All About Enron: The Latest in the Enron Scandal

Fast-tight lipped about Enron

Sarah Elder
Grizzly A&E Co-Editor

Just like a cat with nine lives the Enron scandal refuses to die. Former chairman and CEO of Enron, Kenneth Lay declared that he would not testify at his own appointment to testify in front of the Senate on the day he was scheduled to testify. Monday February 4, Lay's spokeswoman told CNN that the CEO did not want to testify because he believed that some members of Congress had already made up their minds on whether or not he would testify. Apparently, as his spokeswoman told CNN, some members of Congress had already made up their minds on whether or not he would testify. Although he has been subpoenaed it does not mean that he must testify, only that he must appear before the committee that subpoenaed him.

He was scheduled to testify Monday February 4 but at the last moment decided not to testify. ROY BLACK, one of the lawyer's for the two men who refused to testify said Fastow headed a lot of part-

Because of the tendency of renters to build more lots on campus this will make life easier (or at least make it more bearable) for those of us who have to deal with the annoyance of pulling into his dorm's parking lot, even with the new ban on parking spots for the new, upperclassmen students who live in the Quad don't have cars on campus. Since a majority of the residents who live in the Quad don't have cars on campus any way, there were more cars on the road. In the 2005, the small Main Street lots is already overcrowded as well. I've often come home at night only to find that there are no empty spaces in the larger street cars to the of the larger parking area. They should be replacing the parking lots moving away from building parking lots. Women drinking while pregnant: Is that acceptable?

Jenny Matty

It’s the last call at the bar, and the bartender refuses to serve you a drink. Why? Because you can’t even legally drink without a stroller. You’re biggest ques­tion is, “What should I do?”

This is common situation, and it’s accepted by most bar-goers, so if a pregnant woman is seen at the bar? Should she be worried about serving her? Isn’t it the same type of thing? bartender may refuse to serve and even women at bars because of drinking policies. Another question is whether a bartender could be fired for refusing.

The Saturday night when I visited Brown’s in Plymouth Meeting, something caught my at­tention right away. It was not the wearing a tight dress, and it included a beer in one hand and cigarette in the other. It was a pregnant woman who appeared to be two glasses of something. However, when her "friend" started rubbing the woman’s stomach I knew the she was definitively pregnant. It was disgusting.

I had that a glance of wine here and there is acceptable for crying students who is preg­nant. That’s fine. But a woman who is wearing a tight red dress, obviouslykoncious and coming around the bar like she had just turned 21 is a little out of place to me.

And I wasn’t the only one who noticed. Everyone in the vicinity of the pregnant woman was staring at her, whispering to one an­other. It was ridiculouis, and really wor­ry for her. You would imagine that her friends would say something to her, but all I could hear was the noise of the bar. At one point I was stand­ing near her, and I saw that her right hand was above her head. It was obvious her friends were drinking and dancing right along with her.

As I walked down the street, I saw that the pregnant woman was slurred and slightly intoxicated. She was staring (yes, I stared at her almost the whole night) and there was no one who noticed or reacted. I heard nothing.

I wanted to question why she was drinking while pregnant, but if she was, that’s her business. I just hope she doesn’t think the practice is acceptable.

New Dance Studio missing one thing: Dancers

Alex Lintzinger

Have you ever seen anyone signing up for a new dance studio? Heard that they have Step classes, kickboxing, and aerobics but no dance classes? Do you think it’s weird?

I have been dating for many years and of course I wanted to try new free studio for some practicing on my own. So, after some asking around I found myself in the Broad Street. I was extremely happy and we worked out a way for me to move from the studio when needed. I found there were no dance classes.

Imagine that! A dance class in a new studio.

I thought there was no movement being made on campus to promote the arts. Instead the room has been made to entertain those who would participate in a full-time dance program. How can I change this?

Did the administration actually think that with building a space of the art dance studio with a suspended hardwood floor, and an excellent sound system for women who wanted to dance in it? I ended up locked in the old dance studio and proceeded to hold step aerobics, yoga, kickboxing, and

God knows what else on that pro­gram there is that gorgeous stuff!

