Student Crimes On College Campuses

Within this past semester, student-on-student crimes involving incidents of alleged sexual assaults have been occurring on campus. Necessary actions have been taken by the administration and the Judicial Board in reaction to these incidents, but these crimes are not anything new for the university realm.

An article for MSNBC, noted that "80% to 90% of campus crime is 'student-on-student.'" S. Daniel Carter, vice president of Security and Inc., said in this article that colleges have "unique" crime problems created by "large numbers of young people away from home for the first time, who are ill-equipped to deal with the challenges of vast quantities of alcohol and drugs available to them and to others who may be predators."

In relation to our own campus, Becky Pape, junior, noted, "The intensity of the situation in which these crimes happened tend to be increased. It is no longer the little thefts, crimes have turned to serious issues.

When looking at the incident that occurred during the evening of Friday, November 12th, Carter's statement does seem to be accurate. In this case, an Ursinus student was allegedly sexually assaulted by another Ursinus student on the bus ride home from a Pi Omega Delta dated party.

Deb Nolan, Dean of Students, said, the alleged sexual assault occurred on the bus between two intoxicated people.

In this incident, as Dean Nolan explained, the Montgomery County District Attorney is not involved since the alleged sexual assault did not happen in Collegeville. The

Biology Major Woes: Schedule Changes Leave Students Frustrated

Stephanie Restine

Editor-in-Chief

As Biology majors were selecting classes for the 2000 Spring Semester, many students were surprised to see the omission of Biology 426W-Molecular Biology from the course curriculum. As Molecular is a capstone course offered in the department, several students were extremely frustrated with this deletion and are currently working with the Biology Department to remedy this situation.

The furor concerning the Molecular Biology class has several different foundations. Because students are required to take "at least one writing-intensive (W) course" (Course Catalog 1999-2000), some biology majors were dependent on enrollment in Molecular in order to meet graduation requirements.

Other writing-intensive courses currently offered to the seniors during the 2000 Spring Semester include Bio 424W-Evolution, Bio 436W-Analysis of Development, and Bio 442W-Mammalogy. Unfortunately, due to overlaps and scheduling conflicts, some students are still encountering difficulties finding a way to get everything in.

Another basis for this frustration is that many students pursuing a career in a field relating

Weird News:

PITTSBURGH-After a break-in to a Pittsburgh house in August, the police were unable to find any fingerprints belonging to the thief, who got away with compact discs, a computer and a video camera. Of course, that is until police checked the foil wrappers of gum placed on a counter that the thief stole from the residents. One of those wrappers had the fingerprints of Christopher John Kelly, 39. Police matched the fingerprints of Kelly's to the August burglary. Kelly, is being held for trial in Pittsburgh City Court on charges including burglary, fleeing police, resisting arrest and receiving stolen property for this incident and, also, another attempted break-in.

Local News:

CHESTNUT HILL-Philadelphia Daily News columnist, W. Russell G. Byers, was fatally stabbed late Saturday night, December 4th, during a robbery attempt outside a Chestnut Hill convenience store. buy four pints of Haagen-Dazs ice cream. The couple had just left the store when a man emerged. The man ordered Byers to "give it up." Byers resisted, forcing the man away from the car. Police said the man then pulled out a knife and stabbed Byers once in the chest, near the heart. A suspect was arrested Monday morning, December 6th, for the murder. Javier Goode, 20, of the 7700 block of Stenton Avenue was arrested near his apartment.

National News:

FORT GIBSON, Oklahoma-A 7th-grader at Fort Gibson Middle School has been taken into custody after opening fire on a group of students Monday morning, December 6th. Four students were wounded and another has bumps and bruises. The injured were taken to hospitals in Tulsa and Muskogee, and none of the injuries appear to be life threatening. A 9mm handgun was recovered. Superintendent Steve Wimoth said that the incident appears to be a random act.

World News:

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa-A small aircraft crashed, killing all 10 people on board, into a hill Monday, December 6th, after the pilot reported engine failure shortly after takeoff. Police said the aircraft, carrying a pilot and nine passengers, was owned by a charter company and crashed shortly after taking off from the Rand Airport, 12 miles east of Johannesburg. The passengers, three men and six women, were en route to neighboring Namibia.

College News:

EVANSTON, Illinois (Northwestern University)-A Northwestern student who was attacked early Saturday morning, December 4th, while walking said he tried to call the Student Escort Service several times but could not reach a dispatcher. The student said that he tried to reach the escort service five times between 2:10 a.m. and 2:20 a.m., but received an electronic recording from the escort service each time, so he decided to walk home. The student said, "If I had (reached) the escort service, it wouldn't have happened. Jonathan Dudlak, the escort service's student coordinator, said the escort service only had one team, instead of the usually three teams, working Saturday morning. He said the service was understaffed and declined to comment any further.

Democratic Candidate for U.S. Senate Will Speak at Ursinus

Franceen Shaughnessy

News Editor

If you are considering becoming a politician after graduation or if you would just like to meet a candidate for the United States Senate from Pennsylvania, then here's your opportunity. Democratic candidate Bob Rovner will speak on December 8th at 7:30 p.m. in Bomberger Auditorium.

Rovner will be speaking about the aspects and dynamics of campaigning and strategies for successful public leadership. His own campaign for U.S. Senate emphasizes themes of education, charitable works, and social activism.

With nearly 30 years of legislative and civic experience, these campaigning and public leadership skills have proven beneficial to Rovner. His election to the State Senate in 1970 captured, for him, the title of Senator along with the recognition of being the youngest senator in Pennsylvania history. Rovner also held the position of delegate to the Democratic National conventions of 1972, 1976, and 1988.

Currently, Rovner serves on the Board of Trustees of Temple University but he has also served on the Board of Trustees at the Pennsylvania College of Podiatric Medicine for over 25 years.

Along with being a Board member for Temple University, Rovner works at the law firm of Rovner, Allen, Rovner & Zimmerman, in Philadelphia and Bucks County, as a senior partner. His general practice specializes in civil litigation, criminal defense, domestic relations, Social Security disability and worker's compensation.

Ursinus' Chapter of the College Democrats of America will be hosting the event. Established in October 1999, the Ursinus College Democrats of America are one chapter out of over 800 chapters at other colleges nationwide.

Founder and vice president Carlos Ciruelos, said: "This event is the first major application of our organization's mission to be an educational forum for both the campus and the community. Bob Rovner's arrival on campus will solidify our position as active leaders in the community, and bring outside political and social resources into our campus."

Politics professor, Dr. Steven Hood added: "I think Ursinus is the perfect place for a political candidate to speak because the level of political discussion on a college campus should be on a higher plane than any other place. At a college campus, students of politics should be able to ask questions in an atmosphere that is relatively uncluttered by partisan loyalties and popular slogans that can otherwise block serious discussion and debate."

President of Ursinus' Democrats of America, Jessica Steiner, stated, "I am hopeful that this will be a successful event that will encourage more students to become involved in the politics and the campus community as a whole.

