All About Pneumonia.

Netter has written quite an exhaustive article on the subject of pneumonia in which he reviews the epidemic of that disease which have been recorded. He draws the following conclusions: Pneumonia is a contagious disease, and the essential germs can be communiperson to others brought in contact with him, but they can be transmitted also, as in the case of scarlet fever and measles, be conveyed in clothing and in many other articles such as are found in the sick room. They are diffusible in the air, but one must come within ten feet of a patient in order to be within range of infection.

The pneumonia germs are quite long lived. How they remain capable of doing their work has never been determined, but three years is set as the extreme limit. Pneumonia is "catching" at any time during its entire course, and even after recovery. Where a person is exposed to the disease and becomes infected by the germs of it, the first symptons, as a rule, appear between the fifth and seventh day; but exceptional cases are many, and an infected person may be taken down with the disease the second or third about with him for nearly three weeks before it breaks out.

A person who has once had the disease retains for years a liability to have other attacks, for the germs of it remain with him and may be found in his saliva. Hence, such a person is not only dangerous to himself, but to others with whom he is brought in immediate contact. It is held that this in part explains recurring epidemics in certain families, and, also, while the same person frequently suffers from severe attacks during his life-time. Considering the fact, now clearly evident, that pneumonia is a contagious disease, the proper precautions against infection, should of course, be taken. It is true that this disease is not nearly so contagious as the most of the other diseases of the same character, but it is enough so to warrant a certain amount of care. A patient ill with pneumonia need not be held so dangerous that a rigid quarantine must needs start, but a feller slips past her now be established, but those who are brought in contact with him should use a reasonable amount of cautionnot "take his breath," etc. Perfect husbands earnin' twelve shillin's a day ventilation is alike important to them and to the patient. Handkerchiefs and the like should be thoroughly disinfected, and if a "spit cup" is used, it should always contain some disinfectant 'Human natur' is liable to mistakes, to destroy the germs in the sputa .-

Mice Tails,

The following story in the Pittsburg Dispatch illustrated how much mice love their tails: In Norwich, Conn., the other night, a young lady set a mouse trap in her parlor—a trap that was like a diminutive railroad roundhouse, with arched doorways, and with a delicate little loop of steel under each doorsill to fly up and catch a mouse by the muzzle. The steel nooses snapped busily all night, and next morning the lady found five mice clinging in five of the inhospitable doorways, and, what was very mysterious to her, three other entrances. She puzzled her head long over the inscrutable problem. Why did three mice visit her trap over night and deliberately leave their tails behind them? But there was no answer to it. A very bright idea, however, flashed back to recover their tails, and in the gray dawn of the following day the young lady found three tailless mice dangling from the trap.

"Did you attend Dr. Bolus' lecture on 'What to do in Emergencies' last night?" asked Waterman of Rednasil, "I did indeed," answered Rednasil, "and got a valuable pointer."

"What did you learn?" "Why, he told us that when a man got bitten by a snake he should immediately drink a quart of whiskey.

An Instructive Lesson.

From the Philadelphia Times. Most of the Southern States now pension their actually dependent soldiers who wore the gray, and the number of dependents in the South furnishes an instructive lesson to the North. When it is remembered that close of the war; that it had no capital to aid in restoring its desolation; that it suffered ten years of even greater spoliation than war under the scourge of the carpet-baggers, that the opportunities for requited labor have been much less there than in the North, it is fair to assume that the proportion of actually dependent Southern soldiers would be vastly greater than in the rich, prosperous and rapidly-advancing loyal States. South Carolina furnished 62,000 soldiers to the armies of the South, and the survivors returned to homes of utter desolation when the war ended; but under a state law that proffers a pension to every actually dependent South Carolina soldier or his dependent widow, there are only 1,932 on the pension roll, and of that number soldiers' widows who became dependent in their old age. The lesson is certainly an instructive one in this age of the flagrant abuse of our national pension laws for the benefit of many whose

"Then," Dr. Brown-Sequard contin- lost. ued, "if into a man old or feeble the living cells of a young and vigorous being could be injected, why should be not vibrate in unison with this fresh life, which pervades him intimately?"

Twenty years ago Dr. Brown-Sequard advanced this view in a lecture before the Medical Faculty of Paris. Since then he has devoted himself to constant experiments on old animals.

On the 15th of last May, believing that he had arrived at a convincing proof of his view, he chose himself as the next subject for experiment. The latest searcher for the fountain of youth and the well-spring of life obtains his panacea in this way. He takes from young living animals, such as dogs and pigs, certain organs. These still palpitating, he casts into a mertar and brays. The triturated organs are then commingled with distilled water and the liquid filtered.

After this elixir was thoroughly clarfied Dr. Brown-Sequard administered to himself a cubic centimeter with an hypodermic syringe, just as morphine is injected.

The Doctor declares that the day following this experiment, after two injections of this vital essence, he felt himself transformed. Up to that time half an hour's work, standing up in his labratory, exhausted him.