The room was made for dancing, yet often art dancers given the opportunity to use it. I would like to question why the room was even built then? I thought there was a movement being made on campus to promote the arts. Instead the room has been made to entertain those who would participate in a full-time dance program. How can I change this?

Would it be possible to open a multipurpose room? Then the students could have access to the floor and mirrors and not be required in the arts by offering a dance studio which currently bears little dancing.

Is the Bookstore slighting us?

Katie Potenza

You can get a used Plant Physiol­ogy book at the bookstore for only $80.25, plus you need the laboratory manual, which costs $44.00. Morphology of Plants & Fungi is $107.00 instead. If covered in a lab, you have to buy both books (total $145), ranging from a low $32.25 to $100.00 making almost $90.00 of­­f­er. If this sounds ridiculous to you, don’t worry—you are not alone.

Senator after senator, stu­dents are found to visit the cam­pus bookstore. Nearly does not only have one visit costing $31.25 ex­ceeds Ursinus College, but then they also get paid for the sale of books and other materials school accessories that can be found in the bookstore. Half of the professors rely on books that you used?

But that’s not even the biggest complaint. An Ursinus sophomore said that although she thinks the people in the bookstore are very friendly and helpful, she thinks their prices are ridiculous. For a book, and then return it for so little. The thing that seems to bother most students, on this campus, as well as others, is the process of buying books and selling books back at the end of the semester.

Everyone, myself in­cluded, seems to complain that the bookstore is ripping us off and that we deserve more money for the books we sell back. A Villanova senior контенчел, “We can sell some books back—but the money sucks.”

I should ask that $50.00 for a book, only believable to sell back at the end of the semester? And then there are books that you can’t even sell back, because they are not going to be used again next year. I always seem to buy three new books, which seems like you get the short end of the stick.

But if you really think about it, returning things in this fashion is not a common trend. Typically you cannot purchase a good, less than a drink, then use it for a couple weeks, and decide with that I’ll act change for some cash. Although, that certainly could not be a future. Sometimes it seems like they rip you off—they change the book, so you get nothing. Sometimes you get hooked up too. So, on the whole, it’s a very average, I guess.” said a Drexel student. The bookstore allows us to make some money off our books, and for that we should be grateful.

Looking on the bright side, if you’re selling back books—that means the semester is over. So save your $31.34, pick up a case of Natty and­ let the bookstore that you to a night of fun. I’ll be happy now, because the loans you’ll have in the future are more expensive than any book, new or used. Ah, college.
It's the home of the cheese steak, Beethoven Row, the liberty bell, and Ben Franklin. But what you might not know is that Philadelphia is also the home of Jamie Kennedy, film star and host of the hit new reality show, "The Jamie Kennedy Experiment." Kennedy, dressed in a Tommy Hilfiger shirt, ruffled jeans, and sunglasses sitting atop his head said that since he was in high school he wanted to be an actor. Growing up in Upper Darby, Kennedy did regular teenage things and even had a job delivering pizzas. He says breaking into film business out of it and doing an entrepreneurial thing. He figures he would probably be doing, but in his own words is, "I love pizza."

Kennedy loved and still does love pizza so much that he thought about trying to make a business out of it and doing an entrepreneurial thing. He figures that if he wasn't acting that is what he would probably be doing, but he really knows he wants to keep acting and maybe someday eventually produce a film.

When Kennedy made the decision to go into acting he said that wasn't the normal thing to be an actor and that people gave him weird looks. After high school he went to Delaware Community College where he took four courses, math, English, cooking, and acting. He took cooking because he liked to cook and thought maybe he might be a chef.

It was his acting course though that inspired him to go onto bigger and better things. "I took acting and really liked it. People always thought I was funny," said Kennedy. Kennedy was so good at acting that he got a 9 in his acting class and was encouraged to go on to Los Angeles to pursue his career. Kennedy marks this move to L.A. as one of the turning points in his career. "You can't talk to people there (L.A.) like you dress like Pamela Anderson. It's like going to candyland. It's everything. It's different. It's exciting. There are 400-year-old guys on skateboards," said Kennedy with a smile.