AIDS Quilt Displayed in Helfferich Gym

Kelly Tessena
Staff Writer

Four sections of the Names Project's AIDS quilt were displayed in Helfferich Gym on Thursday, December 2nd. Each section contains eight panels, each of which was made by friends and family members to commemorate the life of a person who died from AIDS.

Each panel measures three feet by six feet, the size of a grave. The panels displayed the name, and often a photograph, of the deceased. The AIDS victims' dates of birth and death were also given. Many panels were decorated with pictures or items that represented something important to that victim, like teddy bears, ticket stubs from plays, and items of clothing or jewelry. The panels included short notes from family members and friends, telling the deceased person how much he or she is loved and missed.

For the people who created a panel for a friend or family member who died of AIDS, it is a very emotional experience. According to Jay Bonner, the Names Project's National Display Coordinator, most people have a hard time giving their panel up once it is complete. Often, they keep the panel for a few months after finishing it, because it reminds them of the friend or loved one they have lost.

Cleve Jones started the Names Project in 1986. The first display, in Washington, D.C. in 1987, contained 1,920 panels. The quilt has been growing steadily since then. The whole quilt now contains more than 40,000 panels, and has become too large to be displayed in its entirety. Currently, the AIDS quilt is housed in San Francisco, with some sections kept in different parts of the country. The Philadelphia chapter of the Names Project has sixteen sections that are displayed in various locations.

One major purpose of the Names Project is to heighten awareness of AIDS, which they did by showing a video chronicling the history of the AIDS quilt. According to the video, the recent advances in the treatment of the disease have caused some people to believe that the disease is no longer a serious problem. However, many people are still being infected, and there still no cure exists. The majority of the people who are being infected with AIDS now are between the ages of fourteen and twenty-four. Those who are involved with the Names Project believe that awareness is vital to stopping, or at least slowing, the spread of the disease. This idea was expressed on one of the quilt's panels, with the words "Silence = Death."

Student volunteers guarded this panel and the other panels of the AIDS quilt displayed in Helfferich Gym. These students were given the responsibility of making sure that those who came to view the quilt acted in a respectful manner.

assault occurred "around Pennsburgh" and the Upper Perkiomen Police Department, who have their own investigators for this type of case, are currently investigating. Dean Nolan added, "If problems arise or they find out that the incident did occur in another district then the case will be passed on to that district."

According to Dean Nolan, the alleged offender in the November 12th incident did withdraw from Ursinus on Friday, November 18th.

More information on this case will be reported in future issues of The Grizzly.

to molecular biology are presently unable to complete this phase of their education. Although some do not necessarily need this particular class to graduate, the interested students would value the knowledge that this course provides.

Taking a stand for the students was senior biology major Greg Weber. Already disconcerted by the abrupt, mid-summer cancellation of Bio449W-Immunology in the current semester, Weber emailed Dr. Peter Small, the Biology Department Chairperson, in attempts to allow the Molecular course to be held.

Commenting on his efforts, Weber stated, "Molecular is a course that is advertised in the course catalog, and we expect the class to be offered during the spring. The department is denying the students the education that is advertised in the catalog. That's false advertising. In the meantime, the biology staff is shorthanded, and the ones who really pay for it are the students."

The omission of Molecular Biology from the Spring course schedule was brought about as instructor Dr. Anthony Lobo is going on sabbatical in the upcoming semester. Dr. Lobo commented, "The situation this year, as happens with many courses from time to time, is that the usual instructor of the course is going on leave to do some serious science at the bench and some serious writing."

Due to Weber's active approach to the situation, Dr. Small has contacted all Biology majors and asked that those interested in enrolling in the Molecular Biology course express this interest in return. The Biology Department is also currently taking applications for professors willing to instruct the Molecular course.

"There is no move to eliminate the Molecular course from the curriculum or anything like that," remarked Professor Lobo, "That means that Molecular will be taught by someone else in the Spring 2000 semester, filling in until I get back. We are currently in the process of hiring someone to teach it, so it will be offered. The regrettable inconvenience at this point is that we don't know who that person is yet, and exactly what time of day the course will take place."

The outcome of the attempts to reestablish Molecular Biology as an option for this semester has not been remedied at this time. Weber prompts those interested Biology majors to get involved, asserting, "The students are the ones that run the school. It's time that everyone takes a stand."

A Week in the Life...

Lessons About College Life and the Real World

Dan Reimold

Features Editor

The routine began on Monday.

Awake and dreaming of sleep before the alarm went off, I dressed in the dark, stormed out the door, hurried through breakfast and sat transfixed and silent through four straight hours of lecture-style classes until freedom rang at the noontime hour.

Lunch at Zack's, an afternoon nap and a fruitless hour of channel surfing preceded the most dreaded, tortuous affair of the evening: studying.

Burdened by back-breaking textbook readings, mired knee-deep in mind-numbing analytical essays and up to my ears in the Spanish language, I was barely able to find a few free moments to scarf down dinner and kill time on the computer before I had to once again interrupt my fun, rattle my nerves and stir my patience with ever increasing amounts of homework.

Tuesday was more of the same.

Up and at 'em before eight am, I threw on whatever wasn't long overdue to be washed, patted down what little hair I had with my hands and ran by the full-length hallway mirror on my way out for a quick run-down. My bloodshot eyes told the story of yet another sleepless night and my wrinkled clothes were just screaming to be ironed.

Spanish in Olin, breakfast in Wismer and a mid-morning nap in my bed comprised the early part of my day and the latter took the form of phone calls home, essays started, television shows watched, laughed at and soon forgotten and a 2 am bedtime.

Wednesday was worse.

The alarm jolted me from peaceful slumber just before nine and for but a moment I had no idea where I was. I dressed in silence, incapable of speech, with my head hung low, my eyes wide shut and my brain shut down. I could scarcely convince myself to face the day and actually contribute in class.

My three morning courses were alike in style and length but completely dissimilar in content. One interpreted the history of our world. Another offered a comprehensive look at the workings of the political world. And the last attempted to answer that most fundamental question all freshman have at some point been asked to discern: What does it mean to be human?

I could truly care less and after an afternoon shower, shave and snack decided that the true meaning of my existence lay beneath the covers of my dorm room bed. After a short-lived nap, marathon video-game playing session and an hour of soulless web surfing, it was time to hit the books once again, reading, writing, memorizing, theorizing and philosophizing well into the night until a particularly difficult assignment delivered a knockout punch and rendered me unconscious until morning.

Thursday was too little, too late.

I barely awoke in time for my lone language class and snuck back into bed mere seconds after it was dismissed. Many a sleepless night had taken its toll and left me beyond tired, making it tough to compose and edit the body of yet another CIE paper. I also wrote a letter, went for a run round town, watched Must-See TV and worked well past the witching hour, completing countless scores of daily class assignments.

Friday came and went with little fanfare.

