Four Solos for 'Messiah' Concert Named

Tickets To Be Given Out:
Tomorrow; Students To Attend Rehearsals

The final rehearsals for the annual performance of Handel's Messiah to be given December 21st were announced this week by Dr. William Philip, director. Miss Ann Wilson, who has appeared with the chorus in former years, will sing the soprano part. Miss Ann Danzinger, still well-known in local church choirs, and William Hess, tenor, who sang here several years ago, and Paul Young, bass, soloists. Consultations with church choirs who wish to attend the performance should be given to Dr. Philip or Betty Fedler tomorrow night at 7:30 or Wednesday after rehearsal. Tickets will cost $1.30. Students who want to hear the recital are urged to attend the afternoon final rehearsal. Those who are not able to obtain special tickets December 3, or 4, also, can hear the chorus with an orchestra of Ursinus students supplemented with several men from the Philadelphia orchestra.

Student accompanists are Eise Quiblier, Jr., and Peggy Lichty. Vocal section directors are Ruth Foster, Junior, Constance Smith, Freshman, Jay Big '52, tenor, and Bill Van Horn '52, bass.

Ken Weisel '53, business manager of the music club is in charge of tickets.

Kizonas is New S. Pr. Class Prexy

Dick Kizonas '52 was elected vice-president of the Senior class in elections held last Tuesday afternoon. Kizonas, who was recently named president, is a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. The '52 senior class is one of the smallest in recent years.

Kizonas is a secretary of Beta Sigma.

WSGA Heats Plans For Student Union

Tom Davis '53 introduced the idea of a Student Union to the Women's Student council on Monday night. He explained that the union would be very complete in including residence halls, a snack bar, reception rooms, bowling alleys, a com form for students and faculty, and other activities. However, the suggestion was made that the Student Union is not a Girl's Dormitory fund.

The Senate voted to change the names of several people who are not able to be in co-operating with the idea. There is a lack of interest in the idea. The Senate also agreed that all members of the Daily and Weekly would help and support the idea.

Forum Speaker Says Religious Belief Implies Skeptical Aspect

Dr. G. Oded MacGregor, professor of philosophy at Bryn Mawr College, lectured on the topic, "The Skeptical Implications of Religious Belief," at the Forum Wednesday night. It was pointed out at the outset that the most fundamental question is that of a person's religious belief is determined by what he believes. Piety has thus become a form of reaction. Actually those who have a personal religious experience have found it coupled with deep question.

The doubt included in belief is constantly struggling to undermine the concept of the truth and in the struggle to find a method of dealing with the question. The real conflict in the structure of the problem is a matter of what is in the nature of religious belief. The question is whether or not there are any basis for it.

Often the members of the community who are not particularly religious people, or, on the other hand, those who are religious, have no basis for their belief. It is a question of the extent to which the belief is in the minds of the people who have a particular opinion. Dr. MacGregor continued.

Dr. MacGregor then put forth the example that "We dare give the student an answer to the question of what the meaning of life is."

On Television:

Dr. Paul Watterson, professor of English and religious education, is currently conducting a series of radio lessons in the University of Pennsylvania's "Course in Botany." The program is only fifteen minutes each week and will continue until February 1. It can be seen on WPRR Monday and Friday mornings from 11:15 to 11:30.

Student-Faculty Talents Presented

For Benefit of Campus Chest Fund

by Joanne Sherr '53

A capacity crowd attended the outstanding faculty show in the Thursday Day gymnasium on Friday evening. The audience watched with bated breath the football game between the students and the faculty and groaned in agony at the old play, only to react to the faculty's triumph. All were convinced that there was trickery behind the decision.

The charming cheerleaders, M. Lloyd Jones, Roger Stalter and William Parsons, led the wildly cheering fans in "appropriate" cheers.

