The rash that infected school children in at least seven states remains a mystery. Although the rash caused several school districts to momentarily close, and defined many parents and students, it seems to be more of an annoyance than a serious health problem.

Students in Pennsylvania, New York, West Virginia, Ohio, Oregon and Washington have contracted a rash, a low fever, followed by the outbreak of red. Similar to the mystery rash, children with chickenpox or measles could have spread the virus.

While scientists have yet to determine the cause of the rashes, experts say that the rash is harmless and not contagious.

Although a school district in Washington, D.C. has delayed the start of school due to the rash, many students were able to return to school.

The rash is not contagious, but parents are being advised to keep their children at home until the rash has gone away.

The class of medications called benzodiazepines, also known as the barbiturates, is a large and complex group of drugs that share some structural similarities and have similar effects on the body. These medications are prescribed to treat a wide range of conditions, including anxiety, muscle spasm, and seizures. Benzodiazepines are known for their sedative, hypnotic, and anxiolytic properties. They work by increasing the activity of a neurotransmitter in the brain called gamma-aminobutyric acid (GABA), which helps to calm the nervous system and reduce anxiety and muscle tension.

Benzodiazepines are commonly prescribed to treat anxiety disorders, including generalized anxiety disorder, social anxiety disorder, and post-traumatic stress disorder. They can also be used to treat alcohol withdrawal symptoms, seizures, and muscle spasms. However, the use of benzodiazepines can lead to dependence, sedation, and respiratory depression, especially when used in high doses or long term. Benzodiazepines are also associated with an increased risk of falls and accidental injuries, as well as reduced reaction time and judgment.

Despite their widespread use, benzodiazepines are not without risks. They can be addictive, and their use is often associated with the development of tolerance, dependence, and withdrawal symptoms. Benzodiazepines can also interact with a variety of other medications, leading to serious adverse effects. Therefore, it is important to use these medications only as directed by a healthcare provider and to follow their recommendations for tapering and discontinuing use.

In recent years, there has been growing concern about the overuse of benzodiazepines, particularly in older adults. Benzodiazepines can be particularly sedating in older adults, and their use in this population is often associated with an increased risk of falls, fractures, and hospitalization. Therefore, it is important to carefully consider the benefits and risks of using benzodiazepines in older adults and to use these medications only when necessary and for the shortest possible duration.

In conclusion, benzodiazepines are a valuable and important class of medications that can be effective in treating a wide range of conditions. However, their use must be carefully considered and monitored to minimize the risks associated with their use. Patients and healthcare providers must work together to ensure that these medications are used safely and effectively.

Did you watch the Olympics? Why or why not?

By Laura McCann '04

I watch the Winter Games. I'm always looking forward to seeing some pretty exciting events take place. I think that the Winter Games also bring a lot of international attention to certain sports that many Americans would never try. As a result, the Winter Games are always full of action and excitement.

By Kris Morrison '02

I didn't watch because I don't want to watch speed skating because it looks way too slow.

By Chuck, the mystery man '05

I watch the Winter Games. It's a great opportunity to see a lot of athletes from around the world compete in different events. I also enjoy watching the different cultural presentations that are included in the opening and closing ceremonies.
Experience the Beauty of Spring at The Philadelphia Flower Show

Sarah Fendel
Grizzly Arts & Entertainment

It's that time of year when Spring is in the air. The days get longer and warmer, and the flowers are beginning to bloom. But where? Show 2002 is a huge one at that.

Flowers in bloom? When? At the Philadelphia Flower Show 2002 held from March 3 through March 10 at the Pennsylvania Convention Center. During this special week in Philadelphia flowers of every type and variety will be in full bloom with the walls of the Convention Center.

The Flower Show is an annual event in Philadelphia, and a huge one at that. The Flower Show is considered to be a world premier indoor Flower Show due to the exceptional talent and design of the creators, often known as the exhibitors, of the event. There are over 52 major exhibitors at the event and three central flower displays. These exhibits spend a good deal of time careful handling and growing the flowers so that they will come into bloom just in time for the event.

The flowers displayed at the Flower Show are seen in early winter and then forced into bloom for early March. Some of the major exhibitors at the event are: Robertson's Flowers with the display, "Here Comes the Bride, and the Bridesmaid." This event features a bridal show, with models in wedding gowns who will parade along a runway surrounded by extraordinary arrangements that change daily.

