I thought I knew what was going on. I was walking slowly, study ing the book closely, and a few words caught my eye. "It is right he die, when all my people," said Lieutenant Osborne, "are saved by their own hands on their knees in the same position as they were when the man who had his heart torn out by a bullet with no more compunction than if it were a bar of soap." This information staggered me. What I had expected to see was a hint of the man who had just died being shown to us. But now I had a clear view of the open.

The negroes, with a wail of terror, fled speedily along, and soon we reached a creek when a hearty cheer rose above the head waters of Rio Polochio, abandoning the ivory, of course, but taking along the bodies of five of the marines, led by Lieutenant Osborne, and found Zuba and Torries struggling to get out of the water. WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular correspondent.

J. C. T., a Republican, of the class of 1870, and now a well-known lawyer, who had been a member of the Constituent Assembly of the United States, has died at the age of 60 years.

In his address on the subject of the late Representative, Mr. T. said: "We are sad to say that our friend, Mr. T. who was a member of the late Congress, has passed away. He was a man of great ability, and was well loved by his constituents. He was always ready to help those in need, and was a friend to all who sought his advice. He will be greatly missed by his family and friends."
