The scene you see above gets right into the core of the action of the rehearsal for the Spring production. My Three Angels which will be given May 13 and 14 at 8:30 p.m. in the Kinney-Gay Gymnasium. The people in this picture are best known to you as Bill Montgomery, Jack Cranston, Al Frank (back row), and Diane Arna and Bob Engle (front row). On Friday and Saturday evening of May week-end they will be known to everyone else as entirely different people.

Case
Bill, Jack, and Al play the parts of the three "Angel" convicts Joseph, Alfred, and Zues respectively. Bill describes the character he portrays as "in charge of the whole situation... the organizer of the three cast members... the one who is "playboy and murderer" of the three "angels". Alf, Zues, but, tells us almost doesn't belong in prison, for he is philosophical and has a ready smile for everyone. Bill Montgomery, Al Frank and Jack Cranston.

There is no doubt that most of us are interested in current trends of advertising, and that in many in­ stances we are future predicted as times move to the standard of the American life. One of the few who place their confidence enumerate the number of den­ tists who have grown into a group of themselves to perfect the first. In one recent radio broad­ cast, it was seen that the number of dentists has grown to the point that in one instance there were 20 dentists for every 10,000 people. The number of dentists is not only growing in the United States but in many other countries as well. In Great Britain, for example, there are now 30 dentists for every 10,000 people.

The increase in the number of dentists is due partly to the fact that people are now more conscious of the importance of dental health. In the past, dental care was not a top priority for many people, and as a result, many individuals suffered from dental problems. However, as the importance of dental health is recognized, more people are becoming aware of the need to visit a dentist regularly.

Another factor contributing to the increase in the number of dentists is the advancement in dental technology. New procedures and techniques have been developed that allow dentists to provide more effective and efficient care to their patients. This has led to an increased demand for dental services, which in turn has led to an increase in the number of dentists.

While the increase in the number of dentists is good news for people seeking dental care, it also raises concerns about the quality of care. With more dentists, it may be more difficult to find a dentist who specializes in a particular area of dental care. It is important for people to research their options and find a dentist who is knowledgeable and experienced in the area of care they need.

In conclusion, the increase in the number of dentists is a positive development for people seeking dental care. However, it is important for patients to be aware of the options available to them and to find a dentist who is knowledgeable and experienced in the area of care they need.
