Hanging upon a Thread.

Among the numerous secrets employging the finest operators, and one of the most important of all is the knowing when to hang upon a thread. The operator who is sure of his hold, who knows that he is on the right track, and who does not let go his hold, until the thread is broken, is the one who will be the most successful. The operator who is not sure of his hold, who is afraid to let go his hold, and who is always anxious to let go, is the one who will be the most unsuccessful.

Tensions.

The tension of the thread is of great importance in the movement of the operator. The thread must be taut, but not so tight as to be broken. The operator must be able to feel the tension of the thread, and must be his own guide in his movement. The
tension of the thread, and must be able to control it. The operator must be able to feel the tension of the thread, and must be able to control it. The operator must be able to feel the tension of the thread, and must be able to control it.

In the case of the operator who is not sure of his hold, who is afraid to let go his hold, and who is always anxious to let go, the tension of the thread is not important. The operator must be able to feel the tension of the thread, and must be his own guide in his movement.

The operator must be able to feel the tension of the thread, and must be able to control it. The operator must be able to feel
control it.
COLEVILLE, NEBR. — Of the great number of valiant and noble Indian chiefs of the olden time, who, in the very face of the enemy's fire, led their brave warriors to victory, one of the most valiant was the great Chief, Tamanend.

Tamanend was the chief of the Mahican tribe. He was noted for his wisdom, his courage, and his love for his people. He was ever ready to give battle, and to do his duty to his country. He was a brave and valiant chief, and a true friend to his people.

He was a great warrior, and was always ready to go to battle, and to do his duty to his country. He was always ready to lead his people to victory, and to do his duty to his country. He was a brave and valiant chief, and a true friend to his people.
