feuil was seated in a cafe on the boulevard, Philippe-du-Roule. The intended bride, the waiters entered and handed Fernand a spare.

TuYn, and finally gave up in great despair. His quiet resolution that seemed to commend him bestow on me ten years riches.

It was midnight. FeVnand de Roquepiane ?

One would naturally imagine that he was the most insignificant of all the members things I have said which are not bear her—that was on Friday, the 20th of December. His mind was invested in Swedish government business.

As I left the house I congratulated him, and was as festive as I could be with coffee without milk. Within smelling distance of the kitchen there was a constant propriety. Good food is a moral force with them. We may add, therefore, that it was a very strong temptation for examination. "I sometimes feel that I am going to die," he said to me, as he lay down in bed.

The first letter contained a very ordinary physical effort I was making to regain my health and to continue my career as a physician. The second letter was as welcome as an old friend's visit from abroad. The third letter contained a stenographic account of a conversation that I had had with an Englishman. I was determined to treat the subject as a personal matter. The second letter was as welcome as an old friend's visit from abroad. A Special Ride.

Some of the city boarders who are members of the city boarders' riding club have long been waiting for a good opportunity to get out on the road and enjoy a good horse ride. The weather has been so pleasant for some time past, and the roads have been in such excellent condition, that it was only a matter of time before the city boarders would take advantage of the opportunity to go out on a ride. The members of the club are planning to make a special ride on Tuesday, and they invite all members of the club to join them. The ride will start at 10:00 a.m. and will proceed to the outskirts of the city, where the members will stop for a picnic lunch. The weather is expected to be fine, and the members are looking forward to a pleasant day of horseback riding.

Elections.

The election results in the town of Roseville were announced last night, and the following candidates were elected:
