Family Day Celebrates Students' Second Home

Dear Moms & Dads,

Getting away from home is considered one of the most popular ranks of college students. However, on Family Day, home comes to campus instead.

Serving as an opportunity to reunite students with parents, siblings, and occasional pet, Family Day falls just a few weeks after the commencement of the first quarter of classes. The day of visitation gave USC students a chance to lower campus with their families and once that "four-year" challenge has been completed, it's an exploration of Collegewide to be held in the Schedule décided in the Fall Semester. Each group was able to attend the events and sporting events of their choice and book the booklet at the leisure. The on-campus schedules seemed to be greatly appreciated.

"They just seemed to put so much effort into everything," said one enthused college student. The Student Art Show allowed their talented participants to demonstrate hard work put off and provided a truly impressive presentation. Specific receptions and activities were planned by numerous organizations, and families had the opportunity to attend mass and worship services.

Serres Serves Students During Campus Emergencies

Steve Tamms

Student Emergency Response Volunteers, better known as SERV, is a student-run organization providing students with aid around the clock through the Grizzly Safety Office.

Working closely in conjunction with Campus Safety, SERV responds to all medical emergencies on campus, including those in Main Street and campus-owned housing. When called, SERV provides all basic life support services that an ambulance can provide, with the exception of transportation to the hospital.

The level of training is no exception. There is always one advisor on call at all times with PME or EMT certification and a local Emergency Response certification.

There is also a volunteer Scroll. Certification is necessary for observers.

SERV plays an important role in providing care to a diverse population on campus due to its location. All personnel information is kept confidential.

Students are required to call SERV whenever there is a medical problem on campus. If you have any questions, please contact your local Emergency Response officer or come to the police department.

People Want to Know the REAL Truth

Amanda Byrne

Remember DARRE? A lot of us like to sit through those classes back in grade school where we thought about the ways thingsought to be. We used to ask our parents, "What do they really mean by that? What do they really mean by "tomorrow"?"

A lot of us are now laughing at those kids for asking about "drugs" or something else that was too molesting for them to understand. But we know that a lot of people use tobacco products. They're not done with them yet, and some will never give up.

We know that the use of tobacco products is on the rise. We know that tobacco companies are using their marketing techniques to lure young people away from other products. But we need to understand that the tobacco companies are not just trying to sell products. They're trying to sell lifestyles. They're trying to sell dreams. They're trying to sell the promise of a new life.

We need to know the truth about tobacco. We need to know how tobacco companies are manipulating the public. We need to know how tobacco companies are targeting school children. We need to know how tobacco companies are using advertising to sell tobacco products. We need to know how tobacco companies are using social media to sell tobacco products. We need to know how tobacco companies are using celebrities to sell tobacco products.

In Memory of Johnny Cash

Country music legend Johnny Cash recently died at the age of 71 of complications due to diabetes. The music world mourned his passing on September 12, 2003. Cash, who was known for his deep, soulful voice and his unique blend of country, blues, and gospel music, left a lasting legacy that continues to inspire musicians today.

"A Boy Named Sue," for example, dealt with a father who was named after his mother's lover, a name he was forced to use because he was not told his own name by his father. Cash's most recent series of albums, "The American Recordings," earned him his first Grammy Award in 1994. Cash was presented with an award for his album "The Man Comes Around," which included his final studio album, "American Recordings," released in 2002.

Johnny Cash was a performer who was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1993. Despite his success, Cash remained humble and dedicated to his craft. He was known for his ability to connect with his audience and his willingness to share his personal struggles and experiences through his music.

Cash had battled against prostate cancer, which had spread to his bones and system, in recent years. New outlets have been reporting the impending death of Johnny Cash, and fans have been expressing their grief and love for the artist through social media and tributes.

According to ABC News, "Whether he's running on the beach or recording a new album, the legend lives on in the hearts and minds of his fans around the world." Cash's music continues to resonate with listeners today, and his impact on the music industry is immeasurable.

"If I ever take my last breath, if I ever meet death, I'll die knowing the memory of my songs will live on forever," Cash once said. "And that's all I ever wanted to do."
MOVIE REVIEWS:

Playwrighting Debut

"Wuthering Heights: Three Stars"

The cast was first-rate! Mr. Heath and Miss Cate, playing the parts of the two main characters, had the audience thinking they were the real thing. The sets were beautiful, especially the moors section. The moorland scene was quite realistic and the moors were well captured in the film. The costumes were also quite well done, especially the moorland period attire.

"Dickie Roberts: Former Child Star, Two Stars"

Dickie Roberts, played by an unknown child actor, was not quite up to the task. His dialogue was hammy and his acting was stiff. The scene where he meets his biological parents was particularly awful. The scenes in the amusement park were also not very convincing, with the exception of the ride where he meets his biological parents. The park was well designed, but the scenes inside the ride were not very well done. The ride itself was quite exciting, but the scenes outside the ride were not very well done.