I awoke early with a headache, failed to find a remedy in four hours of classes and skipped lunch. I met a study-group in Myrin in mid-afternoon, satisfied a snack-attack at Zack's during the evening and later chilled with my crew until lights-out at 3 am.

The weekend was a blur.

On Saturday alone, I partied, ate, studied, slept, shot the breeze to death and shopped till I dropped into bed until noon the next day. I woke up Sunday morning and began to study, typing, summarizing and highlighting more than I thought humanly possible. Then I sat back, saw a movie, listened to CDs and spent three hours washing laundry. I phoned a friend, went for a walk, chatted online and stayed up late into the night finishing my four to five page CIE paper.

And the routine continued once and again on Monday morning...

"I can't believe how fast time flies up here." I said to my roommate the other day. "I remember sitting here just last Monday and now a whole week's gone by."

"Yeah, I know." He replied slowly. "We're always so sleep-deprived and swamped with work that time somehow slips by without us even noticing."

"I wonder if this is what the real world is like. I hope not, cause if it is then that would mean our whole life would pass us by. That would stink, wouldn't it? I waited for an answer from my roommate, but it never came."

He was too busy concentrating on his work to listen.

Omwake: The House of Ill Repute... At Least According to One Disgruntled Resident

Alyson Rider

Special to The Grizzly

Sometimes I wonder why it costs over $26,000 to attend Ursinus College.

It seems that for every little mark or dent made by immature individuals in residence halls, the entire student body gets charged for the repair work. There is just one request I have with this: If I'm going to pay for something to be fixed, it better get fixed.

This year my roommate and I moved into one of the Main Street houses named Omwake. We were expecting nice living conditions but soon found out our expectations were entirely too high.

The first thing we noticed on move-in day was an army of ants scurrying across the floor. How could a person want to live in such conditions? Are parents were completely and utterly unenthused about the situation.

The next thing we noticed was that we were given broken desks. They have cracks and scratches everywhere and require me to open one drawer first if I desire to open the other.

We then all noticed the many marks on the walls, indicating that they hadn't been painted all summer. This is the kind of stuff they say isn't there when you move in and charge you for at the end of the year. We noticed the same thing throughout the rest of the house. It seemed as if they didn't even bother to come into the house during the summer months.

Finally, we decided to check out the bathroom. This is the one thing that really ticked me off. When we went to put on the shower, a loud noise sounded but no water came out. The next thing we knew, a large amount of water had formed on the floor and was seeping into the ceiling of the kitchen downstairs.

The Omwake bathroom is also the type someone has at home. There are no corridors to provide privacy on the toilet. That is no big deal, but then how can you justifiably not have a lock? This could create an extremely sticky situation and make some people really uncomfortable.

My major problem about Omwake is that I have told my

R.A. about all the problems, who has done everything he can to tell the Physical Plant. Still not a soul has been sent over to eradicate any of our current gripes.

Doesn't anyone check out the rooms before the students move in? We pay $26,000 a year to attend this school, with a large chunk of that going into housing expenses. They have a whole three months to check and fix the campus. Ursinus isn't a big campus at all by most standards, so the work shouldn't be that hard to do.

Students at Ursinus work very hard and through our efforts have given UC the reputation of the one of the finest liberal arts schools in the nation. The least Ursinus can offer back to us is a decent place to live.

the restaurant name relies, Harpoon Louie's is basically a seafood restaurant and was decorated accordingly.

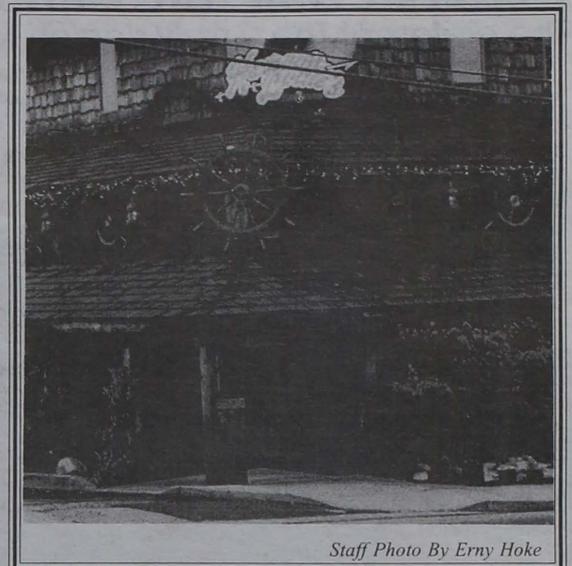

When glancing over the menu, there were a wide variety of choices for meals. The menu offered entrees such as chicken, fish, steak, and lobster. The price of these entrees varied, as did its selection, from $12 to $44.

Stephanie chose the Broiled Salmon, while I decided upon trying seafood for the very first time and chose the Surf 'N Turf.

Both of our meals were served with fresh garden salads served on plates shaped as fish. We were given plenty of time to enjoy our salads before the main entrees were to arrive. A candle was placed on our table just before the meals were to be served. At first I was not sure why, and thought it must be the "two-minute warning", but soon realized that it was to keep the butter melted for the lobster tail.

The entrees were served with a smile from our waitress Kay. Salmon and a baked potato for Stephanie, and a filet and lobster tail for I along with an elegant side of french fries.

The salmon was tender as it fell apart with each cut. And the steak, well it was definitely the best steak I have eaten in years, and cooked to medium well perfection. Stephanie also agreed on the taste of the steak, even though she did not care for it to be done that much. The moment of truth was soon about to take place. I was actually going to try lobster. To my surprise it was rather tasty as I dipped the lobster tail meat into the melted butter. Stephanie concluded on the taste, as she shared half of the lobster tail.

All in all, Harpoon Louie's supplied a romantic and tranquil atmosphere that pleased these two reviewers. We recommend this restaurant for first dates, but be prepared to dish out some money if you dare to taste the menu to the fullest.

Writers Welcome!
Come out for the Grizzly next semester. Look for meeting times in the Calendar.

Letters From the Editors: The editors of The Grizzly sign off for the semester

Thanks to everyone on the staff and in the campus community for a great semester! There's been a lot going on and around campus these past 16 weeks, and the eagerness of many of you to respond in these pages was better than it ever has been in my past three semesters here. To everyone who wrote an article or a response, thank you for taking the time to help make the paper all that it can be, your voice on important issues that concern how we live together here and beyond. I hope to see next semester continuing the trend of this section as an expanded forum for serious campus, national, and international issues. Thanks for reading, and thanks even more to the many of you who have responded this semester. To those that haven't, don't wait for someone else to do it for you. Opinion is power. Knowledge is power. The free expression of both is vital to the life of the liberal institution and the maintenance of the free world. Keep it coming. Happy Holidays.

-Chris Cocca

I feel blessed to have been given the opportunity to work alongside the few dedicated individuals who are responsible for the creation and publication of The Grizzly each week. To everyone on staff, especially to the five people I've grown closest with- Steph, Erny, Fran, Chris and Dr. E- thanks for making the "big" adjustment to college life a little easier and a lot less painful. I look forward to continuing my work on staff next semester and in the years to come. As a writer and editor, I will forever strive to present the news in the most accurate, informative and interesting manner possible.

