The Sprites, too, draw unwilling near; Don vene in congress, let us say, to hatch;
These nimble Sprites new strength all seem to
Who pluck and gather fire-wort, as they go.
A prayer; just like a magnet it appears.
Now, if it be, that one, at dead of night,
And, in the bargain, too, their fingers burn.
Than if themselves were asked the task to share,
If then, some drunken lout essay
And meanwhile take a drink, their thirst to slake.
But should one go his way on Duty's call;
And so they lag behind, just as they say;
And wanders as the Sprites flit to and fro;
Black oaths, come these from man or demon's
Shqnn thou all "eavés-dropping": don't you
