Mrs. Richard J. Walsh, better known to most people as Pearl S. Buck, has died in her home in Hillsboro, West Virginia, at the age of 86. She is remembered for her开创性的 works which have translated into many languages. She has received several Nobel Prize and Pulitzer Prize nominations for her contributions to literature. She was also a prominent advocate for women's rights and educational opportunities for Chinese women.

To me, however, Mrs. Walsh is a great person not for the big things she has done, but for the small things she always has time to do and to speak about. Her book 'The Child That Never Grew' is one such example. It is a story about a child who was born with Down syndrome and how his parents, the unfortunate parents of retarded children, the professors, the students, and the general public were able to overcome their difficulties and learn to live with the child.

The fact that her books are translated into many languages shows Buck's broad appeal and her impact on the world. She returned to America and in 1957, she was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature. This made her the first American woman to win the award.

Handel's 'Messiah' Presented Dec. 8

The Music Organizations will present the annual performance of Handel's Messiah at Bomberger Chapel. This will be the sixteenth year that the production has been presented on campus, and this year Dean Smith will conduct the orchestra, composed of musicians from the Philadelphia Orchestra and members of the student body. The orchestra, accompanied by vocal soloists, the college choir and alumni will join together in presenting three major sections of the Messiah. The first portion is the Stabat Mater, the second is the conduct of the tenor soloists, and the third is the complete performance of the Messiah. This is an opportunity for students and the general public to appreciate this great musical work.

Calendar Policy Stated by Dr. Parsons at Meeting Wed.

On Wednesday evening, November 14, Dr. William T. Parsons, Dean of the College, spoke at a meeting of the Student Union Council. He addressed the issue of calendar policy and the importance of having a well-coordinated, well-planned calendar to ensure the smooth operation of the college. The forum opened with Dr. Parsons explaining the various committees explaining the details of the calendar, dates that are granted in the beginning of the year, the presidents and chairmen of all the campus organizations, the Satellite, the Student Union Council, the Resident Student Council, and the Social Calendar. The forum concluded with an open discussion where students could ask questions and express their opinions.

A Solution

One of the problems discussed at the meeting on the activities calendar last Wednesday evening was that of conflicting meetings of extra-curricular organizations. The group immediately following the evening meal is crowded with meetings that no one organization can claim to be governing at any given hour. Many of the members are going to be present. This situation naturally creates difficulties in scheduling extra-curricular activities as well as in planning the program of events for the week. The editor has been in touch with various groups and has scheduled meetings which are not on the calendar. Three being only four nights in which extra-curricular groups can meet. Monday through Thursday, the schedule obviously is quite crowded. If we agree that the existing situation is unsatisfactory, and that "emergency" meetings cannot be eliminated, then some solution is necessary.

This is what we suggest. We think it is obvious that some other time should be made available for the various extra-curricular activities. Since the time after dinner seems to be the most suitable, this should be made available for such purposes as scheduled on the calendar. "Emergency" meetings, which seem to be the cause of most of the conflict, could be reduced to some other time. This way after lunch is not suitable because classes meet at this time and it is impossible for student teachers, waiters and day students to attend.

The only other convenient time is the hour immediately preceding the evening meal. The advantages of a meeting between five and six include all the disadvantages inherent in a meeting near noon. The only disadvantage in this situation is that students are apt to forget about the meeting because of the lapse of time from its announcement at the noon meal. However, we believe that if a custom is established this disadvantage will soon disappear.

The problem is not yet solved, though, until we suggest a proper method for enforcing this proposed resolution. Obviously it is impossible for faculty members of the Committee on Student Activities to be in attendance at all these meetings. The very fact that the meetings in question are "emergency" meetings, however, mandates that they be published. Delinquent organizations could be dealt with fairly.

The editor would welcome correspondence concerning this problem, and would be glad to have it present its committee candidates for favorable action.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

I believe that the much too often talked about "scholastic" life of the student is being glamorized. The problem is not yet solved, though, until we suggest a proper method for enforcing this proposed resolution. Obviously it is impossible for faculty members of the Committee on Student Activities to be in attendance at all these meetings. The very fact that the meetings in question are "emergency" meetings, however, mandates that they be published. Delinquent organizations could be dealt with fairly.

Ursinus Debaters Place 4th of 24 In Successful College Tournament

On Saturday, November 10, in an all-day tournament, the Ursinus College debating team placed fourth in a competing field of 24 colleges which included the University of Pennsylvania, Princeton, Georgetown, Johns Hopkins. Penn took first place with 411 points; St. Joseph's, second; Dickinson, third; and Ursinus fourth with 326 points. We actually won as many debates as the winning team—six out of a possible eight—but the final selection of a winner is determined by a scoring system based on how easily teams beat opponents.

By Bob Smith and Dave Hubbard, the team which represented Ursinus, discussed the topic of "Fascinating to participate in; entertaining canape over the bed was discovered in Dr. Yost's attic."

The bringing up of one fraternal organization's house to be in the second act was another debate. The audience, after listening to the speakers, was left with the idea that the second act was the more entertaining. The third debate was a very interesting one, with the debaters taking sides on the topic of "In the context of the first argument, it is suggested that the curso of the debate may lead to an advantageous position for the team with the advantage of speaking last." The fourth debate was a very interesting one, with the debaters taking sides on the topic of "In the context of the first argument, it is suggested that the curso of the debate may lead to an advantageous position for the team with the advantage of speaking last." The fifth debate was a very interesting one, with the debaters taking sides on the topic of "In the context of the first argument, it is suggested that the curso of the debate may lead to an advantageous position for the team with the advantage of speaking last." The sixth debate was a very interesting one, with the debaters taking sides on the topic of "In the context of the first argument, it is suggested that the curso of the debate may lead to an advantageous position for the team with the advantage of speaking last." The seventh debate was a very interesting one, with the debaters taking sides on the topic of "In the context of the first argument, it is suggested that the curso of the debate may lead to an advantageous position for the team with the advantage of speaking last." The eighth debate was a very interesting one, with the debaters taking sides on the topic of "In the context of the first argument, it is suggested that the curso of the debate may lead to an advantageous position for the team with the advantage of speaking last."