Curtain Rises On Private Lives' Act Tomorrow Night

The Curtain opens the Ur- nus theatrical season this year with the first act of Private Lives by Noel Coward to be given tomorrow night at 7:30 in the TDG gym.

The plot is concerned with the couple, who are seated when they were a couple. They have married and they are both unhappy. They have been divorced for more than five years and each of them married again.

Joanne Sherr '53 talked about his experiences in Russia at the Student Senate meeting last Tuesday night in the TDG gym. Saporochenko was in Russia for a total of 17 years and escaped after the revolution was over. He is now a professor at Harvard University.

In speaking of the Russian political situation, Saporochenko felt that the country was being a prisoner of war in Germany. He believes that the Soviet regime will not long be satisfied with the regime and that the revolution will be sold in exile for political reasons.

East Is World Headache

It is the world's headaces, the east is fast becoming one of the worst. It is just as serious as communism, and is, as a matter of fact, intertwined with communism. From Suez to Peking, there is a tension atmosphere; the air has a sweet, crying smell, rather like a baby's diaper; it sometimes seems that the isolationists are right; that perhaps the world has risen to the occasion of its own defense.

The latest fashion trend for fall is the printed gingham, very new and chino, almost to the point of Marin style development in foot-war. Korea provides the stimulus for the mainstay among the world's tailors, who have been following international models. The Garbo hotly disputes this opinion, contending with a suggestion of her own that the femininity of a print should be accentuated; the complete femininity of the garment is more important. The Garbo's model of harmonized - colored print; the Guiding arm of American fashion is the pattern of the Ghita-Walnut.

If Collegeville Were In Korea. This Could Happen

By Dave Hallstrom '52

"If Collegeville were changed to Korea, such sights would have no effect on me.

"Breaking of food. I had an interest in finding if food, without cooking, was still possible. A short while after landing I met a Korean who sold every kind of food. He was an emigre from North Korea and, on asking if it was possible, for he had learned a little at the University of Korea. Many evenings we sat together, drank warm sake (rice wine) and talked about music. For he had been a violinist in a Korean orchestra and was familiar with most of the universal music of the world. I suddenly decided to stop visiting him one day after two of our guards told me that they had seen him strange a floating, last day and the evening of that day I had shared some of his music.

"Try was a member of an Engineer Light Equipment Company (the light equipment consisted of ten ton bulldozers, twenty-seven ton power shovels and assorted road graders plus other small vehicles) and told of the full conditions of battle in Korea. "Most of the units had no real idea of the location of the front line until they came under direct fire. For instance, our company was ordered to Collegeville from Incheon to straddle a pontoon bridge across a river there. We arrived, saw a navy marine company dug in along the river bank, but thought nothing of it and went out so he had began to break the positions and flooding them away. After losing several, we heard small arms fire and an hour back to the show was all that was about. Someone leaned over a fusillade and asked the marine there ever, all the shooting about? One marine yelled back. That is the front line, and you were in no man's land out on that river! At this every member of the company hit the ground, and as a matter of fact North Korean mortars across the river were very accurate (with their mortars) began to destroy the positions and flooding them away from the bridge!

"It was a try to be back on campus looking in a laboratory, rather than looking through the mud of a rainy Korean day.

"If Collegeville were changed to Korea, such sights had no effect on me.

East Stroudsburg Handed Initial Defeat By Belles

Marguerite Spencer Scores All of Ursins' Goals as the Local Team Wins J-2 for Third Victory of the Season

East Wednesday on the rain-soaked local field, the Ursins' Dramatist team dropped East Stroudsburg from the ranks of the undefeated by virtue of a 3-2 victory. The score was deadlocked at 2-2 when the teams took their positions to start the second half. A cloud then made the field even more muddy than the initial frame, and it appeared that the contest might well end in a tie. It was a wide game and well played by both teams.

Both teams were considerably handicapped by the rain and mud. The Ursins were in the lead throughout the game. The score was deadlocked at 2-2 when the teams took their positions to start the second half.