-Dan Reimold

It's been some of the most challenging and rewarding few months personally for me. Meeting deadlines and scrambling for article gives one a great feeling of success and accomplishment. Reading your work and having people come up and compliment you on what you are doing is also incredibly satisfying. Good luck to the Sports Section, it will never be the same without me grin.

-Corey Braiterman

Well the semester is drawing to an end and so is my job as News Editor of The Grizzly. At times, this job was annoying but it did teach me some valuable life lessons. I've learned how to manage my time and how to print a news section with only two or three writers. Most importantly, though, my mind was opened up to different attitudes, personalities, and opinions. Throughout the semester, I worked with some really great editors and other's who rarely completed their sections by the deadline. I want to thank Dr. Edwards for all her help with my articles. She definitely helped me to improve my newspaper writing skills. Overall, I can say that I enjoyed writing and editing for The Grizzly. I would also like to add that, like anything you do in life, working for The Grizzly is a learning process. When you criticize the paper do it constructively, because maybe not everyone can be as perfect as you.

-Fran Shaughnessy

So, it's certainly been an interesting semester. I was a little nervous coming into the position of Co-EIC with Erny, but after burning the midnight oil a couple of times (alright all the time), I guess I got the hang of things. Erny has been absolutely great teaching me the ropes and sharing the responsibilities of the position. There have definitely been some rough times (i.e.-the toner trip to Staples at 7:02am after a "nap," the zebra scanner pictures, anytime I had to wax something small...) As a staff, we've had our share of problems as well, but we are hopefully on the road to remedying these situations. I'm looking forward to making even more improvements next semester with the new crew.

To the current staff members:

- Fran: Thank you for being my partner in crime as well as an extremely competent writing buddy.
- Dan: Although "everyone's friend Dan" took a lot of slack this semester, I continue to believe that you are a truly talented, while under-appreciated, journalist.
- Chris: You really surprised me this semester. I'm very impressed with your work and willingness to speak your mind.
- Cory: As a former sports editor, I can attest to the difficulties of your position. You definitely improved throughout the year, and your picks always made me laugh.
- Sue: I never really did understand how to take pictures of random people either. Thanks for contributing your photographic abilities.
- Andy Maynard: I just wanted you to know that the improvements that you made throughout the year did not go unnoticed.
- Nipun, Megan, "Ann," Jeff, Kelly, Tim, Ramsey, Sue, and the rest of the Grizzly writers: Thank you so much for contributing articles regularly. Even when computers went down or illness struck, you guys came through.
- Dr. Edwards: I would like to thank you for all your guidance with articles and staff decisions. You can switch around my articles any day.

-Stephanie Restine

I'd like to first begin by saying "thank-you" to the entire Grizzly staff for their hard work and dedication. It's a thankless job, but each one of you deserve credit in publishing a successful collegiate newspaper this semester. The Grizzly has been through a lot this semester, from allegations of censorship to being heavily understaffed. In the long run though, a successful paper was produced each week that you should be very proud of. In my four years here at Ursinus, The Grizzly has never printed 12+ pages each week on time, an accomplishment that is worth high praise. And this could not have been done without everyone's help, from the advisor, editors, photographers and writers.

And now a note to the respective sections:

--Fran: Congrats on a great News section. This semester was not an easy semester to do news, but you reported the facts efficiently and in good taste. Thanks.

--Dan: Being a freshman section editor is not common thing, but you excelled beyond my expectations and produced a successful section each week. You have also set a standard for those to follow in the future. Thanks.

--Chris: Excellent job on provoking thought in this year's opinions section. I don't think we've ever had this many Letters to the Editors. Congrats and Thanks, and keep up the great work!

--Corey: You added "life" to the editing staff. Your enthusiasm often ran wild with the rest of us. Thanks.

--Sue: Thanks for taking photos at some non-opportune times.

--Heather: Thanks for doing a great job with advertising.

--Stephanie: Thank-you and Good Luck! You have complimented my sometimes, 'psychotic' side very well. Your dedication to this paper is phenomenal as shown in those "all-nighters" we pulled on several occasions. (Including that memorable Staples run for toner at 6:30am) Good Luck in leading The Grizzly into the new millennium. I know it will be in great hands.

--Dr. Edwards: Thank-you for your guidance and knowledge over the last semester, and good luck in the years to come.

--Writers: Thank-you so much! We couldn't have done a paper without you. You know who you are, the few of you out there- your contributions were greatly appreciated.

As I end my year as Editor-In-Chief, I wish all of next semester's staff the best of luck, good luck on Finals, and a Happy Holiday Season.

-Erny Hoke

Letter to the Editors:

Dear Editors,

I applaud you in accepting the criticism given to you by my classmate Thomas Pomenti by printing his article in the recent November issue of the Grizzly. In light of the situation with Joe Pope and the declining quality of your paper during the past semester, I was pleasantly surprised to see you accept criticism rather than backing away from it.

A few weeks ago, the Grizzly's quote of the week was "Real Knowledge is to Know the Extent of One's Ignorance" (Confucius). Printing Tom's article showed that the Grizzly is aware of the criticism of many students in the Ursinus community. Therefore, you are no longer ignorant of the situation. It is now your responsibility, as editors, to take the next step toward real knowledge by making use of this criticism and improving your paper.

Sincerely,
Laura M. Phillips, Class of 2003

(Editor's note: The misspelling of "community" was not a mistake on the part of the staff. Thought you might find that interesting. -CC)

Singing Group Edges out Magician

Ursinus Talent Show Allows Students to Strut their Stuff

Stephanie Restine

Editor-In-Chief

On Thursday, December 3, UC students flocked to Wismer Lower Lounge to catch a glimpse of the talent that the college has to offer. From singing to guitar strumming to baton twirling, the annual Ursinus Talent Show was packed with entertainment for all.

Hosted by Mike Keeper and Roxanne Moore, this dynamic duo did their best to keep the show rolling throughout the preparation for each act. Cracking jokes about his love life and performing a stirring rendition of "In your Eyes," Keeper was a barrel of laughs complimented by Moore's 'straightman.'

Taking home the first place prize for this year's event was the sensational singing group composed of Ursinus students Eboni Woodard, Michael Adenike, and Melvin Allen along with Emmanuel Adenike, Lemar Davidson, and Tyrone Quilles. After Woodard introduced the group, the singers took to the stage and thoroughly impressed the judges with their abilities.

Senior first prize winner Melvin Allen commented, "The performance went really well. We were charged by the crowd. I think that our originality and a cappella singing style really impressed the judges. All of the acts in the talent show were really good."

Second prize winner freshman Chris Valenti wowed the audience with his magic show. The crowd went wild as Valenti levitated a paper rose and caused coins to fall right through glass.

