The country changed last week in a significant and equal way that took the nation by surprise. The November mid-term elections took place on Tuesday and the results are in after several historic races.

All 435 House seats, 340 of 100 Senate seats and 36 state governorships were at stake with Republicans holding a six-seat edge in the House and Democrats controlling the Senate by a single seat.

Around the region, there were several important races that included the gubernatorial election in Pennsylvania and the vice-presidential contest, but the most controversial race in New Jersey pitted Democrats Forrester and Torricelli against the traditionally Republican governor and Senate majority leader, Democrat Lautenberg.

The Communication Campaigns

According to Philadelphia Inquirer polls, Ed Rendell was holding a 10-point edge over Lautenberg into Tuesday's election.

However, current voting trends have shown was that if Paul Forrester was to win, he would have to have at least 85 percent of the vote among non-voting Democrats on campus in the traditional Democratic areas of Western Pennsylvania, including Allegheny County. If he was not, Lautenberg would be the only candidate of the two to hold a lead. The region around the polling stations, the report claims that giving new life to the traditionally Democratic campus.

In the House and Senate elections, Democrats held a six-seat advantage in the House and took over control of the Senate. The end result is unusual: the party in the White House now controls Congress. Overall, the mid-term elections had it all: controversy, a newly elected governor and even voting booth problems in a local area.

The only problem that hasn't been surrounded by the media is the mandatory recount in Florida. No one seems to be complaining.

Well, you probably didn't miss it... Did you?

The Communication Campaigns

The most important election of the year was the governor's race in the state of Pennsylvania. Forrester of the Republican party faced off against Paul Lautenberg of the Democratic party in a contest that carried major implications for the future of the state.
Tartuffe: Simply Delicious

Dana Morgan

Tartuffe, a comedy written by the famous French playwright Moliere revived itself on Ursinus College Campus from November 6 through November 9 in Riter Center Theater. Scudder, Professor of Communication Studies and Theater directed the play. The Ursinus performance of Tartuffe was nothing short of delectable. Written during the French Revolution, "Tartuffe" was a play about religious hypocrisy that was peculiarly prevalent at that time.

"The play is about evil people whose weaknesses of people without posing as pious individuals," remarked sophomore Candace Thomas who played Marcel. Scudder decided to direct Tartuffe because "it was a choice [play] that would challenge the actors vocally and physically." Challenge the actors, he did.

The dialogue of Tartuffe was conceived of rhymed couplets, a technique rarely used by modern playwrights. Rhyme can sometimes become a distraction to an unaccustomed audience. Freshman Dan Warash who played Marius Laylay said, "I was nervous because I had to not stress the rhyming dialogue...some meaning can be lost in the process of getting the begins of miming right.

Thomas continued, "Just think about if you screw up a line, it's just lost. It's not like modern plays where every line is mimed and in mimetic style...occasionally there's a rhymed couplet in mimetic parameter. Not me!

Regrettably, the actors did a scrumptious job on keeping the rhymes bite-size. The best ob-

The time of dates, rushing, and thoughts of pledging have reached campus once again.

Every fall fraternities and sororities hold events where they invite new students to pledge. For those of you who don’t know, a dated is a semi-formal event that usually takes place a few weeks after the beginning of the fall semester.

Junior Jeremy Landis feels that fraternities do not offer enough classes being offered, but many students do not offer enough classes being offered. Many students here at Ursinus do not have a wide variety of classes being offered. According to Professor Jacobson, a dated event should be set up in their spring semester.

After looking through the class schedules for the spring semester, it was obvious that not many classes were appealing that was held off. Because it is not necessary to go to a different university to see a concert at the Ursinus with my Tau Sigma brothers, I decided to go to the concert.

The best way we can honor our veterans and give real meaning to Veterans Day—aside from ceremonies honoring their bravery and dedication to their values—is to be a nation of citizens who will fight for our country. I think that we can do this by voting, by being involved in political activism, and by being knowledgeable about the issues that affect our country.

The best way we can honor our veterans is to vote. We need to make sure that our voices are heard and that our interests are represented. By voting, we can have a say in the decisions that affect our country.

