May was in the street, running rapidly. She had been looking out of the window, waiting for her husband, but at last she saw him coming. She turned and ran to meet him, calling out, "Daddy, don't go!"

"But I must, my girl," he said sternly. "I can't stay here any longer."

"No, don't leave me," she pleaded, clinging to his arm. "Please, don't go!"

"I must," he repeated, pulling her away. "You must understand that I can't stay."

May burst into tears, and the tears ran down her face. She felt so lonely and unloved. She had been betrayed before, but this was different. This time it was her husband who had been unfaithful.

"Daddy, don't leave me," she cried again. "I can't bear it!"

Richard, her husband, turned to her, tears in his eyes. He held her close, and for the first time saw May's pathetic face, she cried out in tones of deepest sorrow. "Oh, May, don't leave me!"

"I have to," he said, gently pressing her tear-stained cheek against his own in mute sympathy, but could utter no word.

"But daddy, don't leave me," she cried, clinging to him. "I can't bear it!"

Richard's eyes unclosed, and with a stern smile he held out his hand to her. "It's too late, May," he said, "the change of position.

"Don't leave me!" she pleaded, her voice breaking. "I can't bear it!"

Richard, his heart weighed down with remorse, could offer no comfort. He only kissed her hand, and for the first time saw May's pathetic face, her tears streaming down her cheeks.

"Oh, thank God!" she uttered feverishly. "I wish I were free once more! I would have been more thoughtful; I ought to have been more careful."

Eva had been watching the whole scene from a distance, and now she stepped forward, determined to help May. "May, come over here!" And drop your head, and for the first time saw May's pathetic face, she cried out in tones of deepest sorrow. "Oh, May, don't leave me!"

"I have to," he said, gently pressing her tear-stained cheek against his own in mute sympathy, but could utter no word.

May was in the street, running rapidly. She had been looking out of the window, waiting for her husband, but at last she saw him coming. She turned and ran to meet him, calling out, "Daddy, don't go!"

"But I must, my girl," he said sternly. "I can't stay here any longer."

"No, don't leave me," she pleaded, clinging to his arm. "Please, don't go!"

"I must," he repeated, pulling her away. "You must understand that I can't stay."

May burst into tears, and the tears ran down her face. She felt so lonely and unloved. She had been betrayed before, but this was different. This time it was her husband who had been unfaithful.

"Daddy, don't leave me," she cried again. "I can't bear it!"

Richard, her husband, turned to her, tears in his eyes. He held her close, and for the first time saw May's pathetic face, she cried out in tones of deepest sorrow. "Oh, May, don't leave me!"

"I have to," he said, gently pressing her tear-stained cheek against his own in mute sympathy, but could utter no word. "It's too late, May," he said, "the change of position.

"Don't leave me!" she pleaded, her voice breaking. "I can't bear it!"

Richard's eyes unclosed, and with a stern smile he held out his hand to her. "It's too late, May," he said, "the change of position.

"Don't leave me!" she pleaded, her voice breaking. "I can't bear it!"

Richard, his heart weighed down with remorse, could offer no comfort. He only kissed her hand, and for the first time saw May's pathetic face, her tears streaming down her cheeks.
The President is unequivocally in favor of the bill, and manfully and practically sizes the President's letter to be the master."
Home Plates and Styro Spuds

From Abroad.

The humblest news hides the story of the day.

The Republican bureau having been in receipt of the Maine March newsletter, we are able to publish the following:

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Gaul and Miss Sallie Bower of the town have beard the news from Maine, that the State has ordered the immediate execution of Mr. Charles P. Hunt, convicted of murder. Mr. Gaul is a resident of the town for many years, and has always been a good neighbor.

The Register of Wills, J. W. Hunter, is the only one of the town to have their dressmaking machinery working. They have been supplying the town with clothes for years, and are better prepared to do so now than ever before.

Any others wishing to join the class of dressmakers will be welcomed. All are invited to visit the shop and see the new machines in action.

The Register's notice, by order of the Committee on Dressmaking, was published in the local paper.

---End---
EXPERIMENTS IN PERSODING

We have received Bulletin No. 2 of the Sheep Experiment Station, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., containing the results of experiments made to determine the estimated value of the wool from different kinds and lengths of this fibre. The work was performed in the laboratory of the Experiment Station, with a view to determining the nature of the wool from the sheep of the different breeds kept in the Experiment Station, and to test the methods for the determination thereof.

J. B. WISMER,
ROBERTS MACHINE WORKS,
IRONBRIDGE, PENNA.

The management having been in the Carriage Works for a number of years, we are acquainted with the requirements of the trade, and prepared for the experiment by a thorough knowledge of the same. Our works are well equipped with the best material used. The work will be done in a prompt and satisfactory manner.

W. L. CRATER,
PAPER HANGER.

JACOB TRIMLEY,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

The best material used.

The best grades of fine work, feels qualified to make the building materials in this district.

A. M. GREEN,
PRACTICING PHYSICIAN.

IRONBRIDGE, PENNA.

All the Best Grades of Working and Driving Men.

ROBERTS MACHINE WORKS,
Liberty Hall.

Surveys and Conveyances of Lands.

The management having been in the Carriage Works for over twenty years, we have a thorough knowledge of the trade.

J. W. MILLER,
CARPENTER AND GILDER.

J. W. MILLER,
CARPENTER AND GILDER.

J. W. MILLER,
CARPENTER AND GILDER.

J. W. MILLER,
CARPENTER AND GILDER.