has announced a warning to consumers in July of 1996 about the use of dual fixtures resulting in 120 watts. The committee dissuades any future purchase of this type of lamp as a decision has not been made yet; however, if a student does own a halogen lamp, here are some safety tips to prevent possible problems:

• Never allow torchiere halogen lamps to be placed where the tubing could contact curtains or other cloth window treatments.
• Never leave a torchiere halogen lamp on when you leave the room or are not at home.
• Never drape clothes over a torchiere halogen lamp.
• For torchiere halogen lamps equipped with a dimmer switch, operate the lamp at a setting lower than the maximum whenever possible.
• Keep halogen torchiere lamps away from elevated beds like bunk beds where bedding may get too close to the tubing.

If you have any questions, comments, or concerns you can e-mail the Student Activities and Services committee at 'SASC'.

Junior Class Update

Why were the Limerick Bowling Lanes so full on the night of March 19th? They were so busy because about thirty members of the Junior Class participated in the first annual Class of 1998 Bowling Night. The strong performances of Ryan Bilheimer and Angela Lamb deserve particular attention, since both have been asked to join the Bowlers Tour. Even if you missed us in Limerick, it’s not too late to attend Junior Class activities! Look for a Pizza Party and the Class of 1998’s second annual Wing Bowl coming soon!

A PHILLY FAN

by Joel Schofer

Sports Editor

A lot of things happened these past two weeks since the latest edition of A Philly Fan. It snowed, then the next day it was 65 degrees outside. The Eagles had one starting quarterback, then the next day they had two. There was supposed to be a Groffy, then there wasn't one. The Phillies were calling Curt Schilling's agent a slob, then the next day they shook his hand. At Airband practice Omega Chi had the worst Airband act I've ever witnessed, then two days later they were awesome and won first place.

Hell, one day Kevin McGovern didn't have breasts, then the next day he did and was pressing them tightly against Tito in front of 700 people. All in all, it's been an eventful two weeks, which can mean only one thing. I need to put my shirt back on and get writing.

There were two big signings in Philadelphia this past week. The Eagles doubled their number of starting quarterbacks by resigning Rodney Peete, while the Phillies managed to lock up Curt Schilling at least until the year 2000.

Peete's signing means that there will be competition between Peete and Ty Detmer for next year's starting job, but that's not why I like the resigning of Peete. I like the resigning of Rodney Peete because he will never beat out a healthy Detmer, but he could admirably replace an unhealthy Detmer if the situation demanded it.

Head coach Ray Rhodes can say there will be competition until the senior class president hooks up, but there's no way in hell Peete is beating out Detmer. Detmer is too damn young, too damn talented, and knows the offense too damn well. Damn. Damn, damn, damn.

This leaves Peete as the second string quarterback, ready to step in and guide a very talented Eagles team toward the NFC East crown in the face of an injury to Detmer. He's a veteran, knows the offense, has been a starter before, and is just the kind of guy you want as your second string quarterback when your first stringer is Phil Mandato's size but isn't playing for Ursinus College.

When it comes to the Phillies' signing of ace pitcher Curt Schilling, you'd think I'd be ecstatic, but I'm not. It just doesn't make sense to me.

In reality, the guy is the most overpowering pitcher on the Phillies' staff, and has the potential to be one of the best in the major leagues, but the man just has not been healthy enough to pitch. I honestly see no problem with the Phillies' initial offer, which contained a clause that said Schilling had to pitch a certain number of innings every year for his contract to be guaranteed. Why should the Phillies pay someone to pitch if his health is preventing him from doing just that? They shouldn't.

But that's what is wrong with baseball. You've got the Phillies, who designed a contract that would force Schilling to pitch for his money and are trying to display a touch of financial sanity. Then, however, you always have some other team who's willing to go one step further. There's always someone who's willing to roll the dice on damaged goods and pay injury prone athletes more than they deserve.

Don't get me wrong, though. I love Curt Schilling the pitcher. He has got Cy Young potential, as his spring training and first start this season indicate, and really could be the ace the Phillies will eventually need. He has tremendous upside. Let us not forget about his downside, though, and the fact that this whole deal could blow up in the Phillies' face. If in two weeks or two months Mr. Schilling feels a twinge in his shoulder, line him up next to Darren Daulton and Lenny Dykstra and take a good look. You know what you'll see? Nothing. Fifteen million dollars of nothing.