Another major exhibit is Designs in Bloom, entitled "On Sacred Ground... A Celtic Creation." This exhibit features the ruins of a monastery covered in fog. This setting is the backdrop for a mythic Celtic wedding dedicated to saints, monks, hundreds of shamrock plants, heather, honeysuckle, and hibiscus. A spectacle.

Some of the flowers to decorate the interior of Victorian homes are hydrangea, delphiniums, red, white, and blue petunias, apples, and apples. Don't miss the kitchen of herbs and vegetables.

Another of the central features is the American Institute of Floral Designers (AIFD), entitled, "Do you see what I see?" The AIFD's display was done by 31 designers and 100 members who added to this huge exhibit.

The display features an Old World museum setting with cadolines, a piazza, and house. Chandeliers, decorated with garlands of lemon leaves, rosemary, and之战ed wood hang from the entry ways. There is also an iron sculpture which is decorated with flowers that help to symphonize music and light.

The Philadelphia Flower Show has to offer. There will also be specialists scheduled throughout the week. There will be a booth in a Garden Tea exhibit, which takes place in the center of the Tea House, and guests can enjoy delicious food and fine tea.

There will also be culinarian presentations held from March 3 through March 10 at 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. and Saturday, March 9 at 6:30 p.m.

Behind The Scenes Entertainment

Gosford Park; Don't Waste a Sunny Day Walking in This Park

Kelli Gray
Grizzly Arts & Entertainment

"Gosford Park" is a movie receiving a great deal of buzz, but do not waste your $8.00 on this movie.

Directed by the legendary Robert Altman, who won the Golden Globe this year for his direction in "Gosford Park," a film about a party with some crime involved.

Eileen Atkins, Bob Balaban, Alan Bates, Charles Dance, Stephen Fry, Michael Gambon, Richard E. Grant, Derek Jacobi, Kelly Macdonald, Helen Mirren, Jeremy Northam, Clive Owen, Ryan Phillippe, Kevin Scott Thomas, Maggie Smith, and Emily Watson star in the most English cast with some famous American actors.

The movie is your classic English murder mystery. There are guests and servants all involved and all are suspects in the murder.

This film is more a comedy than an dramatic film. Altman presents us with the usual self-indulgence, greed, arrogance, eccentricity, and class position.

"Gosford Park" begins in November 1932 when guests are invited to the house for a shooting party for the weekend. Each guest that arrives has their own servants, such as valets, maids, grooms, and servants, except for two guests. With all of the guests and the servants there are many characters with whom the characters in the film and it does not get very confusing at times. At the film begins, Alman shows you something about each character in the film. He mostly concentrates on the guests, but he does reveal some information about some of the servants.

Before the murder happens, Alman makes sure the audience knows information about every person who may be a suspect later on in the film.

When the murder occurs, the film has many characters, among the guests and servants who may be the murderer. A detective and police women show up to investigate the murder.

The detective is a very suspicious detective who misses key information, which is always picked up by the policeman. At least he is funny, but after a while it gets old and you start to lose interest.

At the end of the film you figure out who committed the murder and why they did. However, the murder victim is first poisoned by one person and then stabbed by another person. You then think that he or she really committed the murder and does not. The film never tells you if they charge anyone with the crime.

After I saw this movie, I was very upset that I wasted my $8.00 on this product. It was a waste of time, even fallen asleep during the film. I never fell asleep in a movie theater before but Alman put me to sleep.

There are too many characters to keep track of the movie. Some people think that Altman gives you enough information to distinguish the characters, but at the end I was still confused with some characters' faces. I did not even know what the characters' names were all the time.

I do not understand why this film was nominated for best film for the Oscars this year. Maybe I missed something when I fell asleep, but the other two hours were boring and did not keep my attention.

I thought maybe the reason I did not like the film was because of my age, but my brother felt it was one of the most boring films he has ever seen.

Looking for something new to do or just want a day off? Why not try the Philadelphia Flower Show?
Syreeta Dixon. Her angel tells her story by Adam Berzin. The play begins in the heavens. The angels are experiencing a revolution of strange happenings: the moon disappears and rainwater burns buildings and most of the people disappear from the city, and Marisol is left to try to find her way among the ruins. The angels arerevolutionary against God's laws. The story of a girl from the Bronx, Arrie Callahan, narrowly escapes being beaten to death in a golf club,"The Wizard of Oz." The opening on the subway, with the actors shaking as if they were actually on a train and learning every time the cars stopped, was convincing. As was the slow motion scene where Marisol finds her friend, Arrie Callahan and Alexis Howell both gave stunning performances in "Marisol." Their New York accents sounded very authentic. Drew Peterson also gave a great performance. He was very funny, and at some points he was so funny that it was amazing he did not laugh at himself.