Now, he declares that he can study three hours uninterruptedly without the least repose. His appetite has inthe least repose. His appetite has increased, his sleep is sweet and refreshing, his stomach performs its functions admirably, and his intellectual labor is performed with wonderful ease and clearness. His feelings, also, have become youthful.

He was so earnest in pleading for the tree that his wishes were respected.

The remarkable whiteness of the light houses, beacons and keepers' dwellings is thus explained: The material used is simply whitewash, and here is the United States Government formula for mixing a whitewash that, when properly made and applied, gives a white that does not easily wash or rub off: To ten parts of best freshly slacked lime add one part of the best bydraulic cement. Mix well with salt water and apply quite thin.

"If I gave you a pound of metal and ordered you to make the most of it, what kind of metal would you select?" asked a well known jeweler. "Gold, of course," was the prompt reply. "I'd prefer a pound of steel," said the jeweler, Next door to Independent office, 'and I'd have it made into hair springs for watches. A pound of such springs would sell for an even $140,000."

Benjamin Johnson, it is said, owns a farm in Rush Valley, U. T., upon which he has just discovered a mine of natural shoe blacking. An analysis of this peculiar material shows that it contains 16 per cent carbon, 34 per cent aluminum, and the remainder clay. When taken out the material is moist and soft, and when used as a shoe blacking produces a fine polish, which is not easily destroyed.

Some one has taken the trouble to find out how far a farmer has to walk to put in and attend forty acres of corn. Successful Edison.

In the world of Science Thomas A. Edison is perhaps the most practical living representative. He is now testing an apparatus at Bechtelsville Berks ore from other substances by means of a magnet, and thus far the tests have been quite satisfactory. The ore is ground in powerful crushers and then carried by buckets to a hopper, whence it runs in a thin stream near a powerful electro magnet, which diverts the ore into a separate stream allowing the dirt and other useless articles not attracted by the magnet, to flow away by

The alumni of the public schools of this township had their first anniversary on Saturday last. At about halfpast 5 o'clock on Saturday morning last the line of 12 or more carriages were seen moving towards Falls of French Creek, where the alumni in tended to spend a gala day; but their bright hopes were somewhat dampened when about three-fourths of their trip had been made, the rain began to descend in torrents, and continued so more or less, during the whole day. The party was very much disappointed and came to the conclusion that they will take a nice day the next time they visit Falls of French Creek.

Damaged Hay and Grain.

Reports from various sections of Eastern Pennsylvania indicate that considerable loss has been sustained by farmers on account of the present extraordinary season of wet weather. In many instances portions of both the hay and grain crops have been ruined. Perhaps the corn crop will be sufficiently in excess of the usual yield to cover the loss caused by damaged hay and Another Flood.

CAMPERS CLIMBING TREES TO ESCAPE THE DELUGE.

Another flood reigned Sunday night. The flood-gates overhead were opened wide, very wide, and the rain poured down for several hours. Monday morning the effects of the deluge were quite visible, and the big roads and by-roads were washed out of their usual shape at many places. Repeal of the Old Fence Law.

A MATTER OF GENERAL PUBLIC INTEREST. AN ACT

To repeal the first section of an act entitled "An act for regulating and maintaining of fences' passed Anno Domini one thousand seven hun-SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and

House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the the authority of the same, That so much of an act entitled "An act for the regulating and maintaining of fences" passed Anno Domini one thousand seven hundred, as reads as follows, namely, for preventing disputes and differences that may arise through the neglect or insufficiency of fences in this province and counties annexed, be it enacted that all corn fields and grounds kept for enclosures within the said province and counties annexed shall be well fenced with fence at least five feet high of suffifenced with fence at least five feet high of suffi-cient rail or logs and close at the bottom; and whosoever not having their grounds enclosed with sufficient fence as aforesaid, shall hurt, kill or do damage to any horse kine, sheep, hogs or Normal College, spent a few days in goats of any other persons, by hunting or driving them out of or from the said grounds, shall ing them out of or from the said grounds, shall Prof. A. L. Landis is spending his vacation thus far at the home of his parents near this place, sometimes parents near this place, sometimes superintending the work on the farm, and making good use of the spare time along the banks of the Perkiomen engaged in fishing—a pastime which the professor enjoys.

having any unruly horses, mares or cattle that are not to be kept off by such fences as afore-said, are ordered and shall be obliged to take effectual care to restrain the same from trespass-ing on their neighbor's enclosures," being the first section of the said act be and the same is hereby repealed.

The gist of the law which is repealed lies in these words: "All corn fields and grounds kept for enclosures within the said province and ounties annexed shall be well fenced with fence at least five feet high, of sufficient rail or logs, and close at the bottom; and, whosoever not having their grounds enclosed with sufficient fence as aforesaid, shall hurt, kill or do damage to any horse kino, sheep, hogs or goats of any other persons by hunting or driving them out of or from the said grounds, shall be liable to make discussion in the House, and this was the distinct understanding.