Homecoming:
A Different Opinion

Jalyn Nails

Grizzly Opinion

Homecoming was a weekend-long event filled with the biggest events of the year, including a tailgate, bands, tailgating of the returning students, the first date of the year, and fraternity and sorority spirit week.

An issue of the Grizzly released on October 24th contained an article about Homecoming that was written by a freshman with a pessimistic attitude. Reiter Homecoming 2002/A Blair are the flag, the author of this piece of writing is an example of an attitude. I can truthfully say that having the Homecoming is as fun as you want it to be. If you wake up in the morning, look out the window at the rain, and just assume that it’s going to be a bad day, than that is likely the result of your events. Most freshmen probably have come here with the assumption that homecoming is all about painting, people dancing on the dance floor, and the overall goal was to put on a great night of fun. Junior Kate Julian shows her feelings, “I think that dates are worth the money because they’re really good times, and it’s a nice change of scenery. I also like them because all my friends are there.”

Another aspect of dates is that since they are held in ball, there is plenty of space to enjoy the party. Senior Sarah Welth believed “Dates are great for the fact that unlike a party in house on campus when you can’t breathe because it’s so hot, there are lots of space to dance and talk to people.”

I asked a student if they had plans to get dressed, get off campus and have a great time dancing the night away. Senior Brooks Reiter commented “I never really get a chance to get dressed up here. It’s a good place of change of going off campus and to go to a concert.”

It seems to be that the general consensus of dates is that they are definitely worth the money. The fact that you have never been or were contemplating not going because of the cost, is one of the main reasons. Nothing seems more appealing than getting dressed up for night out with all of your friends and socializing. Hope to see you there!”

Ursinus students have been asking for a rock concert on campus for several years now, and on Saturday, Nov. 2, the Campus Activities Board (CAB) delivered by selling the band Everclear in Hershey Field Gym.

The show was a success, relatively, because while CAB didn’t make money from other activities in place to the $15,000 cost, the concert drew the highest audience for a CAB function in the past three years, with a crowd of 1,000 people.

Campus President Meghan Rooney, a junior, was pleased with the production and the turnout. According to Rooney, CAB would have liked to sell a few more tickets to help offset the cost of the show, but the overall goal was to put on a professional quality show, and to give students an opportunity to “enjoy reading or listening to their favorite band.”

Some students were left with just a few tickets to help offset the cost of the show, but the overall goal was to put on a professional quality show, and to give students an opportunity to “enjoy reading or listening to their favorite band.”

Students of Ursinus, it’s home time of year! That’s right, now is the time when everyone starts to get tired of classes and the same old parties on the weekend. But fortunately, this is also when everyone starts to get Dated and formal is held. We all know what it feels like once you have the time to be concentrating on finding something to wear. Guys, consider these more appealing options:

- For a tie, bringing the cost to Ursinus students and faculty for $15, and to the general public for $20. Total cost: $44.98.
- Front Pants for $19.99, you are set for a bell. Total cost: $44.98.
- If conservative is more your style, Target.com has a beautiful Georgette Dress for $30, if you're wearing the next time you go out, the most important thing is that doesn’t include makeup, snow, purse, or any other little thing you may need. If that costs a little expensive, Ralph Lauren has a beautiful Georgette Dress for $89.90, have you ever thought before about wearing a pair of black dress shoes and still look good, Target.com has a beautiful Georgette Dress for $128. Factor in the cost of a pair of shoes and lace up your favorite black heels.

Although he wasn’t one of the guys on stage to dance for the audience on stage to dance for the audience on stage, usually they are so worried about security that you didn’t even have the time to be concentrating on this.

“Don’t have any reason times when I’ve had to cancel practices because of this exams, or plays that these kids need to go to, and this is the first thing that is forgotten about because the colleges are making this happen. So we should be considered a priority,” said Dr. David.

The attendance for the show was around 100 people, all of whom were invited back by David for the Jazz Band Concert that Ursinus will be putting on in less than two weeks.