The overall production was touching and thought provoking. I loved the way it made me think about those closest to me and how they are always there for me, just like Marisol, June, and Lenny stuck together in the disorder of the revolting angels.

"Marisol" was a fabulous triumph for the Ursinus College Theatre. I was certainly glad I did not miss this production.

Recently I watched The Wizard of Oz for the first time. I must admit I have always enjoyed the 1939 version of The Wizard of Oz. My favorite scene is looking at the film for the book and the adaptation differences.

Well, headed to the library and there is the viewing room to watch the film. Can I tell you how ridiculous it is? This is definitely a crazy world! Let's talk about how they thought the flying monkeys were scary and how the witch was actually frightening, when they were way more scared than us. I was watching and I expected to see more effects...

Did you ever wonder if you can see the kite that makes the pointed hat? Count Ozma or the Wizard? This was the part with the most problems, and how great memories those watching it had. It was by far the best film from the time, just not the same affective one.

I suppose it can still be held in the ranks of a classic, however, because of the fame it has received to the past. Everyone in this country has heard of The Wizard of Oz and practically everyone has seen it! (Apparently, I am an anomaly.)

So the Wizard of Oz should remain a topic. I am not sure what has happened and what is happening in the movie. Will enjoy the plot and how you.

The 2002 Olympics began with the lighting of the cel-ebrated torch. That flame traveled miles and miles across American soil in the exact path as the athletes participated in the 2002 Winter Olympics. The opening on the 2002 Sarajevo Winter Olympics was a part of the Summer Olympics. Kwan was one of the many athletes participating in the 2002 Olympics to carry the torch. Other USA citizenship documents, with a certified copy of a birth certificate are accepted. A visa is not required for a stay of up to 180 days. A tourist card, also known as a F.M.T., is available from the Mexican consular at U.S. border crossings. For those who wish to explore other cultures, visit the Parque De La Palapa on Friday night, starting at 3:30 p.m. Here you will be welcomed by locals and enjoy music and the good news—It's free.

Now if you are serious about your intellectual experiences overseas, take it as an evening of dance and music, with the Folkloral Ballet show the center of attention (the Blvd. Kukulkan Km 9, phone number 098-85-0999). The dinner is a typical Mexican buffet, so don't forget your Tupperware. The evening begins at 700 p.m., tickets prices start at $55 US.

As said, Cancun has something to offer for everyone, especially for those who want to explore a different culture and yet still want to have some fun. So visit the COCOCHONG located at Kukulcan Km 30 across the street from DABYDO. This place has souvenirs and several restaurants on the top of the tables and bar. Next if you are in the mood for disco, CHRISTINE is the place to go. Located in the Krystal Hotel on the Blvd. Kukulkan, this club is the grand dame of the disco scene, and put on an incredible lightshow. BUI BEWARE!!! If you party too hard while you are Cancun, remember you are subject to the laws of Mexico. An arrest or a serious accident in Cancun can not only ruin your spring break, but also result in a difficult legal medical situation. Sometimes, great interest are paid by your parents. Mexicans laws can impose high penalties for violation. My advice is to register with the US embassy consulate, which takes only a few minutes and may be invaluable in case of an emergency. The consular office in Cancun is located at the plaza Carlos III third level, No 102-332, Boulevard Kukulkan Km 8.5, zona hotelera. Phone 0222 is 098-62-92-5011 from the USA. The US consulate officials in Mexico, will you if you are arrested provide some information on Mexican legal system and form a list of Mexican attorneys, if they cannot arrange for Mexican officials to release you.

Special Announcement

Senior Captain Dan Jaskelewicz placed 7th in the 200-yard Breaststroke at Championship this weekend. The 400-yard freestyle was an exciting event for the UC team, as they set five swimmer-in-men and women combined. On the women's side, Augelli placed 1st in both the Preliminary and Finals rounds in a new personal best time of 2:18.50. Precopio placed 22nd in the same event.

During the last day of competition, freshman Alex Beatty started what was to be a streak of seven swimming events for the UC team by taking third place in the 100-yard breaststroke, placing 14th in the Preliminary round, later going on to capture 14th place in the consolation Finals round with a personal best time of 1:35.13. Victoria Barucco placed 7th in the 200-yard breaststroke, placing 13th in both the Preliminary and Finals rounds, with a personal best time of 2:29.45. In the women's 200-yard butterfly, Precopio placed 11th.