But while L.A. seemed like the land of opportunity Kennedy wasn't totally blown into the business for a couple of years. He struggled for about 5 years and things were really tough, but he stuck with it and it ended up being his own show. The start of Kennedy's acting career came when he got a role as an extra in Dead Poet's Society. "Dead Poet's Society was the birth of me knowing I could do it," said Kennedy. After "Dead Poet's Society" Kennedy got his big movies with his Ronon and Cal, which he considers to be his first real movie. After "Ronon and Cal," Kennedy put a break in his role of Randy Mink in the Universal movie, "Scram!" and then eventually "Scream 2." But the action didn't stop there for Kennedy he was also in "As Good As It Gets." with Jack Nicholson, "Three Kings" about the Persian Gulf War, which starred George Clooney and Mark Wahlberg and there were many more, "Beverly Room," "Even of the Static," and "Bowfinger" just to name a few.

Kennedy has starred in many great movies with big stars like Clooney, Will Smith, Gene Hackman, and Jamie Fox. While Kennedy has had an impressive film record it was his show, "The Jamie Kennedy Experiment," that he was extremely eager to talk about. "The Jamie Kennedy Experiment" is his own show. "A cross between candid camera and mad TV." He said that some of his ideas for the show were created through the influence of the Jerky Boys, Flip Wilson, and a mix of a lot of different things. It allows was slightly influenced by a documentary called "The Harvard Experiment." "The Jamie Kennedy Experiment" is a weekly half-hour comedy where Kennedy dressers up a variety of different characters to play practical jokes and pranks on unsuspecting participants. Some of the characters that Kennedy has created are his own and some are ones that he

The ripe job market of the past decades is now giving way to a less stable economy in which many graduates are facing longer job searches. For many, this means a delay in entering graduate school or taking a job.

Despite the "reality" of MTV's The Real World, the relinquishment and fashionable jobs with Arista Records do not assure the majority of members of the class of 2002 and Record unemployment rates and available positions in the American work force by the American history; we don't know it isn't in their academic pursuits.

The economic downturn and in a fertile job market. The economic downturn and the rise in the final three month rate is very upsetting. Do we care all that much about our economic strife. No one wants to get injured. Surely, all students that are important in history and booklets if it isn't in their academic pursuits.

Moreover, a typical student's day is filled with classes, seminars, extracurricular activities, and, of course, studying. Grades can make or break your college career, and students often find themselves working long hours to meet the demands of their studies. But the job market isn't the only reason for the increase in unemployment.

The rise in the final three month rate is in part due to the economic downturn. In recent years, many industries have struggled, and this has led to a decrease in job opportunities. Additionally, the globalization of the economy has made it more difficult for American workers to compete with workers in other countries who are willing to work for lower wages.

The Bears' key players were not able to find their rhythm in the first half, yet the team continued to play hard and did not allow any one player to dominate. In the second half, the Bears' defense stepped up and forced four turnovers, while the offense scored 17 points. The Bears' victory was a result of the team's hard work and dedication, as they fought back from a 10-point deficit.

In addition, the Bears' defense played a crucial role in the game. They held the Bearcats to just 38 points, while the offense scored 60 points. The bears' defense limited the Bearcats' shooting percentage and kept them from making big plays.

The Bears' win was a result of their hard work and dedication throughout the season. They played with a strong sense of teamwork and communicated well on the court.

The Bears' victory was a significant accomplishment, as they had been struggling in recent games. The win will give them confidence going forward and set the stage for a strong finish to the season.

The Bears' win was also important in terms of their conference standing. They are currently in fourth place in the conference standings and need to win their remaining games to secure a playoff spot.

Overall, the Bears' win was a well-deserved victory and a testament to their hard work and dedication. They should be proud of their accomplishment and continue to work hard to earn more victories.