"I thought the Talent Show went really well for putting it together at the last minute with very little rehearsal," remarked Valenti, "There were a lot of great singing and musical talents. It shows that Ursinus is more than just a bunch of Bio people."

Freshman Sherod Smallman was awarded third prize for his performance of "The Dream: the true story of Sherod Smallman." Smallman's combination of vocal skills, in-depth original lyrics, and stage presence were the keys to this award-winning performance.

The most original non-musical acts of the show included Keo Oura Kounlavong and Tami Smerlick's 'good versus evil' indoor guard show and the dramatic poetic ravings of "The Sea Captain" clad in a disturbing ski mask.

During the evening, many different musical talents were showcased. Beginning with an eerie rendition of a popular Creed song, Jim Turner unfurled his vocal talents accompanied by Shawn Levin on the guitar. Caitlin Sigler and Brian Sacks played guitar while sweetly singing "Secure Yourself" and the touching "Wedding Song."

The brother and sister duo of Jen and Evan Walton displayed the strong and clear vocal talents of the team as well as excellence on the acoustic guitar. Joining the forces of several local bands, Josh Adkinson, Shawn Witt, and Mike Smith skillfully combined the sounds of acoustic and electric guitars in two original pieces.

Breaking away from the more traditional musical acts, album, "Tom Howard and the Endless Highway of Media Whores," was another interesting addition to the musical performances of the evening.

Other musical acts included Ashish Seth's electric guitar performance of "Always with Me, Always with You," the duo Manini Mehta and Mike De Felice performing an original work, the acoustic guitar stylings of Mike Pachelli, Tim D'Andrea, and Travis Allred, and the vocal exhibition of Daneen Stamps.

Although running longer than planned, the Talent Show as a whole was a success. Magician Valenti concluded, "A lot of people came to support their classmates. The crowd got really into it. Hopefully, this sparks more people to come out reveal their hidden talents next year."

Ursinus College Choir Presents "Messiah"

Capacity Crowds at the 62nd Anniversary Performance

Stephanie Restine

Editor-In-Chief

Uplifted voices filled the air in Bomberger on Saturday and Sunday, December 4 and 5. The Ursinus College Choir presented Handel's "Messiah" before capacity crowds on both nights.

An annual event on the Ursinus campus, the "Messiah" production was conducted by veteran Dr. John French. The 1999 production marked the 21st year that French has conducted this piece and the 62nd performance of the "Messiah" at Ursinus College.

The Choir was led by four vocal soloists including soprano Edwina French, countertenor Robert O'Neil, tenor Kenneth Garner, and bass Reginald Pindell. The strength of Pindell and Garner was equally complimented by the blissful sounds of O'Neil and French.

Also accompanying the choral performers were David Furniss, organ continuo, and Mark Huxsoll on the trumpet.

The choir members demonstrated skillful harmony and vocal abilities. Excellent renditions of the "Hallelujah" chorus and final chorus roused the attentive audience.

The choir was rewarded with standing ovations on both nights for excellent performances. Senior Ethan Hartwig agreed, "I had an excellent time, and I thought it was very well done. This was the second time I had gone to see the performance; this time I brought my parents and my girlfriend with me as well."

Performing in the "Messiah" on both nights, junior soprano Allison Newkirk commented, "It was very exciting and invigorating to be in the choir and actually participate. It really gets you into holiday spirit. This was really hard work but well worth all the practice."

Sophomore soprano Christy Maurer concluded, "The audience really seemed to enjoy the performances. As a conductor, Dr. French is a great person and has a really wonderful ear for music. I look forward to performing again next year."

 John Malkovich.....John Malkovich
 Charlie SheenCharlie Sheen
 Directed by Spike Jonze
 Rated R Running Time: 112 min.

This is the most innovative film I have seen in years. Not does Being John Malkovich have a superb screenplay that asks deep questions about what-it-is-to-be-who-I-am, but also this film's director, Spike Jonze, strengthens and expands the medium of film.

Jonze shows us that film, through its visual movement and ability to draw and manipulate an audience, can delve into a human mind-he shows us what it is to be John Malkovich. He pummels us with manipulation after manipulation of characters on screen until we begin to reexamine our own influences-what constitutes our own self. Add Jonze's direction to a wonderfully witty, biting script and exemplary acting and we have one of the top ten films of the year so far.

Catherine Keener and Malkovich himself give great performances. Keener (8mm, Your Friends' and Neighbors) exploits the weaker characters but ultimately she shows us how hollow one is when one is so ruthless. Malkovich makes a microcosmic exploration of his self in his own acting, notably his facial quirks and mannerisms.

This extraordinarily well-made film attests to film's persistence and evolution. Being John Malkovich shows us that film does not wallow in mindless special effects and sensationalism-film is, and can do, so much more.

New Movie Reviews: Being John Malkovich The World Is Not Enough

The World Is Not Enough

Piers Brosnan007
 Sophie MarceauElektra King
 Robert CarlyleRenard
 Denise RichardsChristmas Jones
 Directed by Michael Apted
 Rated PG-13 Running Time: 127 min.

James Bond, gadgets, sexual innuendoes, guns, explosions, mind-bending stunts, and world-wide danger are resurrected again in this 19th Bond film. A few years ago I realized a good Bond movie is like celluloid candy. These films do not reveal profound truths about reality (as Bond regularly defies it) or human nature (as his character is a mixture between libidinous wit and a general disregard for just about everything evil). It surely does not preach an anti-violence message. But it is just great fun.

Writers for new James Bond films must think for long hours for some interesting ways the villain will die, or how Bond will get out of a sticky situation, or what new gadgets to come up with next. The World is Not Enough is full of this ludicrous eye-candy: a boat that can dive underwater or ride on the streets of London; helicopters that have razor-sharp shears; snowmobiles that descend from the sky. The villain, Renard, is of the classic Jaws-type mold-nearly impervious to pain from a bullet lodged in his brain.

Brosnan, Marceau, and Carlyle give solid, Bond-consistent performances. One question though-Denise Richards-a nuclear scientist? I'm surprised she didn't pronounce "nuclear" "nucular."

One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest (1975)

Jack Nicholson.....MacMurphy
 Louise FletcherNurse Ratchet
 Directed by Milos Foreman

The first time I watched this movie I was ten and so taken in by the magic of the story and the wonderfully eccentric characters that I was about to bust some people out of mental asylum just to see what they're like.

Cuckoo's Nest is the story of Nicholson, an insolent man confined in a mental asylum along with an entourage of pitiable, endearing inmates. It asks the cavernous questions such as: what constitutes insanity? What is the worth of happiness?

Nicholson continues to show why he is one of the greatest American actors-he can transfix attention with a gesture, a smile, a flick of a cigarette-so when he leads his humble band, we can only sit back and admire genius.

Women's Volleyball; The Year in Review and Their Run to the ECAC's

Jody Smith

Special to the Grizzly

For the first time in history, the Ursinus Women's Volleyball team qualified for the ECAC tournament at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh this year. Though not a total surprise, many of the team members had forgotten that Coach Cornish placed a bid for the tournament. They believed their season ended October 27 with a tough loss to Muhlenberg. But when the call came in Monday, November 6, the team found out they were seeded 3rd out of 6. They had only three days to practice.

The team left at 9am Friday morning for the five-hour trek to Pittsburgh. Ursinus would face-off against Montclair State (6th seed) who had a 16-14 record at the time. Ursinus came out on fire the first game, winning 15-7. But the celebrating couldn't last very long. The team still had two more games to win in order to move into the semi-finals. Unfortunately, that just wasn't to be. Montclair State started the second game fired up, winning easily 15-3. Montclair took the next two games as well, 15-5, 15-8, and won the match.

Junior Nikki DeMascio had the only double-double in the match, finishing with 11 kills and 16 digs. Becca Dickerson, one of the three seniors on the team this year, also had 16 digs along with 7 kills and 3 aces. Sophomore Katie Shearer finished with 11 kills and 1 solo block and senior Colleen Reasor had 5 kills and a solo block. Junior setter Jody Smith had 6 kills and 21 assists for the Bears, and sophomore setter Nicole DeBus had 5 kills and 18 assists.

Though the trip home was a long one, the team had nothing to be ashamed about. They had made history by just being there. But the ECAC tournament wasn't the only history made this season. Earlier in the year, the team took home the first place trophy at the Hood College Invitational, beating the host team Hood in the championship match. It was a first-ever championship claimed by the Bears, and one that no one on the team this year will ever forget. Senior Becca Dickerson commented on that win. "The Hood tournament was the perfect start for our season. We went and won the first tournament ever for Ursinus. After always finishing in the bottom I think that finishing first gave us the confidence to face the season in a positive way."

Indeed it did. The Bears continued their winning ways in the next tournament as well, winning the Bronze Division at the Allentown Tournament. But perhaps more memorable than trophy was the match against Neuman College. The Bears took Neuman to 5 grueling games that lasted over two and a-half hours. Although the Bears lost the match, 10-15, 16-14, 16-18, 16-14, 10-14, they won respect and acknowledgement from every team there, as well as teams in the Centennial Conference. "We had finally passed over the bump in the road that prevented us from looking like a team that people wouldn't give recognition to," said Dickerson.

In Centennial Conference play, the team also took a game from Gettysburg, 10-15, 2-15, 18-16, 3-15. Gettysburg went on to win the Centennial Conference and qualify for the NCAA tournament. Last year, the Bears also took one game from Gettysburg, which turned out to be their only Centennial Conference loss.

So what led the UC Volleyball team to their record breaking 16-win season? Assistant coach Dana DelleDonne contributes it to team unity. "The team unity that we had in the beginning with the win at Hood lasted right through to ECAC's," comments DelleDonne. "We knew that we needed to play as a team to get where we wanted to be," she adds. This unity was seen off the court as well. Directly after the celebrated win at Allentown, the team learned that Coach Cornish's father had passed away. The death took its toll on the team, who dropped a loss to undefeated F&M College that week. "We knew we didn't play our best that match," said Smith, "but at that point our thoughts were with Coach and her family. We made it through as a team, though, and came out even stronger." In fact, it was Coach Cornish's "team-together" cheer that would proceed every match the Bears played. It was a philosophy that the team carried through until the very end.

Another strength that factored into the team's successful season was the depth in the bench. Sophomore off-side hitters Eboni Woodard and Aki Watanuki often subbed in for the setters in the front row. They provided both key blocks and hits during crucial moments of the game. Freshman Shanel Green got playing time as both a middle blocker and outside hitter, also contributing at key moments in a game. Sophomore defensive specialist Rebecca Chilcoat and freshman defensive specialist Rebecca Outten took turns in the backrow. Both players saved countless balls from hitting the floor and kept rallies alive. DelleDonne also commented about the strength off the bench. "There was not one player that I can say that was selfish about anything. I commend every member of the team for their hard work this season."

That hard work also extends to the team trainers this season, Heather Goldberg and Roxanne Moore. For the most part, the team was spared any major injuries this year. But Heather and Roxanne were always there to tape ankles, wrists, and shins, provide towels, and make sure the team had plenty of water and ice during and after practices. Many thanks go out to them.

Although no one on the team would disagree about the teamwork that went into this season, there were some outstanding individuals who were recognized by the CC. Both DeBus and Smith finished in the top ten for assists, averaging 4.40 and 4.23 assists per game, respectively. DeMascio finished 3rd in the conference in digs, with 4.20 a game, and senior defensive specialist Erin Golembewski finished 8th with 3.86 digs per game. Shearer led the conference in blocks, averaging 1.05 per game and Reasor was 8th with .710. As a team, Ursinus finished first in digs per game with 2,220 overall, or 22.20 per game. DeBus, DeMascio, Dickerson, Reasor, Shearer, and Smith were all elected to the Centennial Conference Player of the Week Honor Roll at one point in the season as well.

As far as Ursinus milestones, both Golembewski and DeMascio hit the 1000 career dig mark, and Smith and DeBus each had over 400 assists. Dickerson hit the half-century mark in aces, and Shearer finished with 71 solo blocks.

The volleyball season has ended now. The net has been taken down and replaced by gymnastic equipment. The balls are stored away in the closet. The uniforms have been put away. Kneepads and sneakers have been taken home. But there remain on campus 12 volleyball players who will go down in the history books. Never again will there be a UC volleyball team who wins a first ever tournament. Nor will there be another team that qualifies for the ECAC tournament for the very first time. Perhaps in the future there will be better UC volleyball teams, who will have better players and more wins in a season. That's almost a definite. But never will there be a team exactly like the 1999 Ursinus College Women's Volleyball team. They truly are champions.

Wrestling Struggles in Tourney

Tim Noone

Staff Writer

This past weekend, the defending Centennial Conference wrestling champs struggled in a tournament they were thought to perform well in. In the Petrofes Invitational at Lebanon Valley College, the Ursinus College Bears placed eighteenth out of twenty teams. Some of the teams included rivals such as Muhlenberg, Gettysburg, and Western Maryland. Ursinus had two notable finishers in Pat Curry who placed fifth at 149 pounds, and Dan Swolini who placed eighth at 184. The Bears also had many of their wrestlers out due to an unknown medical problem. Junior Mike Seigel stated, "We need to forget about this weekend, we need to get healthy and look to our matches to come."

This was their third tournament of the season with the first two at Montclair State and the College of New Jersey. Ursinus continues their season on December 29 and 30 along with Gettysburg at the Florida College Duals.

It was one of those weeks where there were some results that just made your eyes pop out of your skull in disbelief. What in the world happened in Baltimore that made Tennessee/Houston lose its first divisional game in 13 attempts? Especially in a 41-14 shellacking at the hands of the 4-7 Ravens? What made teams like the Falcons, Giants and 49ers suddenly erupt offensively? The Giants scored the most points in four years! The Niners had 542 yards of offense, 472 in the air, scored 30 points... and lost?