"A Warm City"

I would be happy to dispel the stereotype of Britain as a cold and rainy nation. The past two years have been full of sunshine and warmth. "A Warm City" was an excellent film, with great performances from all of the actors. The film was shot entirely in the UK, and the actors did a great job of capturing the essence of British culture. The soundtrack was also very well done, with great songs by the main characters.

Fashionably Pregnant in Hollywood

Patrick Groat
Grizzly Guide Writer

Expecting anytime soon? With the amount of work students have, I wouldn't fathom it to be impossible to be able to balance the two lifestyles. But being pregnant these days it seems so fashionable. As usual, Hollywood leads the way. Reese Witherspoon is beautiful like Reese Witherspoon, Kate Hudson and Tori Brxon don’t wear their high heels. Even when these two fashionable moms aren’t sitting down the red carpet, they still pull off the frumpy, pregnant look with class and poise. The natural glow that these women are experiencing with all pregnant women, not just those who can afford facials and spa treatments. According to babycenter.com, many pregnant women appear radiant. The capillaries in the skin dilate under the influence of hormones and blood flow increases, heightening color. But being pregnant doesn’t have to involve big clothes that make you feel fat anymore. An expecting mother can now look sexy and trendy.

The Outhouse Revisited: A Review

Laura Piccetti
Grizzly Co-Editor in Chief

The late William T. Parsons, once the professor Emeritus of PennsylvaniaGerman Studies and the History of Ursinus College, wrote The Outhouse Revisited upon his retirement from the college in 1988. Only the older generations would remember the outhouse, the staple of farm life in mini Pennsylvania into the 1940s. For those who are unfamiliar with the term “outhouse,” perhaps you might recognize it by its other names, such as privy, com, outhouse, (the little house), and Schloss that the German translation of which will not be printed here).

The Pennsylvania German, whom Parsons devoted much of his life to studying, did not find crude humor about toilet functions to be dangerous, but a curse involving formation might cause eternal misery for the unfortunate speaker. The outhouse was a common source of humor. It was a place to contemplate life. Many were born in outhouses, and many died in them. Multitudes were injured or attacked by a wild life that made their way inside. Children were particularly fond of outhouses because of the privacy they provided them. The company of outhouses and dogs, were two forms of comfort in the coldest months. Some outhouses were built on the side of the road so drivers could relieve themselves.

When we visited the old outhouse on the campus of Ursinus College, it was filled with so much history that we were overwhelmed. The outhouse was built in 1853 and was used by the students of Ursinus College. The outhouse was situated behind the Main Dorm, and was a small, wooden building with a metal roof. The building was divided into two sections, one for men and one for women. The walls were made of wood and the floor was covered with dirt.

One of the most interesting things about the outhouse was the fact that it was built directly above a septic tank. This meant that all the waste from the outhouse was being collected underground. This was a common practice at the time, and was considered to be a good way to prevent the spread of diseases.

During the 19th century, outhouses were a common sight in rural areas. They were built close to the families' homes and were used by everyone in the household. The outhouses were often run by a pump, and would flush the waste into a septic tank or a cesspool.

One of the biggest challenges of using an outhouse was that they were often located far away from the house. This meant that people had to walk out to the outhouse in all kinds of weather.

Men’s Soccer: Continuing to Battle Against Tough Competition

This past week was a reassuring week started on Wednesday, September 16th, when the Men’s team took on Gwynedd Mercy College. The Bears allowed one goal but got the win, 2-0 in a game on Monday. Although the Men’s team lost, it was their best performance of the season against the best competition they have played. Throughout the first half, the flow of the game was quick and physical. It wasn’t until 4:53 was left in the second half that Eastern tallied a point. Ursinus then converted off of a rebound of Gwynedd’s defensive backs. Ursinus ended with 10 saves for the day.

Believe it or not sports fans, the Philadelphia Philles' winning run on the final week of the season with a real chance of being a part of the postseason. That's right! The Phillies!

For the first time in decades, the Phillies find themselves in a wild card battle that could result in them playing into October. The Phillies may not have even believed this is possible but it's the wheels soon fell off the bus.

Lou Demark and a rushing game, specifically talking about when he made the metaphor of punching us in the teeth.

The only thing beautiful about Ursinus started off the season with a real chance of being a part of the postseason. That's right! The Phillies!

Football: Albright's Adam Hubley ran the ball 25 times for 186 yards and even scored one touchdown. For the past two years, the Albright offense was a straight for the defense. We had no idea how fast (Kimberly) was, but we wanted to stick to our game plan and if that called for us to go right, we went forward.

Another day and one of the most notable was the pressure that came into play. The match from start to finish was on.

That would turn out to be one of the many obstacles Black's Bears offense from a big day.
