A Chock is not Cash Payment.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota just decided that interest in the currency must not be paid on the currency itself, and that no legal or implied right exists to the currency itself. This decision is based on the premise that the giving of a coin at a bank is not payment between the creditor and the debtor, but only as a convenience for the creditor.

The case involves a man who had paid off his debts with gold coins, and then sued to recover the coins when they were seized by the bank. The bank argued that it was not responsible for the coins, as they were not its property. The court ruled that the bank was liable for the coins, but that it was not responsible for the currency itself.

The decision is based on the premise that the giving of a coin at a bank is not payment between the creditor and the debtor, but only as a convenience for the creditor. The court held that the bank was liable for the coins, but that it was not responsible for the currency itself. This decision is in line with the long-standing legal principle that the bank is not responsible for the currency itself, but only for the coins that are used as payment.

The following remarks upon the prevention and cure of hog cholera were taken from the American Agriculturist and are worthy the consideration of all farmers. The best way for hog cholera to be prevented is by exhibiting the cause that would produce it. Avoid feeding baled hay, and unseasoned potato peel, from which the infection is likely to be more rapid than from the unseasoned. The best method of disinfecting the premises is by using hot water and lime, or by a thin solution of carbolic acid, using about one pound of the latter per 100 gallons of water. For the last, they would be disinfected by the same means.