Some kind of amazing things happened, and at least I can look back and say "I knew those stinking Niners were going to lose!" Then I look at some of the other scores, scratch my head and mutter unprintable words about parity in the NFL.

Browns at Bengals - Another meeting in the toilet bowl. I think the Bungles can actually put two in a row together over some of the worst teams in the NFL.

Panthers at Packers - In the Frozen Tundra? Green Bay should win by a touchdown at least.

Patriots at Colts - The Colts may just be the best team in the NFL. Bledsoe has been stinking it up lately with 11 interceptions in the last four games. I think that comparison says it all.

Giants at Bills - Holy smokes! The Giants are a well-oiled offensive machine! Now let's see if they can do it for two weeks in a row. As much I want them to smack the Bills around, I'll go with Flutie, Moulds and Co. to come out on top.

Eagles at Cowboys - Believe it or not, if this game was going to be at the Vet, I would pick the Birds to win it. Unfortunately, it's down in Texas, where the 'Boys haven't lost all year.

Ravens at Steelers - I still think the 41 against Tennessee was a fluke, but the Stelleres are mediocre enough that the Ravens might be able to put 2 in a row up in Pittsburgh.

Rams at Saints - When you lose to the Falcons as N.O. did this past Sunday, you must be really bad. Turns out Ricky Williams was injured, and if he's gone, don't look for them to win anything else. Then you look at the 351 yards and 3 TD's that Warner threw and you realize, the Saints weren't going to win WITH Ricky playing, anyway.

Lions at Buccaneers - Every time I doubt the Lions, they surprise me. Then again, so have the Bucs. I still think that Detroit just isn't that good and Tampa Bay has an excellent defense. I look for the Bucs to win it in a close one.

Cardinals at Redskins - Even with Plummer playing the way he can, I don't think that the Cards are good enough as an overall team to beat the Redskins. This is one game I really don't like to pick as it can go either way, but I'll take Washington by a field goal.

Dolphins at Jets - It is disconcerting to see that the one good thing about the Jets this year, its defense, can get ripped apart like that. The Jets always play the Dolphins tough, but I still think the Fins will come out on top.

Chargers at Seahawks - San Diego finally stopped its six-game losing streak, but they should probably start a new one as they go up to face the Seahawks, who are looking to break a two-game skid of their own.

Falcons at 49ers - Jeff Garcia of San Fran throws for over a quarter of a mile and they lose? That is because they're missing both starting cornerbacks to injury which makes a weak defense even more vulnerable. Believe it or not, I'll take the Dirty Birds over the Niners in this one.

Vikings at Chiefs - While K.C. has lost only once at home and even got a road win in Denver last week, they don't stack up pound for pound, athlete for athlete with the Vikings, who should probably steamroll them.

Broncos at Jaguars - Speaking of steamrollers, this looks to be another one as Jacksonville looks to avenge playoff losses a completely different team with the same name.

Raiders at Titans - The mercurial Raiders can give themselves great credibility with a win at Tennessee. Then again, I look at the smelly mess that the ex-Oilers layed against Baltimore and think, they can't do something that bad twice, can they?

Before a crowd of a couple hundred in Helfferich Hall this past Saturday, the UC Mens Basketball team picked up its first win of the season in a 75-69 win over Dickinson. It was an action packed night full of emotions and milestones.

Richie Barrett, a junior All-American scored his 1,000th career point early in the first half on, fittingly a three pointer that hit nothing but net. The game was halted briefly as Barrett threw the game ball to his relatives in the stands and had his photograph taken with Head Coach George White. He ended the game with 18 points, 15 rebounds, and 4 steals, all team highs.

Senior Chris Ciunci scored 9 points on 3 of 14 shooting, and electrified the crowd in the first half with a pair of back-to-back blocks.

Ursinus jumped out to a double-digit first half lead before the Devils came back, even taking the lead twice in the second half, only to see Ursinus pull away again just as they would gain and regain the lead. Dickinson was led by senior guard Wade Curry who scored 18 points including 3 of 6 from 3-point land.

Freshman center Dan Luciano made big contributions as he put in 11 points on 5 of 7 shooting. Junior point guard Luther Owens had what was described by Assistant Coach Greg Pierce as a "stellar floor game." He finished the night with 14 points, 5 assists and 3 steals. Other Bears that made heavy contributions included sophomore forwards Matt McCloskey and Brian Walsh and senior guard Rob Bishop all of whom shot 100% from the charity stripe. Walsh went 6 of 6, McCloskey 4 of 4 and Bishop 2 of 2. Their efforts brought the Bears free-throw shooting up to a respectable 70% compared to 64% for Dickinson.

Free throws are what won the game for Ursinus, as both the Bears and Devils made 22 field goal attempts. UC simply made ten more free throws and had 12 more attempts than DC.

The Bears are currently 1-2 with a 1-0 record in the Centennial Conference. They face CC foe Haverford here at home on Tuesday at 8:00 PM. Dickinson drops to 1-3 after the loss.

In a Centennial Conference dual meet, the Ursinus swim teams took on Dickinson on Saturday, December 4. Although keeping a positive attitude throughout, the women's team fell by a score of 139 to 46, while the men lost 129 to 42.

For the women, sophomore captain Lindsay Glah had a stellar day, taking home first place in the 500 freestyle with a time of 5:36.02. Glah also finished second in the 200 butterfly, clocking in at 2:24.87.

Freshman Jen Tate was also a major driving force for the Bears, finishing second in the 100 freestyle (58.20) and third in the 50 freestyle (26.70).

On the men's side, sophomore captain Pete "Wayne" Druckenmiller racked up a first place finish in the 200 breaststroke (2:25.49) and a second place time in the 200 individual medley (2:12.12.)

Druckenmiller commented, "The team had a lot of fast swims. We all did really well as a team."

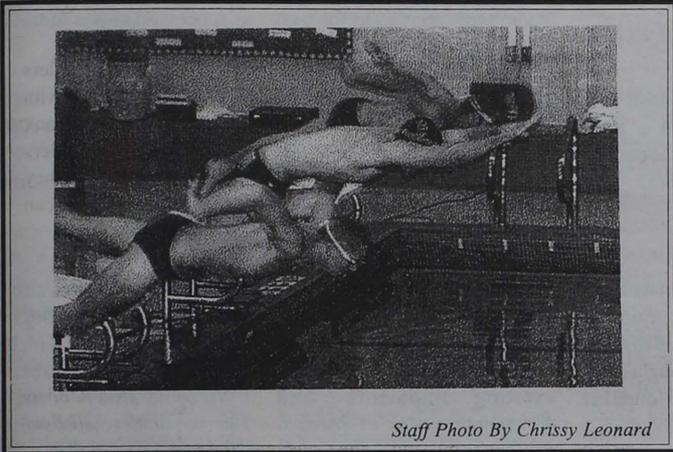

Demonstrating his great versatility, sophomore John Montgomery raced for second in both the 50 freestyle (23.70) and the 200 backstroke (2:13.27).