The effect of the Repeal is simply this: That the landowner must fence his own cattle in and not fence his neighbors' cattle out; if he does not see fit to make a fence along the road, any one driving cattle along the road must see that he keeps his cattle on the road, and out of the fields, or pay the damage for injury done. The repeal is plainly in the interest of the Montgomery county farmers, as it effectuates for the whole county, special laws enacted in the past for the benefit of various townships in the county, to-wit: The law to restrain cattle from running at large on the highway. The effect of the repeal of the fence law of 1700 is practically the same as the special township laws restrain ing cattle from running at large, that is, cattle on the highway must be in charge of some one who shall see to it that they do no damage to his neighbor's crops or fields.

On June 23, '85, an act was passed allowing each county to decide for itself by an election whether it desired this old law repealed or not. If I remember, Montgomery county decided largely in favor of Repeal. This act was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, as being special legislation, and hence the above General Repeal was passed by the last Legisla-C. T. K.

The cause is due to a surplus of grain food—overfeeding—and they will usually be found fat. A pullet may be collegeville,

PIGS THAT ARE OVER-FED. Swine are proverbially greedy; but it is the duty of the owner of an animal to control its natural habits when these are opposed to its well doing; so that the first thing to be done in feeding young pigs is to measure their feed judiciously. They should never have all they will eat. Only fattening swine should be so fed, and they would soon die from over-feeding if they were not killed. When a young pig chokes at the trough, squeals and falls over in a fit, it is over-fed; when it goes to the side of the stall, champs its jaws, foams to 12. at the mouth, and does nothing else than this, it has been over-fed, and in both cases it is suffering from congestion of the brain, due to indigestion and disturbed circulation. It is in a state of apoplexy and will probably die, anhow, but the others may be saved by at once reducing their feed to about one-fourth of what they have been getting. The prevalent paralysis of the hind limbs is caused by overfeeding by which the kidneys have been over-taxed and the nervous system of the lumbæ region (the loins) is disturbed. Thus the power of motion of the hind legs is lost. Recent experiments in feeding young pigs go to show that a pig of forty pounds needs no more food per day than two quarts of milk and four ounces of solid food. such as bran or oats and corn meal. On this allowance, gradually increased, pigs made a steady and healthful growth, while two others kept a pen by themselves, and suffered to gorge themselves, became stunted, stopped growing, and in the third week one was attacked by congestion of the brain and had to be starved out of it, losing fully two months' growth. When young pigs are weaned, they should be fed in shallow trough, from which they can take their food only slowly. A pint of milk and two ounces of boiled corn meal mixed with the milk will be enough for a daily ration the first week, and a gradual increase may be made, substituting raw meal, not exceeding the limit above mentioned for a six weeks' or eight weeks' old pig of the best kind, and less in ratio with a less weight. Over-feeding is the common bane of the pig .- American Agri-

CARE OF FOALS.

Every spring a great many colts are lost at foaling time or within a few days after either through gross carelessness and neglect, or lack of knowledge as to what should be done under certain circumstances. The following from the catalogue of an experienced horse breeder may be of value to many of our readers: "The following conditions should be closely observed-1st. The mare and colt must have a thoroughly dry place to lie on unless the mare foals late in warm summer weather. 2d. As soon as the colt stands and begins to run about the mare and suck freely, then the bowels must move freely. They ought to move within six or eight hours after birththis is imperative. The first excrement is very gummy, and is sometimes impossible for the colt to void it without assistance. The straining brings on inflamation of the bowels very rapidly. The outward indications of constipation are switching of the tail, pointing toward the flank with the nose, and uneasiness of the hind legs. I have found the safest plan is to make it a rule to inject each colt during the first half day of its life with about half a teacupful of raw linseed oil in a pint of warm castile soap suds, or warm molasses and cream, mixed half and half, will answer the purpose. If in great pain, it may be allayed by an injection of half a teaspoonful of laudanum in a teacup of warm water and outward applications of hot flannels or mustard and vinegar plasters, rubbed into the hair on the belly. Laudanum must not be given to a new born colt through the stomach unless the bowels are free and open.

We have known of many a foal being killed by an overdose of laudanum given internally for costiveness. Some do not seem to know how little of such medicine the stomach of a new born foal can stand. We have been bothered sometimes with scores in the new born foal, where the mares had been grained and gave more or richer milk than the colt could digest for the first few days. In such cases we would milk the mare a little three or four times a day until the colt got over the scours and gained sufficient strength to take full rations -National Horse Breeder.

It is very annoying to raise a flock of pullets until they are nearly a year old, and then, just at a time when eggs should be coming in, to have the pullets defer their duty as if they would never begin. Such pullets are usually as handsome as can be, in full health, well fed from the time it was a chick. but the food may be of a kind to promote fat and may be lacking in those elements that hasten growth and maturity. The proper way to raise pullets is to feed food not abounding in starch, and to keep them in exercise as much as you possibly