“If you come to a show, it’s going to be fun, you can enjoy it,” said David. “The walls are going to be on fire.”

David continued, “I’m trying to balance my artistic desires with music, in search for that one super magical performance,” said David. “It’s hard to plan a good program, however, when you’re dealing with a college that is not music-friendly. Everything in all the other classes is much more important than music, and I have to plan programs that can get things done on time, just so they are done.”

David would like to remind everyone about the upcoming performance of the Ursinus College Jazz Band on Saturday, November 23rd, at 8:00 p.m.

“Moneysworthier!” said David, “and it’s going to be hot.”

Metal detecting, professional se­crecy, and a massive stage con­sumed a third of the gymnasium when the Everclear concert took place in the First Union Center instead of Helfferich Hall.

The peak alternativist group un­terminated Ursinus students, as well as community members, on Satu­day, November 2. The Campus Activities Board sponsored the event, and nearly around 100 people attended. Tickets sold in advance for $15, and there was a $20 general public ticket. Everclear entered the music scene in the early nineties with their debut album World of Noise and their hit single “World of Noise.”

The band introduced another of the songs from their new album to the crowd. The first single off their album “Voila Driving’ Sister Mom,” was well received by the crowd. During the finale of “Rock Star,” the band invited members of the audience on stage to dance for them. Freshman Brian Gallian said, “I thought it was awesome, that they let the audience see so much. Usually they are so worried about security that you can’t even get near the band.”

After the show, several audi­ence members were lucky enough to receive autographs from the band, and an even luckier few has been given passes to join the band backstage for a meet and greet session, where autographs were signed, and glam gathered.

Although he wasn’t one of the first to receive a pass, freshman Carlo Picco said, “I’ve never really seen a band do something like that before. Usually you have to know someone to get into the meet but they were just giving out the passes to anyone.”

With the largest concert in Ursinus history over, students are left to wonder what’s next. “I hope another band comes here,” said freshman Sarah Shaw. “I’d rather see another concert than have some of the other activities on campus.”

Meet the Ladies of Suites 106 and 204

Reimert Suite 106

Imagine the typical common room in a Reimert suite: bland cinderblock walls, that cold floor with its ugly pattern and the dim overhead bulb that barely provides enough light with which to see. If, with a set budget, you could transform the room into however you wanted, whether it be with shelves, lamps, furniture, wall hangings, etc., what would you do?

Soon, suites 106 and 204 will find out. They have agreed to participate in "Swappin' Suits", the Grizzly's version of the popular television show, "Trading Spaces", on the Learning Channel. The show's premise is two sets of friends transforming a room in each other's house until the project is complete. The participants from Suite 106 are Junior Amanda Young and Sophomores Noelle Bolletino, Amanda Morris, Allison Rainey, Molly Alberts, Crystal McCarney and Marisa Rote.

When asked about what Suite 106 needs, Young replied, "Basically, we need curtains and shelves for our speakers for when we held parties." A few of the girls also expressed a desire for slipcovers because their common room is cluttered with various couches, chairs, and end tables. Young added, "Maybe, it would be good to organize the furniture in a better way." Rainey stated, "We need more wall lamps in the common room. Since we have a lot of blue, curtains [of the same color] would make sense, maybe red, because it is a sorority color."

The participants from Suite 204 are Juniors Joanne Barbieri, Catie Welsh and Alexis Howell; and Sophomores Ken Ferrar, Mary et Speror, Kristin Bell, Kelly Sullivan and Katie Bergan. Bergan complained, "The common room is really bare and mismatched. We don't really have any out in there." While she had specific suggestions, she felt the room needs a makeover. Sullivan's wishes include, "more light! And mirrors. Every suite walk into has mirrors. We should hold a party that matches the common room and slipcovers would be nice." Welsh said, "We're really excited that we get to redo the common room. We have been needing our letters [Alpha Sigma Nu] in the wall for a while." Barbieri added, "Yeah, curtains are a must. And we need a rug or a new coffee table."

The project will be getting under way soon. Stay tuned to find out how the final products turn out!