The men's relay team of sophomore Ryan Michaleski and freshman George Breuninger along with Druckenmiller and Montgomery finished second in the 400 freestyle relay with a time of 3:44.36.

Although only having a small break in practices, the Bears do not have their next meet until January 22 against Western Maryland. The UC teams will be practicing at the long-course pool at the University of Maryland from January 4-11. The Bears will then return to Ursinus and continue to practice in the Elliot pool until the 22nd.

Both Ursinus swim teams are currently 0-4 in conference competitions.

Seniors Remembered! Teammates Reflect on the Departing Upperclassmen

FOOTBALL:

Joe Nangle- aka j.t. nangstar
-Tim Coleman

"The seniors were the best!"
Anthony Ciarello: "He played his heart out every second of every minute of every game. He led purely by example. The future of this football team owes a lot to people of the likes of Belushi."
-Lyle Hemphill

Mike not only excelled while playing but more importantly was a great leader. He was a great role model for the underclassmen on the team. Joe was great to have in the huddle for the past 2 seasons. He kept everyone calm, especially myself. Through out this past season I would have went nuts a few times if it weren't for Joe.

All I can say is that next season it is going to be weird when walking down to practice and Mike isn't there, and when calling a play and Nangle is not in huddle. The team is going to miss their distinct personalities they brought.
-Frank Vecchio

The seniors brought the program to the level it should be at.
-Jason Wilson

Matt McCloskey, that kid can surely blaze it up with the best of them. That kid has a unique ability to use such tremendous power behind his blaze.
-Joe Nangle

One thing I remember, is how one of the coaches would call Ashton dough-nut boy, because Ashton, along with the other backers are all fat.
-Anthony Ciarello

I would like to say that if it wasn't for guys like Vecchio, Aston, Ciarello and Stauffer making me feel a part of the team and that I belonged I might have been like some of the other freshmen and quit. But, because of their leadership I developed a lot respect for them that kept me going throughout the season.

-Gerald Nicholls

I feel that the seniors provided a strong nucleus for the team and were the difference in many of the games this year. They provided leadership for the underclassmen and a strong foundation in which this program will be built in the years to come.

-Kory Stauffer

1) We could be the best athletes that Ursinus has every seen!

2) I rule!

3) My greatest thrill as an athlete at Ursinus was to steal the John Hopkins Blue Jay and light him on fire!

-Matt McCloskey

Anthony Ciarello was the most inspirational of the seniors. Battling through injuries, he never missed a practice and you could always here him yelling from the other side of the field to do our best. He would always be there to pick us up when we were down.

-Mike Deluca

I was a little worried about coming in as a freshman and didn't know how the guys were on the team. The seniors really made me feel like part of the family and made the freshmen experience a lot easier.

-Jonathan Craig

The seniors provided great leadership and a great family environment in my freshmen year of football. It was a great experience being around them.

-Brooks Reuter

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL:

This year our seniors offered great leadership. Colleen, Erin, and Becca always kept the team motivated to achieve our goals. This year was a great year on and off the court. The team really got along not just as teammates but as friends, and I feel that the seniors helped that happen.

-Becky Chilcoat

Becca Dickerson was a great player for four years, I think she played in almost every game of every match for four years. She is a versatile player and committed to team play rather than personal gain.

Colleen was also a great player who grew throughout her three years to be a great middle hitter/blocker. She was consistent in every game and an asset to the team.

-Erin Golembewski

The 3 seniors on our team were always positive and a great influence on and off the court. I think they made our team so close this year.

-Aki Watanuki

Becca was an outstanding outside hitter for our team this year. She's been moved to many different positions throughout her college career, but she found her niche this year. She had a powerful down-the-line hit that was unstoppable most of the time.

Colleen was critical in the middle blocker position. If she didn't block the ball completely, she at least got her hands on it and slowed it up enough for our defense to play it. She also had a very powerful hit that many teams couldn't handle.

Erin was the defensive leader. No matter where the ball was in the backrow, Erin was always right there, doing her best to get a hand on the ball. She was always alert, talking to the rest of the team, and keeping us together on the court.

-Jody Smith

Being the assistant volleyball coach this year I can say that our seniors were integral to our winning record and our debut in the playoffs for the first time in UC history. Erin Golembewski ended her career here with well over 1,000 digs which is an amazing feat.

Rebecca Dickerson was in the top ten in the Centennial conference every week of the season for her service ace percentage...she averaged (I believe) somewhere around 2 Aces per game. Colleen Reasor was key to our front line and our offense. She is graduating in 3 years from college and will be missed considering the fact that we could have her for one more year.

These three seniors have stuck through rebuilding years and some tough records in the past but they really pulled through to end their careers with a bang. They will be dearly missed.

-Dana DelleDonne

Coming into the young volleyball program here at Ursinus with Erin and Colleen has been an exciting adventure. We have watched this program improve together and it's sad to leave after 4 years playing together - wins and losses, exciting moments and disappointments, we've shared so many memories... I'm going to miss them and the rest of the team.

-Rebecca Dickerson

The seniors were very supportive throughout the year. Playing with them and being part of the team was a lot of fun. I think a lot of the reason why we did so good this year was because of the seniors. They were consistent and supportive. They led the team and they encouraged everyone. They were the backbone. Their experience pulled us together and kept us together. It was a great season.
-Katie Shearer

WOMEN'S SOCCER:

I must comment Stacie Dennery. She was amazing. She was a great role model and her job as captain went far beyond the field. She honestly didn't get enough credit for all her efforts. I'm glad my first experience on a college sports team had a captain like her. she was absolutely great.

-Kimberly Paulus

As a freshman, I was a little hesitant about the whole college experience and being on a new team, but the team (especially the seniors) was supportive and outgoing and made the whole atmosphere an enjoyable one.

-Jessica Hychalk

All three of the seniors have shown dedication to the soccer team throughout their four years here, and have been a huge part in making the team as successful as it is today.

-Molly Walsh

The seniors for women's soccer not only provided leadership and solid play on the field, but their personalities made it fun

-Abbey Smith

Stacy Dennery was a strong leader on and off the field. I always felt confident with her holding down left fullback.

We could always count on Terri to put the referee and the other team in their place. She helped set up many of our goals.

Carin battled with injury this season and still managed to knock down anyone that got in her way. She added a lot of variety to our passing game.

-Meyer, Kelly

FIELD HOCKEY:

Our lone senior, Steph Sundberg, was an excellent leader for the UC Field Hockey Team this year. As a freshman, Steph and the other upperclassmen served as a constant source of strength and encouragement both on the field and off of the field. I wish Steph nothing but the best in the future. Thanks for the memories!

-Sandra Fetterman

Steph was the only senior on our field hockey team, but she always stayed positive and played her hardest until the last second of every game.

-Liz Umbro
