JUST BY CHANCE.

A dry and the life of Isaac Harveys was spent within the "milking cow" which, in his own estimation, would have been made of the "black sheep" of his own family.

Old man Harvey was a very hard worker, and he always said that he had worked hard all his life. He was not a very wealthy man, but he was content with what he had.

One day, as he was sitting in his field, he saw a small boy coming towards him. The boy was carrying a horse which was attached to a plow.

"I'm sorry, sir," said the boy, "but I don't know where I'm going. I just left home and I don't know which way to go.

"Where is your home?" asked old man Harvey.

"It's a long way away," said the boy. "I've been walking for miles and I haven't seen anything like this place before.

"Come with me," said old man Harvey. "I'll take you to a place where you can rest your horse and get some food.

And so the boy followed old man Harvey, and he was very grateful for his kindness.

From then on, old man Harvey often helped children who were lost or in need. He was a kind and gentle man, and he always tried to do the right thing.

That was the end of the story of Isaac Harvey.
WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular correspondent.

Friday, August 6, 1869.

The large crowds which took part in the Editor's Day celebration at the National Bank of Pennsylvania, and the President's Day celebration at the Mechanics' Bank, were both impressive and significant.

The President's Day celebration at the Mechanics' Bank was a resounding success. The speeches given by the various speakers were well received by the audience, and the event was concluded with a grand banquet.

The Editor's Day celebration at the National Bank of Pennsylvania was also a great success. The speeches given by the various speakers were well received by the audience, and the event was concluded with a grand banquet.
